Everyone was sitting about in Fairyland that evening while the Fairy Queen was telling them of all the good news she had heard recently.

Some sat upon toadstools, some had mossy seats and some had dear old cozy stumps of trees to sit upon.

"I heard," said the Fairy Queen "that there were wonderful bird sanctuaries in one part of the country and that there were islands upon which these bird sanctuaries were placed.

"Many of the birds came to these islands, among them teals, mallards, blue bills, redheads and canvasbacks, laughing gulls and brown pelicans as well as herons and grackles.

"Societies which care for and protect birds are looking after these islands and the birds know they will be safe there and that no animals will be allowed who will destroy their eggs. It is a beautiful thing for the birds and it is a splendid piece of news.

"Another piece of interesting news I heard lately was that at a big contest rag dolls were voted as being the favorites. Many, many children voted as to their favorite kind of a doll.

"Many thought that the walking doll and the talking doll would be popular and so they were, but by far the most popular of all were rag dolls.

"Yes, the children voted that they liked old rag dolls they could love and fondle and they didn't care whether they were beautiful rag dolls or unusual rag dolls.

"I've always known how popular Allie Baa was and still is. She is the doll belonging to the little girl who is now a grown-up lady, and when children go to call on the grown-up lady, Allie Baa is at once loved by them above everything else the lady has.

"Oh, Allie Baa entertains so many children every year. They dress and undress her, and even though Allie's clothes are old-fashioned no one minds, for there is something about Allie's dear, lovable, huggable body and her sweet rag face that no child can resist.

"Another interesting bit of news I had to tell was that I heard that chickens could trace their ancestry back generation after generation.

"Yes, I heard that they are among the oldest of creatures known, for there were chickens in the world, almost three thousand years ago.

"But I don't suppose any of the chickens ever stop to think of their family tree and count back how great-great a grandfather one would be of several thousand years ago!

"And then I have heard recently of a splendid dog who dove into the water when it was frozen over and rescued a little girl who had walked over ice which was not strong enough.

"How many dog heroes there are in the world!"

"Oh, yes," said the Fairies, "dogs are so splendid. They are always doing wonderful things."

"That is so," the Fairy Queen continued, "for I heard of such splendid things about dogs, dogs who knew every sound of distress a child could make, dogs who cared nothing for their own safety but only for those they loved.

"Oh, yes, I could talk on, it would almost seem forever, about the dog heroes.

"But this little bit of news I thought was interesting, too. An elephant of today—splendid big creature—marched to a table made of bronze, some distance away, and put upon it a wreath of wild flowers in honor of the first elephant who had appeared in a circus in America upon that spot, many years before. The big elephant walked along with his circus keeper but they did not hurry. They took their time and all along the line of march everyone came out to see the elephant.

"After all, that was only natural. I wouldn't miss seeing an elephant, if I could, any time.

"Even though I'm the Fairy Queen with a magic wand an elephant to me is a rare treat to see—always and at all times."

And all the Fairies in Fairyland agreed with the Fairy Queen and they thanked her for telling them the news.

Springtime Millinery Features Straw Interworked In Colors

Piquant and vivacious for spring—the stray hat of many colors! The fashionable cocpose idea is finding a most charming interpretaton in hats of fine milan and pendaline straws interworked in multicolors. The very rainbow itself must have been intrigued into lending its tones and tints to milliners this season in order that they might carry out these lovely color schemes. Think of hand-sewing wee straw braids together almost as one would patch a quilt, or rather as the artist works a fine mosaic—well, that is just what is being done in the realm of exclusive millinery.

In order to appreciate the beauty of the hats shown in this picture, one must draw on their imagination as to their exquisite coloring. The first hat in the group is "a dream" of intermingled shades. The crown is of frosted pale-green felt encircled with a wide cuff of finest milan, rose, beige, blue and orchid sections sewed together in modernistic design.

Three or four pastel colors are interworked for the supple straw shown at the top to the right. There is an ombre ribbon frill doing service as a narrow brim, which, by the way, is a feature of ever so many of fashion's "Easter bonnets." A deft plait in the straw quills class this hat as a very exclusive model.

In the third hat of the group, to the left, the designer combines heavy faille silk with milan straw, working out a springlike color study of orchid with wood-violet.

Belting ribbon with straw forms the shapely hat below. It also carries a handsome ornament of rhinestones.

The hat to the right center combines folds of faille silk with straw, adding a faille brim and working the entire in a tailored way.

Just-arrived models from Paris reveal straw all-over embroidered in tiny conventional stitches, simulating a herringbone, also mottled tweed effect.

AIR MAIL FROM HERE IN OCTOBER

Beacon Lights Will Be Erected Every 15 Miles Along Route To Aid Night Flying

O. J. Miller, flying representative of the U. S. department of commerce, who was at Norton field last week announced that the authorized air mail line between Louisville and Cleveland via Columbus, will begin operation in October. The contract has been awarded to the Kasse Aircraft Co. of New York.

In addition to mail the company is permitted to carry passengers.

The department of commerce will erect and maintain beacon lights every 15 miles along the route for night flying.

In addition to the transcontinental route between New York and San Francisco, air mail lines now in operation include service between New York and Boston, Chicago and Dallas, San Diego and Seattle. Complete plans of the postmaster general's office involve a network of airways criss-crossing the entire country and connecting the capitals and important trade centers of every state.

OLD-FASHIONED WEATHER

The human race has become accustomed to assume that the general average of weather wavers as the decades pass, says Harper's Magazine. "Most middle-aged persons believe that 'the climate has changed since I was a child.' We all look back to those days when 'we always drove to grandpa's in a sleigh for Thanksgiving' or when 'winters were really snowy' or when 'spring used to begin in April.' Yet very detailed records for half a century over wide areas of our country completely disprove any such belief.

"Each year our journalists tell us once more about the disproof; each year elderly people repeat that the climate has changed. If you appeal to the weather men, they can hardly smile at your ignorance, for they are weary of it, knowing how useless the right answer is. If you insist, they will roll it off once more:

"'For fifty years there have been warm winters and cold winters, open winters and snowy winters; for the next fifty years there will be the same. Our Thanksgivings and Christmases are just as "old-fashioned" now as they used to be and as they ever will be. There is no evidence whatever that the climate has altered by the slightest fraction within the memory of persons now living.' But you doubt this. You know what you know."

The Double Deception

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON
Author of "For Freedom."

Before a week had passed, an unforseen circumstance occurred which hindered the rapid progress he was making. Bill Harvey, anxious to see Beatrice, arrived one day from the East, and was surprised to find Warren in the neighborhood. Beatrice had had practice in managing two young men at one time, and rather enjoyed the situation. One evening, Warren and Bill walked back to the village together.

"What is your game, Warren?" Bill asked, curiously. "You certainly aren't working for my interests now, are you?"

"No, I'm playing a game of my own," Warren answered shortly, not caring to tell his troubles to Bill. From then on, Bill regarded Warren as a serious rival, and Warren realized that he would have to conclude his business quickly if he expected to scare Mrs. Wentworth into making a confession of her past to him or Beatrice. He knew that if Beatrice should accept Bill Harvey, Mrs. Wentworth would be relieved as there would be no possible chance for a love affair between Warren and Beatrice. The next day, before Warren reached the house, he heard footsteps back of him. It was Bill Harvey.

"Are you a detective, Mr. Harvey?" Warren asked, laughing.

"No," Bill said shortly, and Warren knew that he was angry.

When they neared the Morgan home, Warren saw Mrs. Wentworth in the yard at the rear of the large house gathering some flowers. He instantly thought of a little scheme.

"Bill," he said. "I want to tell you something that will be of interest to you. Let us go around the house and sit down on that lawn seat, where we can talk without interruption.

"If Beatrice sees us, she will think we are crazy."

"Leave that to me," Warren said, not caring what Beatrice thought.

His object was to throw another scare into Mrs. Wentworth, who would probably try to overhear their conversation, thinking it concerned Beatrice. There was a large bush back of the green painted seat, which was covered by thick foliage. Warren listened intently until, by several little noises he had heard, he was convinced that Mrs. Wentworth was listening.

"Well, Bill, I've got some news for you," Warren announced.

"All right, out with it," growled Bill.

"Beatrice has promised to be my wife. See the pretty engagement ring I have bought for her." It really was the one he had purchased for Norma.

"Are you speaking the truth?" Bill demanded angrily.

"Sure. Ask Bea if you like. She told me she loved me, and I'd stake that against anything. Come on, now, and let's have it over with."

Then Bill lost his temper. He doubled up his fist, and aimed it at Warren's face. Warren ducked, wondering if this scene, following other strange happenings which had occurred during the last few days, would be more than Mrs. Wentworth could stand. He allowed Bill to deal some heavy blows, most of which he dodged, and finally being convinced that Mrs. Wentworth had no intention of making a confession yet, as he had heard no movement from the other side of the bushes and was confident that the woman was still there. He decided to change his tactics, as he was getting desperate to arrive at a satisfactory solution of the affair.

"Aw, cut it out Bill," he said. "We'll let Beatrice decide this right now. I will bring her out here, and she can speak for herself."

True to his word, he quickly entered the house, and soon came out again leading Beatrice by the hand. Warren caught a glimpse of a blue dress behind the bushes, but gave no sign that he had observed the eavesdropper.

"Beatrice, I have tried to convince this fellow that you are in love with me, but the conceited boy won't believe it. I told him you promised to be my wife, to come East with me, where we will go to housekeeping, but I can't get it into his head." Warren rattled on more nonsense than he had ever believed himself capable of just to prevent Beatrice from opening her mouth to deny it.

"Aw, shut up and give her a chance to—"

He got no further. Mrs. Wentworth's nerves had reached the breaking point. Warren had all he could do to conceal the smile trying to come to his face. Beatrice looked at the intruder haughtily, and would have walked away had not Mrs. Wentworth, herself, caught the girl by the arm forcing her to remain where she was.

"This has gone far enough," Mrs. Wentworth said, speaking very rapidly. She looked at Warren. "You say you are in love with this girl. It gives me much pain to know that this has happened, as such a marriage is impossible."

"Why, Mrs. Wentworth, why?" asked Warren, as though he did not even have a faint suspicion of what she was going to say.

"Because you are brother and sister," she said, seating herself on the bench and burying her face in her hands.

"Brother and sister," echoed Beatrice, who did not comprehend the situation.

"Let us go into the house, where Mr. Morgan can hear the story I have to tell, as I do not feel equal to repeating it twice," Mrs. Wentworth said.

The four people entered the house, and Beatrice went in search of Mr. Morgan. She found him in the room he now used for an office.

"Daddy," she said, "Mrs. Wentworth has something to say that she wants you to hear. I think she has gone crazy, myself. She tried to tell Warren Allison that he and I are brother and sister. That couldn't possibly be true, could it?"

"Of course not, but I will listen to what she has to say."

While Beatrice went to find Mr. Morgan, Warren handed Mrs. Wentworth the letter she had written many years before to Emily Bradford.

"Now they will send me to jail sure," she wailed. "Why did I ever do such a thing? My own daughter hates me. What thanks did I get. How has my act been of benefit to her?"

Mr. Morgan and Beatrice entered the room in time to hear Mrs. Wentworth say the words: "My own daughter hates me."

"What do you mean by that?" Mr. Morgan sternly demanded.

"Mr. Morgan, I have greatly wronged you and yours. Norma Wentworth, who was a servant in your house, was really your own daughter. The girl you have humored and raised is my child."

Beatrice at last saw the situation in its true light. How deeply humiliated she felt! Mr. Morgan questioned angrily:

"How and when did this happen, Madam?"

Mrs. Wentworth gave a detailed account of her plan to better her child's welfare.

"I was positive that your own child would not live, and wanted mine to have what I had missed in my life. When your child improved in health, I lacked the courage to right the wrong then; but how much better then than now! Oh! Oh!"

Mr. Morgan was thoroughly disgusted with the woman for having committed such an evil.

"Madam," he said angrily. I can never forgive this. To think of the life my own child has had in comparison with this kid of yours. I will find her and make up to her all she has suffered on your account. Now get out of my house, and stay out!" he thundered. "Go!" "And you," he added to Beatrice, "Get out of here. Don't let me see you again."

Beatrice cried piteously. "But, daddy"—she caught herself. Mr. Morgan, I mean, I couldn't help it. I didn't know what she was going to tell you until just now. Oh, please!"

"That doesn't matter to me in the least," the irate man said angrily. "I told you to go, and I meant what I said."

Beatrice, seeing that it was no use to argue, did as she was told. Bill Harvey, who, up to this time, had only been an onlooker to the strange scene, arose from his chair to accompany her, saying to Mr. Morgan before he left the room:

Mr. Morgan, you will be sorry that you have talked to her this way. She had no part to play in the deception, and knew no more about it than you did."

"That is enough, Mr. Harvey. She will have to go, so that my own daughter can come here to enjoy life in her father's home."

Beatrice had already reached the front porch, without a thought of taking her belongings with her, and Bill followed her. Mrs. Wentworth made a motion to Warren.

HERE AND THERE
By C. C. H.

"Out of sight, out of mind," is not the policy to follow as we read of the Mississippi flood. We too have had our experiences with rushing waters and can ably see how our contribution toward relief will be appreciated by the refugees.

• • • •

Our "old timers" seem to be among the colored gentry of the south. This is shown by the fact that an old colored lady while receiving aid during the flood asked for a petticoat to be used with a "modern" dress given her by a relief worker.

• • • •

Now that spring is here we have no need complaining for a while. We should be neither too cold nor too warm.

• • • •

Why not a clean-up summer for the Hilltop? Hilltop merchants can aid the issue greatly by keeping a clean store front and by destroying scattered papers. Let's clean up!

• • • •

The season for going over Niagara Falls in a barrel will soon be with us again.

• • • •

It is no longer always the man who pays in the divorce suit. A New York woman paid out over $4000 for her seperation and it was the husband who brought the charge and asked for the cash for a change.

• • • •

Prof. Tittle says: "If everyone had to write out their conversation there would be fewer fish stories cause they would have time to reason that they were lieing. Some people just can't help lieing when they talk."

• • • •

Emerson said: "The theory of books is noble. Books are written by thinkers" and its thinkers we want today. That's why people of the Hilltop are interested and contributing to the Holmes Hilltop Library. It's another commendable Hilltop spirit.

203 miles per hour! Some speed we calls it. Let's hold out hope of keeping our street speed limit as it is.

Chinese will no doubt be taught in our public schools if our relations in that country continue in their present capacity. Pity the poor marines.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

THIMBLE AT THE TABLE

If an unmarried woman places her thimble on the table when she sits down to eat it is a sign that she will be a widow if she marries. Some have it "she will be an old maid."

The thimble was anciently worn on the thumb and from the thumb it takes its name. Also the mystic qualities attached to it are due to its connection with the thumb in former times. And the mystic qualities of the thumb belong to the ancient "science" of chiromancy—palmistry is the common name for it—as practiced by the Chaldeans, the Egyptians, in fact all the early races of civilization as well as by the Romans. The idea of life and death also appears to have attached to the thumb for the "line of life" has its origin in the "mount of Venus" at the base of the thumb. Also there was the well-known signal of the Roman amphitheatre; thumbs up for life and thumbs down for death, in the case of the vanquished gladiator. From the dedication of the thumb to Venus we get the idea of love as connected with the thimble of the unmarried woman and the idea that if she brings her thimble to the table she will be a widow, has evidently to do with the thumb's connection with human life. Bringing the thimbe to the table is evidently a "thumbs down" signal for the future husband. Just why is not so evident unless we may suppose that removing the thimble and placing it on the table is symbolic of separation or sacrifice; or, perhaps, a part of some forgotten ritual having to do with the thumb. The old maid superstition with regard to the thimble has a like origin with the widow superstition of which it is merely a variant.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad and loving memory of our dear father, Michael Derrer, who died May 4, 1926.

We loved him, yes, we loved him.
But the angels loved him more.
And they have sweetly called him
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice said, come.
And with farewell unspoken
He calmly entered home.

None on earth can take his place,
Sadly missed by us all.

Hilltop Library Drive Gets Off With a Flying Start

Meeting of Solicitors Nets $300 of Desired Amount to Finance Institution.

Slogan: "Keep Kiddies Kontented"—Goal: $1 From Every Hilltop Family.

Great enthusiasm and pep was displayed by the solicitors at the Hilltop Library workers' meeting Monday evening at Hope Memorial church. Music and a few peppy talks served as an inspiration to the 75 Hilltoppers in attendance.

Present at the meeting were three students, each a student at one of the Hilltop schools, who told the works of the great value the students from these schools derive from the library.

Miss Margaret Kilpatrick, Miss Lois McCoy and Master Jack Duffy expressed in plain terms the use that is being made of the library by our Hilltop boys and girls.

A survey of one of the rooms at John Burroughs school disclosed the fact that more than 50 per cent of the students are using the Hilltop library to aid them in their school work.

One-third of the $1500 goal was pledged by those who are giving their time and talent to make the library drive a success. Surely you as a resident of this Hilltop community will help this cause by giving your bit.

The following letter has been placed at your door. The committee in charge of the drive hopes you have studied carefully the contents and will be ready Friday or Saturday to respond generously as you are called upon by the solicitors.

"The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio,
May 10, 1927.

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Hilltop and Fellow citizens:

"I, your Holmes Hilltop Library, take this opportunity of addressing myself to you personally.

"During the past year I have sent my books out on more than 44,000 visits, besides the thousands of Hilltop folks who have visited me in my home over the Hilltop bank.

"You know I feel that I was very fortunate to be placed among such responsive people. I like the way people have responded to my needs before and I have confidence that you, dear friend, will help me to carry on this coming year.

"I will need at least $1500 to carry out my plans for the coming year. I'm making it very easy for you to do your bit. Just put your subscription in the enclosed envelope, seal it and some one will call for it Friday or Saturday. If you want to pledge some for later payment you may use the enclosed blank.

"The Hilltop Record, which is delivered free to your door each week, has agreed to print the names of each and every subscriber to my cause. It will give special recognition to all who subscribe $5 or more. Try to get in the preferred class if you can, but by all means get in. Let's make them put on an extra edition.

"Just think what a dime from each visit I made last year would mean to me. Isn't it worth a dime to have good books so handy?

"May I expect a dollar or more from your home?

"Yours for a Better Hilltop,
"HOLMES HILLTOP LIBRARY."

One of the largest subscribers to the library fund is Mr. L. A. Holmes, who, although not a Hilltop resident, makes the substantial gift of $150.00 that the Hilltop youth may have access to good books.

HIGHLAND BEATS STARLING HIGH

Takes Extra Inning Game by Timely Hitting—Mound Next Opponent.

Highland went into a tie with Mound and Starling for second place in the Southern league, Monday, when they defeated Starling 2 to 1 in one of the best played junior high games of the season.

Randall pitched a good game and received almost faultless support from his buddies. Starling's lone run was a gift. With two down in the third and two on, Smith chose to make the long throw to first instead of an easy force out at second. A wide throw resulted and one run scampered across the plate.

Rile walked to start the fourth for Highland. Smith sacrificed him to second and Banning was safe on a fumble by the second baseman. Randall got a single and Rile tied the score. At the beginning of the eighth Rile hit a screeching double, and Smith followed by a single which brought in the winning run.

Batteries—Highland: Randall, Larkin; Starling: Bricker, Martin.

Mound will be the opponents in Friday's game at the Hospital diamond.

Miss Marguerite Huston, 57 N. Warren Ave., is convalescing at her home after an operation at Grant hospital.

$100 to Flood Sufferers

Through the courtesy of Manager George Pekras of the Rivoli theater a a collection was taken at each show on the evening of Saturday, April 30, at which time $56.42 was donated to the flood sufferers of the Mississippi valley. The Hilltop Business Men's Association supplemented this amount with sufficient funds to make $100 which was turned over to the Red Cross. Fred L. Snikberger made the appeal before the theater audiences for the funds.

Mrs. Simon Rowland (Ruth Mahenny) of Bucyrus, Ohio, has been pending a few days with her sisters Mrs. Frank R. Smith and Mrs. Elmer Barnhart at their home on Big Darby creek.

Group No. 10 of the Ladies' Aid society of Glenwood church will meet Thursday afternoon, May 12, at the home of Mrs. Shanely, 98 Eldon Ave. Mrs. Garrison and Mrs. Schofield will be assisting hostesses.

"COME OUT OF THE KITCHEN"

Highland 9A Graduating Class Play to be Given Friday, May 20th.

Friday evening, May 20, is the date set for the Highland 9A graduating class play, which will be presented in West Broad Street school auditorium. The play to be given this year is "Come Out of the Kitchen," a charming comedy in three acts. The play was a Broadway success and is an ambitious undertaking for junior high pupils. It deals with the vicissitudes of a Southern family that, due to poverty, are forced to leave their ancestral home to a wealthy northerner and become the servants in his household, a plot which leads to many amusing situations.

The two leading roles in the play are taken by Miss Arvene Lee, who plays the part of Miss Olivia Dungerfield, and Mr. Howard Monroe, as the wealthy Burton Crane, both capable young people. They are supported by the following cast of characters:

Elizabeth Dungerfield	Frances Minnameyer
Mrs. Falkener	Hildred Koger
Cora Falkener	Mary Morley
Amanda	Margaretta Rayburn
Thomas Lefferts	Richard Dorman
Solon Tucker	George Skipper
Paul Dungerfield	John Colburn
Charles Dungerfield	Edward Tonti
Randolph Weeks	Robert Nairn

The following faculty chairmen are assisting Miss Velma Moss, dramatic coach, in presenting the play: Miss Ruth Bachmeyer, property; Miss Helen O'Neill, advertising; Lean Brooks, stage manager, and T. N. Brown, business manager.

Miss Charlotte Yonts of Cincinnati, Ohio, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Atkins, 111 N. Oakley Ave.

Honors for practice during the month of April went to Dick Brooks and Joe Liles of the violin department at the Hilltop School of Music.

Dr. Colvin Talks

Dr. H. Leigh Colvin, chairman of the National Prohibition committee and noted authority on prohibition, spoke in Hope Memorial Presbyterian church on Sunday evening to a fine and appreciative audience.

He spoke on the question from a governmental standpoint, pointing out that one branch of our government had not been effectively used in the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and urged the alignment of those who believe the liquor traffic to be wrong, to cease voting with those who believe it to be right.

Dr. Colvin has been in the state for a week with the state chairman, assisting in special work, and has spoken in many parts of the state on this trip.

SUCCESSFUL YEAR FOR U. B.

Annual Volunteer Day Service at Burgess Avenue Church —Dedicate New Parsonage.

Next Sunday will mark another milestone in the financial history of the Burgess Avenue United Brethren church, when the members will voluntarily make their pledges toward the current budget and benevolences.

This financial year, closing May 29, has been the best in the history of the church and the members plan to make the coming year even better. Every loyal member will do his best to be present at these services, which are a part of the great denominational-wide simultaneous canvass of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ.

Plans are under way to dedicate the new parsonage on the sixth anniversary of the church, June 19, with Rev. J. H. Harris, D.D., conference superintendent, and Rev. E. B. White of Lancaster, Ohio, former pastor of the church, as the out of town speakers.

The Hilltop Child Conservation Circle announces a change in the May 12 children's party. The children's party and June picnic will be combined and held early in June, date to be announced later. This combined meeting will complete the year's work till September, when the new year's program will be ready.

SCOUTS HONOR COMMITTEEMAN

Troop 21 Has Pot Luck Supper for J. W. Montgomery—Plan for Summer Camp.

Honoring J. W. Montgomery, one of the troop committeemen of Boy Scout Troop 21, the scouts of this troop entertained with a pot luck supper at their headquarters last Friday night.

Mr. Montgomery leaves May 13 for Chicago, where he will take up a position with the Royal Indemnity Co. as chief inspector of buildings and boilers. He has been general inspector of boilers for the industrial commission of the state of Ohio. He has three sons, and each of these sons has been a member of the troop during scout age. Leon, the youngest son, is now a member of Troop 21.

Mr. Montgomery has been on the troop committee of Troop 21 for the past three years and has been very active in all troop activities, having gone on the trip with the troop to Washington, and almost every other camp trip for the past four years.

R. C. Kadel, scoutmaster of Troop 21, presented Mr. Montgomery with a a beautiful Shriner's pin, it being of platinum inset with four small diamonds, which was the gift of the scouts, officers and troop committeemen. Mr. Montgomery responded with a pleasing talk, touching upon some of the good times in the troop, and urging other "dads" to take up an active part in the troop work.

Plans for a summer camp were discussed generally, which camp it has been decided will be held in Ross county, near Chillicothe, on the site formerly used by Columbus Council of Scouts, known as Camp Say-A-Wis. A number of side trips to Ruckyford Caves, Cantor Caves, The Divide and many other places are under contemplation.

In order to work the troop up to a greater point of efficiency and to provide Tenderfoot Scouts to fill in for the large number of first-class scouts now in the troop, it has been decided to recruit five or six more scouts. Boys of scout age, 12 years or over, are invited to look over this troop.

West Broad P.-T. A. Elect New Officers

The West Broad Street Parent-Teacher Association held a very interesting meeting Friday afternoon, May 6. During the meeting the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Hubbard Jones.
Vice President—Miss Harriett Judd
Second Vice President—Mrs. D. L. McCready.
Secretary—Mrs. R. E. Hecker.
Treasurer—Miss Mabel Grau.
Representatives for Council—Mrs. S. C. Stewart, Mrs. James and Mrs. Donelower. Substitutes—Mrs. P. S. Roush and Mrs. Stanley Warman.

The following resolution was adopted by the association:

Whereas: Certain printed literature has fallen into the hands of some of our girls and boys of West Broad school which we deem very undesirable and unfit, and which tends to undermine the high morals which we as teachers and parents are striving to attain; therefore,

Be It Resolved: That we as members of the Parent-Teacher Association of West Broad Street school, ask the parents to be ever watchful as to what their children read and buy, and also ask the dealers to prohibit the selling of all papers and magazines of questionable reading to minors.

This is a very urgent appeal to every one who is interested in the morals of the future citizens of our community.

Sunday at Glenwood

Next Sunday will be a very unusual and interesting day at Glenwood church. In the morning Dr. Barber will use as his sermon topic, "Christ and America." As a special feature of this service Raymond Hall will read "A World's Heartache."

In the evening at 7:30, there will be a most interesting feature. Did you know that Glenwood church, probably the only church in Columbus, has in the Beginners' department of the Sunday school two sets of twins named Jean and Jane? The Beginners' department, with Mrs. E. W. Martindale in charge, and the kindergarten church in charge of Mrs. C. O. Irwin and Miss Alice King, will have the first part of the program. The twins will read together and the beginners and kindergarten church will sing "Jesus Wants Me for a Sunbeam."

This will be followed by a very beautiful pantomime, "The Patch of the Flowers," presented under direction of Mrs. F. K. Dickerson. The following primary children will take part:

Indian girl, Doril Lawyer; Indian boy, Billy Ferguson; Pilgrims, Elwood Lee, Jack Stewart, Ray Underwood, Jack Gesse; Child bride, Dorothy Hecker; child widow, Florence Shirkey, angel, Edith Myers; reader, Inez Buscher; flowers, Olive Watts, Mary Ford, Martha Ford, Betty Mitchell, Betty Hale, Jeap Massie, Jane Holmes, Carol Hemmerly and Dorothy Postle.

This part of the program will close with the song, "The World Children for Jesus" by the Primary department in charge of Miss Lowie Mitchell.

The following children, dressed in quaint foreign costumes, will take special parts:

Indian boy, Robby Michaelis; Japanese, Jean Fletcher; Eskimo, Irene Bender, and Child of the Islands, Sarah Gilliland.

A short sermon, "Christ and the World," will follow the prelude.

The prize for first place was $50, which will be used to purchase a picture for the winning high school. The award was made by the board of education.

Second position went to Miss Mary Gohl, South High school.

The fifth division of the Ladies' Aid society of Glenwood M. E. church will meet with Mrs. F. M. Taylor, 108 S. Richardson Ave., Thursday evening, May 12, at 8 o'clock.

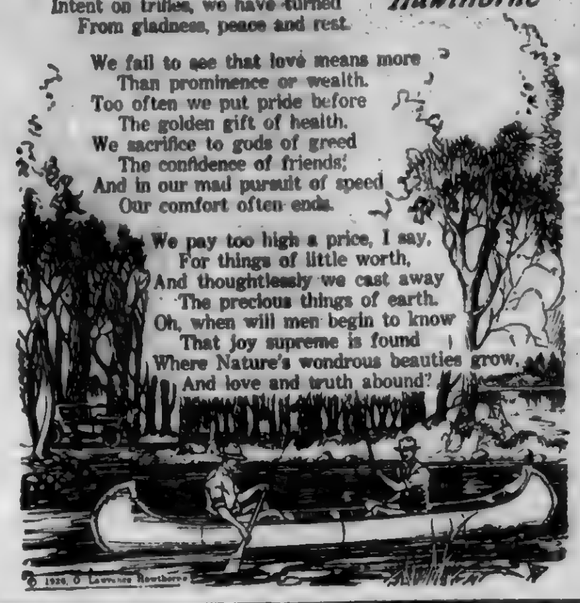
ENTHUSIASTIC OVER GLAD SHOW

Gives Point on Preparation of Soil and Care of Gladioli Plants.

How jolly it is to be an innocent listener at a flower show. Comments are heard on every side. "Did you ever see any flowers like these?" "Where did they all come from?" "Who grew them?" "Was it the commercial grower?" "No, these came from the garden of the amateur. The most beautiful specimens are often the result of the labor (and love) expended by the amateur—the person who may only grow a few of the choice ones—or maybe some of the very good common ones. He or she) is not handicapped with a large number of bulbs to care for—therefore is better able to give the best of care to those planted. Personal attention, coupled with the right kind of stock planted often produces better blooms than those grown by the commercial grower—who gets his flowers from the field where care, cultivation and fertilization must needs be made to cover many acres. Of course the person growing them on a large scale has many blooms to choose from, still the amateur very often comes forth with some single specimen which wins the prize over all. Flowers as a hobby are wonderful things. Most persons have one favorite in the flower world. Let us take one which in our case will be the Gladiolus. As a fascinating recreation there are few that give the pleasure derived from growing this wonderful flower. Just try a few and after they begin to bloom, I will wager that they will get you up just a little earlier in the morning, for you will be compelled to go to the garden to see what that big bed of yesterday has developed into, and if you don't watch your step, you will be late to your day's duties for the fascination of the garden and the plants therein will hold you to the last minute. Most persons "hanker" after growing things, they like the feel of good old mother earth on their hands in springtime, they want to watch the seeds and plants push their way out of the brown earth. True, some lose their enthusiasm for this when hot weather comes, but if we have some incentive, like a flower show, it helps to hold us to the task. If there is a show or exhibition of some sort near you get in on it and help to put it over. No doubt your friend and neighbor is growing something especial for that show and it may make you hustle if you want to get the first prize on that beautiful pink or red or whatever color it might be that you admire so much. Remember some of the old varieties are very hard to beat. I well remember one show when a spike of Mrs. Francis King was the best in the show and it was not such a small show either. Come on, you amateurs and bring your flowers. Plan your planting time so you will be sure to have blooms at the required time. Prepare the soil properly, plant good bulbs and then cultivate thoroughly, then cultivate again and again, for cultivation is really the secret of success. Don't plant all the bulbs at once, plan to have 10 days or two weeks between plantings for many things, which you can't control enter into the perfecting of the blooms as time. When the times comes for the Hilltop Show, bring your blooms, create a little friendly rivalry and get the "show spirit." You will get more kick for your time and money than you can imagine. Let's pull together and have a real amateur show. Don't take a back seat thinking that maybe the other fellow has a world beater. There are many standard varieties that are game old show flowers and are only willing to take a back seat when they have to, but they are from Missouri and have to be shown.

Come on! Plan, play and have a good time at the Hilltop Show. We will meet you there. "Glad" Fans.

In 1922 the Federal Trade Commission was directed to report upon the aggregate wealth of the United States. The figures recently have been published. The value includes everything of pecuniary worth, and is estimated at $355,000,000,000. In 1913 the wealth of our land was $205,000,000,000. The increase in ten years, however, is not so great as it seems, for the purchasing value of a dollar has decreased in practically the same proportions, as the wealth has increased. "Taken as a whole, the houses and personal property of the country form the largest section of its total wealth, amounting to 25 per cent; and the farmers come next with 18 pe rcent as against 14 per cent for manufacturing and mining. The railroads and public utilities furnish 13 per cent; Government property amounts to $42,000,000,000."



We Pay Too High a Price

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

We often pay too high a price
For what men call success!
For pomp or fame, we offer twice
Its worth in happiness.
Too many of us have not learned
What things in life are best;
Intent on trifles, we have turned
From gladness, peace and rest.

We fail to see that love means more
Than prominence or wealth.
Too often we put pride before
The golden gift of health.
We sacrifice to gods of greed
The confidence of friends;
And in our mad pursuit of speed
Our comfort often ends.

We pay too high a price, I say,
For things of little worth,
And thoughtlessly we cast away
The precious things of earth.
Oh, when will men begin to know
That joy supreme is found
Where Nature's wondrous beauties grow,
And love and truth abound?

PRETTY SNAKE WEED

Billie Brownie came up to a pretty weed. The weed had leaves at its base, but its stems, and little branches from off the stems were without leaves.

At the tip of the little branches which went off from the stem was a pretty little yellow flower, looking a little bit like a daisy.

There were a number of these flowers and buds, though the weed seemed a delicate, dainty one, growing without many flowers, but just a few pretty little ones.

"You're so pretty a weed," said Billie Brownie, "or, perhaps I should call you a wild flower. As I like both weeds and wild flowers, I feel sure you will understand that I am not making a rude speech when I call you a weed—or when I call you a wild flower!

"I Have Something to Tell You, Said the Weed.

"And you're so nice the way you grow in poor ground and give off your sweet, cheery looks to places where many flowers do not care to grow.

"And you and your family are generous about staying around for a long, long time.

"I've seen some of you in the spring. I've seen some of you in the early [illegible]

"I've seen some of you in the late summer, I've seen some of you in the early fall and I've even seen some of you in the late fall."

"True," said the Weed. Quite, quite true. And I'm indeed glad that you admire us, for we're fond of our yellow flowers.

"We think they're bright and cheerful and we are devoted to yellow.

"It is our favorite color. Of course you may have guessed that!"

"To tell you the truth I did guess that," said Billie Brownie.

"I asked myself:

"'What do you suppose is the favorite color of these flowers, Billie Brownie?'

"And I told myself," Billie Brownie went on:

"'Yellow is the favorite color of these flowers.'

"I felt sure that my answer was correct, and now you have let me know that my answer was correct."

"I have something to tell you," said the Weed.

"I'm always glad to hear the news," grinned Billie Brownie.

"It is about my leaves," the Weed continued, "and my name. I don't believe you know my name do you?"

"I really don't," said Billie Brownie, "and I would very much like to know your name.

"One likes to speak to one's friends by name. And I'd like to tell them about you when I get back home, where the Fairies and the Elves and the Gnomes and the other Brownies are."

"Oh," said the Weed, " to think of having our news go to Fairyland!

"That is splendid, simply splendid; "What a great honor indeed."

"I am so delighted you feel that way about us," Billie Brownie said as he made a low bow. "We like to be liked just as every one does!

"And now, pray tell me the news about your leaves and you also promised to tell me your name."

"They are both connected. That is," the Weed explained, "my name is because of my leaves.

"I should really say 'our leaves,' for I am only one flower at the end of my own little stem-branch. Our leaves are clearly marked with purple veins (sometimes you will find one of the family without these markings, but it is rare) and these veins make the leaves have much the same markings as a snake-skin would have. And so we are called Rattle-Snake Weed, because of the markings in the leaves down by the ground, at the base of our plants. A pretty snake name, eh?"

Red and blue flowers look very different, but their hue is due to the same fundamental substance. For example, deep-red dahlias and blue cornflowers contain the same pigment, but the sap of the dahlias is acid and that of the cornflowers is alkaline. The degree of acidity or alkalinity of the sap determines the shade of the flower. Professor Robinson, the well-known English physiological chemist, who has done much investigation into the nature of this substance, has called the pigment or dye, "anthocyanin."

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

HUSBANDS AND FIRES

If a woman has good success in building fires she will get a good husband; if poor success she will get a lazy one.

This superstition is prevalent in Canada and some of the Western states and is found, also, in some parts of New England. It is a modern form of the age-old superstition with regard to the sacrificial fire. If the fire refused to burn up brightly upon the altar it was supposed to be a sign that the sacrifice was not acceptable to the gods, whereas a bright and lively flame was taken as an omen of divine ficial about the cardfiwy mrmfff bof approval. The Greeks were very sensitive about the burning of their sacrificial fires and if one seemed to be reluctant to burn they resorted to the expedient of the modern domestic and poured oil upon it, thereby forcing destinity as it were. Thus we get the idea of good luck and bad luck as told by the action of the fire.

It is certainly bad luck for a woman to have a lazy husband. But the restriction of the modern superstition to women with regard to marriage comes through the application of the idea to the torch of Hymen, the Greek god of marriage who was represented as a taller and more serious youth than Eros, the god of love, but like Eros carrying a flaming torch. In the Greek marriage processions lighted torches in imitation of the torch of Hymen were carried by the bride's mother and it was accounted a presage of bad luck to have one of them refuse to burn readily or go out.

Oh, Most Beautiful Chevrolet in Chevrolet History

When you compare the list prices of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet with those of other cars, the superiority of Chevrolet value is obvious; but not until you make a comparison of delivered prices do you get the full significance of Chevrolet value.

The difference between the list price and the delivered price of a motor car covers the charges that are made for handling, financing, insurance, etc. The financing charges of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation are the lowest available. Other handling charges are in proportion. Consequently, our delivered prices are even more amazing, in comparison, than the list prices!

The Double Deception

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON

"Bring them back to listen to the rest of my story," she said. "There is more to tell."

Mr. Morgan protested, but Warren, knowing that the girl the world knew as Beatrice Morgan, was his sister, wanted to give her a fair chance. He brought her back to the room again, and Mrs. Wentworth began her story.

"In my early girlhood, I was surrounded by every luxury heart could wish. My father, who was a wealthy man, educated me himself, at home, sending me to a finishing school for one year, only, to properly complete my education. While there, I met and promised to marry a young man to whom I had given my affection. As he was poor and of questionable parentage, I knew my father would object to the marriage, but I had always had my own way, and was determined to have it in this matter. We eloped before I returned home from school.

"When my father found it out, he was furious, and sent me away from home, telling me never to darken his doors again. This action would never have been taken, had it not been for the influence my foster brother had over my father. He was an adopted child a few years older than I, and I must say, had some ambitious schemes, himself. When my father was dying, this adopted son persuaded him to disinherit me, which left all of my father's fortune for him. I vowed then to get my revenge, some way," she looked at Mr. Morgan steadily, and added: "and I have had it. My own daughter has occupied the place I was denied. She has a better right to your possessions than you have Mr. Morgan, from a moral standpoint, if not legally."

"You are a fine one to use the words, 'moral standpoint,'" Mr. Morgan said, sneeringly.

"There is no use to parley about the matter, now," the woman said. "We are even."

"There is one think I want to ask you," Mr. Morgan said. "What is your correct name?"

"Mrs. Norma Allison," she replied. "When I left my husband's home, I did not wish to carry his name."

"Do you know that the law could punish you for what you have done?" Mr. Morgan asked her.

"I suppose so; but I know you won't allow the law to interfere. You think too much of public opinion to let people know that I have a better right to the name of Morgan than you have."

Her words had the desired affect.

"All that I demand of you is that you go away from here, and never return, under any circumstances. I do not want to hear this matter mentioned again, except when absolutely necessary." Mr. Morgan, looking as though he had aged several years in those few minutes, walked slowly out of the room.

Mrs. Wentworth, as she still preferred to be called, did not know which way to turn. At Warren's suggestion, she went to her room to pack a few personal belongings.

"I shall take you to a hotel for the present," Warren said to her.

After she had left the room, Warren said to his sister:

"You had better pack a few things, and prepare to come with me. I know that father will be glad to see you."

"Thanks, old man," Bill put in, "but your sister and I have made other arrangements. Guess I am the only one concerned that is glad of the turn things have just taken. I thought my charges were pretty small an hour ago, but just a few minutes ago, while you were talking to your— mother, I asked this little girl a question, and we have decided to see a parson this afternoon."

"Congratulations, Bill; but there is something I am afraid has never occurred to either of you." He turned to his sister. "What name do you intend to give when you get your marriage license?"

"I do not know," she said slowly. "I never would become accustomed to being called 'Norma.'"

"And I don't suppose Norma Wentworth would care to be called 'Beatrice.' By the way, sister, you haven't heard that I intend to marry the girl whose place you have occupied in this house."

Beatrice was, of course, suprised at the news, and promised Warren to be a real friend to Norma, providing that the other girl wished her friendship.

"I am sure she will, for my sake," Warren said, "and about the names, I think it would be best for you two to postpone your plans until we get the thing straightened around. I think you should use the name of Allison when it is necessary to give your maiden name, and I hope Norma will acknowledge that she is a Morgan. Your first name can be changed on the records of the state where you were born to the name you are accustomed to being addressed by. We will have to see an attorney, and let him attend to the matter."

Beatrice, as Warren had suggested, went to her room to prepare for a journey. She was soon ready to go, and the three were waiting for Mrs. Wentworth to join them. Finally, Beatrice went to search for the woman. She soon returned to the room, with a look of terror in her eyes.

"Oh, Warren, she is lying insensible on the floor of her room. Come quick!" The three hastily followed Beatrice to the room. The first thing Warren saw upon entering, was a small, empty bottle on the dressing table. It was marked "poison." Bill and Warren lifted the body of the woman who had sinned and been sinned against onto the bed. In her hand, she held the picture Beatrice had seen once before. She gave it to Warren.

"That is the picture which was taken of me when I was a little fellow," he explained. "Poor woman, she loved us both Beatrice. Although she did a great wrong, it was for your sake."

Mr. Morgan was summoned to the room when the coroner arrived. He had already repented the words he had spoke to Beatrice, who was an ignorant victim of the deception. The sight of Beatrice's mother lying dead melted his anger toward both of them.

"If my own daughter, whom I have wronged so cruelly, can forgive me, as I know she will, I shall have to," he thought.

Warren sent a telegram to his father informing the old gentleman of the death of his wife, and received a return wire immediately requesting Warren to have the remains sent to the home where both children had been born.

CHAPTER XIV

Norma, after a period of convalescence at the hospital, returned to her home with Mrs. Wendall. As soon as she entered the house, every object seemed to remind her of the happiness she and Warren had once found there. Mrs. Wendall acted like a mother, and the friendship of Edna and Miss Bradford did much to lighten her burden. As she grew stronger, she often wondered about the statement Miss Bradford had made to her in the hospital about Beatrice Morgan. She tried to induce the nurse to give her more information, but Miss Bradford refused, as she knew, if her theory should be wrong, that Norma would be disappointed again.

One evening Norma and Mrs. Wendall were alone. It was raining, and the steady patter of raindrops against the window caused a lonesome feeling to steal over Norma. If she could have seen the person who was at that minute descending the steps from the railroad tracks at the Central Station, and could have observed the happy smile on his face, she would not have been so down-hearted. He hailed a taxi, and was soon on his way to Mrs. Wendall's residence. When the driver slowed down, as they neared the house, Warren opened the door before the cab stopped, and was hurrying up the steps two at a time.

"Wait a minute, pardner, you didn't pay me," the driver called to the retreating young man. Warren hurried back to the car and thrust a five dollar bill in the driver's hand.

"Didn't mean to cheat you, buddy," he said. "Was in a hurry and forgot."

By this time, Mrs. Wendall had perceived his approach, and met him at the door.

"Sh!" she said, pointing toward the room where Norma was. "She doesn't know you are here. I received your letter, but decided to let your coming be a surprise to her. I'm going over to Mrs. Smith's for a few minutes," and the good woman, with a shaft thrown over her head, crossed the lawn to her neighbor's house. Warren opened the front door and went inside. Norma, thinking it was Mrs. Wentworth, was much surprised to see Warren when she turned toward the door.

"I—I didnt' know you were coming," she said, trying to be composed.

He crossed the room, and took her in his arms.

"Everything is all right dearest. We can be lovers again," he said.

"But I don't understand. I thought on were so sure—"

"It is a complicated story, dear; but I will make it as brief as possible."

"Did it ever occur to you that the might not have been your own mother?"

"No, I never thought of that. I never considered her a very good mother though," Norma acknowledged, frankly.

"Are you surprised to know that you were the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, and that the girl you know as Beatrice Morgan was Mrs. Wentworth's child. Beatrice is my sister, and Mrs. Wentworth was our mother," Warren explained.

THE DOLLAR

If a fellow had a smooth inclined plane extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific, he could roll a dollar a long distance. But that is not the only manner in which to make a dollar go a long way. The boy who has to work for his spending money will learn the value of the dollar. He will know how he earned it, and that it contains one hundred cents. The chances are that he will not spend his dollar for toy balloons that soon blow up and are gone, but he will invest it in something more lasting and more worth while.

COUNTIES LOSE ROAD MONEY

New Bills Passed in Columbus Make Heavy Cut in Revenues for Highways.

Two new highway bills passed by the legislature cut state, county, city and village revenues for road purposes approximately $12,000,000 a year.

This was not discovered until the legislature had recessed and officials began to examine critically the new bills.

The two highway bills are House Bill No. 67 by Lawrence H. Norton of Cuyahoga county, and House Bill No. 200 by Dallas Sullivan of Union county. They have been amended to play havoc with highway revenues.

Revenue from license fees for passenger cars is reduced 50 per cent, thereby cutting off $6,000,000 a year for maintenance and repair, half of which has been paid to counties, cities and villages.

After 1927 Franklin county will lose $130,015 or more every year by reason of this cut.

Revenue from county co-operation in state road building and upkeep, which has run from $6,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year, will be reduced to approximately $1,000,000, by reason of a clause limiting tax levies for this purpose and making county aid optional.

Assessment on property benefited by new roads, which has been as high as 20 per cent of cost, has been reduced to a minimum of 5 and a maximum of 10 per cent, estimated to reduce revenue nearly $2,000,000.

Furthermore, the legislature has not made the customary appropriation of $3,500,000 a year from the state general revenue fund for highway purposes.

Against all this heavy reduction of revenue the legislature has provided new income only from an additional 1c gasoline tax, estimated to produce $7,300,000 a year, to be used for new construction, reconstruction and grade crossing elimination.

The net result of the Legislature's work on highway revenue is to provide an amount for new state highway construction of approximately $9,250,000 a year, though the state has expended $14,500,000 a year recently and asks for that amount; and, further, to reduce the amount for maintenance and repair of county and township roads and city and village streets $2,500,000 a year; and to provide an amount for maintenance and repair of state roads of aproximately $11,800,000 a year, though the state had $14,772,000 last year for this purpose, and, because of longer mileage now built, asks for $20,500,000 a year.

Speaker Martin S. Dodd of the House has announced his intention of endeavoring to have these bills amended, when the Legislature reconvenes on May 9, to provide sufficient funds so that the Ohio highway system shall not deteriorate and part of it go to destruction for lack of repair.

CAMPAIGN FOR LIBRARY FUNDS

Still In Progress—Committee Expects at Least $1 from Each Hilltop Family.

The campaign for funds for the Holmes Hilltop library, which opened last week, has progressed very satisfactorily, according to reports of the committee in charge of raising the funds necessary to finance the library for the coming year.

While the committee is very well satisfied with results to date, they do not wish to give the impression that the drive is yet completed, as there are many streets yet to be reported upon.

As stated early in the campaign the committee is expecting a contribution of at least $1 from each Hilltop family which is surely a small enough amount to ask in return for the benefits derived from the library.

If you have not yet made your contribution to this fund, won't you call some member of the committee and help them to go over the top? It is up to you.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Harrison, 53 Binns Blvd., entertained Monday evening to a six o'clock dinner for Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Deems, in honor of their tenth wedding anniversary, the affair being a complete surprise to Mr. and Mrs. Deems. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Deems the following guests were present: Dr. and Mrs. E. P. Rauch, Mrs. Robert L. Gilliam, Mrs. Shank, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haydn Jones and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Jerman.

HIGHLAND IN SECOND PLACE

In a free hitting contest, featured by the stick work of Smith, Banning and Dorman of Highland, and Meredith, Metzger, Williams and Hysell of Mound, Highland won the third consecutive game Friday on the Hospital diamond.

Mound had two big innings, the 4th and 5th while Highland scored in all but the 5th.

Barrett is leading the Southern League with four wins, and unless Franklin, who has lost four games, beats them Friday, Highland will have to be contented with second place, provided Roosevelt is defeated.

Mound .....0 0 0 3 2 1 0—6	11	5

Summer Style Program Says Chic White With Black Effects

Reverse the order of black-and-white and you have white-and-black. The mode is doing just that. White with just enough black not to destroy its daintiness is the promise of summer apparel. The vogue extends to footwear, headwear and all the accessories which go to make up a perfect ensemble.

Adorable for summer frocks are the white-with-black georgettes printed in entrancing floral patterns. These are forecasted to enjoy a tremendous vogue. If a frock should, perchance, escape being made of a white-and-black transparency of some sort or other, it will be because the designer prefered to work out the combination by using black as a trimming on white. The accompanying illustration demonstrates the idea most beautifully.

A fascinating effect results when the hemline is embellished (see the figure to the left) with myriads of hemstitched black chiffon petals piled one upon another, so that when mildly steps her frock expresses a very "poetry of motion." The manner in which the drapery of this dress is brought to the front in a bow tie is very enlightening as to a popular style trend. For the matron no more appropriate costume can be conceived of than this combination afternoon and dinner dress. We say "combination" advisedly for it is designed with a coat which, removed, reveals a charming after-six-o'clock gown.

An interesting interpretation of white-with-black is given in the model to the right. It is of handsome white crepe satin, an applique of black supplying the gray with a blended twin beaver collar.

And the shoes, the gloves, the hats to wear with frocks such as these! Slippers of suave white kidskin, piped or appliqued with black embroidered, or later still, beaded; hats of white violets or fur midsummer, the transparent black or white wide brimmed capeline—these are all included in fashion's white-with-black program.

The Sandman Story

BILLY GOAT, THE POET

"There is going to be a great meeting in the barnyard," said Porky Pig. "Grunt, grunt, all come to the meeting.

"All come to the meeting," said Mrs. Duck. "Quack, quack, all come to the meeting."

"Yes, cock-a-doodle-do," said Red Top the Rooster, "all come to the meeting.

"All the old friends and enemies—though I trust there are no enemies—will come and greet each other.

"It's to be a fine reunion."

"Yes, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham. "It is to be a fine reunion."

"We, of the barnyard, can also have a splendid reunion!"

"Oh, yes, every one must come to the reunion," said Billy Goat.

"They must, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon.

"Has every invitation been sent out?" asked Mrs. Ham.

"Every one," said Mrs. Duck.

Just then a caterpillar crawled along through the barnyard, hurrying out of the way for fear he might be eaten or trampled upon or killed in one of the ways creatures had of getting rid of caterpillars.

Billy Goat saw him and sang this song:

The caterpillar only crawls,
He is not much admired,
But he'll become a butterfly,
For with high ambitions he's fired.

Everyone congratulated Billy Goat upon his song which was a quite original one. The words, everyone said, were a little better than the music, but it was all good, all good, they said.

And Billy Goat was delighted with the praise. In fact so delighted was he that he said he had another he'd sing, though he'd have to thiffk a little about it.

While he was thinking, though, he was talking about it.

"You see," he said, "I heard one of the young ladies talking the other day, and it seemed she had gone to town dressed in all her old clothes because it had been a rainy day when she had started.

"Yes, she had on an old hat, and old shoes and rubbers, and an old skirt and coat. And no sooner had she reached town than the sun came out and there was she on this most beautiful day feeling so like an old rainy day.

So this is the song I'm making up about that:

There's nothing sadder in this world
Than to have the sun come out
When your dressed in all your old clothes
Because you were in doubt.

"Of course," said Billy Goat, "she had been in doubt as to whether she'd wear her good ones because she had seen a little blue sky in one corner of the sky but she had been afraid that it would rain."

"We see, we see; a fine verse, Billy Goat. We shall have to name you the Poet of the Barnyard. Truly that would be an honor and one that you deserve," the other animals said.

So when the creatures all came to the Barnyard Reunion, Billy Goat or Sir William Goat, the Gentleman, was also called "The Barnyard Poet."

Yes, everyone was on hand, or perhaps one should say on foot, for the reunion. Porky Pig and Mrs. Duck helped to entertain.

The song sparrows came and the owl sent word he was sleeping or he'd come. (They hadn't asked him so they were just as glad he couldn't come.) The dog who had become so brave came along, so did Sharpy Squirrel, Runing Rabbit, Mrs. Blue Jay, and all of the ducks and pigeons and hens and roosters and pigs and geese and turkeys.

In fact it was a splendid reunion and there was excellent food, though of course the Pig family forgot about entertaining any but themselves when the food came along!

Read Seiller's tips, last page.

But there was enough to go around. The Geese weren't quite as polite as they should have been, of course, but taking it all in all it was a splendid barnyard reunion.

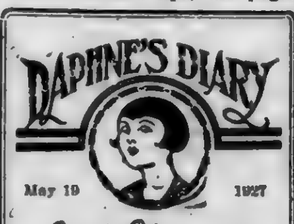
A WORD OF COMFORT



We never completely outgrow the age of hero-worship, and it is well that we do not.

The greatest force to make a man invincible to the influences which would weaken and fetter and soil his life is familiarity with a strong nature which is fighting its battles bravely and well. Intimate association with the master of men will make your strength unconquerable.

The Double Deception

By MRS. E. O. CARLSTON

Author of "For Freedom."

"Why do—you say 'was'?" Norma asked.

"She died, by her own hand, when the plot was disclosed to Mr. Morgan, who, by the way, is anxious to apologize to you for the way he has treated you."

Then Warren told her the rest of the story, of his mother's early girlhood, and of her relationship to Mr. Morgan.

"If that is true, Beatrice has as much right to inherit Mr. Morgan's money as I have," Norma said, generously.

"She was not that liberal with you when she held the upper hand; but I am glad to know that you are so unselfish. Beatrice, after all, is my sister, and I hope you will be good friends."

"I shall do my part," Norma promised. "Yes, dear, I know you will. Now, let us drop this subject and talk about ourselves. See what I have brought you," and he took from his pocket a small box which contained the engagement ring he had bought for her sometime before. He had just placed it on her finger when someone knocked at the front door. It was Edna Bennett.

Norma introduced Warren.

"I am very glad to meet you Miss Bennett. By driving your car over that embankment you prevented Norma and me from being unhappy propably the remainder of our lives. Edna knew nothing of the events that had recently occurred, and listened attentively to every word of the explanation. The following week, Mr. Morgan arrived in Boston. He went directly to the Wendall residence to see Norma. His many apologies were accepted, and both tried to forget the years Norma had spent as an inferior in the home where her wishes should have ruled. Like Beatrice she preferred to be called by the name she had always been addressed by.

Mr. Morgan, feeling that Norma could never be happy in the old Morgan home, because of past circumstances, bought a handsome house in Boston, where he wished his daughter to be married. Mrs. Wendall and Miss Bradford supervised plans for the wedding, which was to take place the following autumn. Edna and Beatrice Allison, as she was called after returning to her father's home, were to be bridesmaids. Bill Harvey was chosen to be best man.

Now that Norma's social position was unquestionable, Mrs. Bennett and Marie tried to retrieve themselves in Norma's favor. Although always polite and courteous to them, for Edna's sake, Norma did not forget how they, too, had wronged her. On the evening before the wedding Warren called at the home Mr. Morgan and his daughter shared together.

"My darling, are you happy?" he asked Norma when they were alone.

"What a question, Warren! To be sure I am happy," Norma said earnestly.

"I hope you always will be."

"I expect to be, as long as we are together."

"And I hope that will be many, many years," he said, drawing her closer to him.

The following day one of the largest churches in the city was packed to overflowing. Warren was well-known to many people there, and Norma had found that one finds all kinds of friends when occupying a high station in life. As Mr. Morgan's daughter, she had all that heart could wish.

After the ceremony, a sumptuous banquet was served at Mr. Morgan's new home. As there had been so much excitement before the wedding, Norma and Beatrice had scarcely had time to speak to one another. When Norma went to her room to change her white satin into a travelling dress, Beatrice did all she could to help, and at last, had found that service rendered is better than service received. George Wyman and Helen were present at the wedding, as Warren particularly desired that his favorite college chum should be there. Mr. Allison approved his son's choice of a wife, and was proud to own her as a daughter-in-law.

After a lengthened honeymoon, spent travelling from one point of interest to another, the happily married couple returned to Belleville, where they spent a few weeks with Mr. Allison and his daughter. Beatrice had changed so much during the last months that Norma did not associate her with the girl for whom she had once had a decided aversion. Then, as Warren felt that he would have to return to business, he and his wife returned to Boston, where he again resumed the control of his father's interests there.

Miss Bradford, a maiden lady who had never married, was soon induced to make her home with Warren and Norma, where her services were used to good advantage. One day, Mr. Allison, who for some reason, had made many trips to Boston during the first year of his son's married life, stepped quietly into the house where Norma and Warren lived. Not seeing anyone in the rooms usually occupied by the family, he went to an extra room toward the rear of the house, which had just been recently furnished.

Miss Bradford, wearing her white apron and cap, was seated with her back to the door. She heard footsteps coming toward the room, and turning around, she noticed who was coming. She placed a restraining finger to her closed lips.

"Sh-sh!" she almost whispered.

"Is it a boy?" he asked anxiously. "You didn't tell me in your letter."

"It?" she questioned, rather mischievously for a woman of her age. "Why use the singular term?" She motioned toward a corner of the room where a snow white curtain was drawn around a square space about three feet wide. Mr. Allison crossed the room so quickly he forgot to step quietly, and a little cry burst forth from behind the curtain, which he hastily drew aside. In front of him stood two little beds, and in each bed was a tiny form.

"Have they been named?" he asked.

"Not yet."

"Oh! Confound it. I'll talk to Warren," and the elderly man was upstairs in less than a minute.

Warren was seated beside the bed where Norma lay, holding both of her hands in his.

"Are the little rascals girls or boys?" Mr. Allison questioned, without taking time for any salutations.

"Both boys, dad," said Warren.

Mr. Allison made a movement to hurry back to the nursery.

"Wait a minute dad. You haven't spoken to their mother yet"

"Pardon me, daughter," said Mr. Allison. "I'm so excited over being grandma, or—er, that is—grandpa, I mean." Mr. Allison sat down on a chair.

"Norma is a wee bit disappointed because they are both boys, but I'll confess that I'm tickled to death," Warren said.

"When anybody's had the trouble on account of girls that I've had, they prefer boys anytime," he declared.

"How about the big girl downstairs, dad?" Warren questioned.

Mr. Allison was embarrassed.

"Do you think—?"

"Don't ask me; ask her," Warren suggested.

"I don't know whether she would want to be a grandpa, I mean grandma to those boys or not,—but I'll ask her," he replied.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

SARCASM

Sarcasm may be ironical, it may be clever and witty, but to be really sarcasm it must also have a barb that will hurt, a lever that pries apart some shame or pretense and lays it open to amusement and contempt.

The modern usage of the word might also be said to be a figurative adaption of its original meaning. For we have "sarcasm" from the ancient Greek, where it meant to tear flesh like dogs.

Modern weapons are likely to be intellectual rather than physical. Civilization forbids us to use our teeth, but the edge of sarcasm can be just as sharp, and sometimes inflicts hurts far deeper than torn flesh!

In wood there are a great many small cells. Some of these have a little moisture. When the wood gets hot this moisture turns into steam and bursts the cells. This makes a noise like a small explosion, and many such noises make the crackle of the fire.

City Schools Making Memorial Day Plans

Observance of Memorial day in Columbus schools will consist of programs to be held in the schools the week preceding May 30, Superintendent Collicott announced yesterday. Schools will be closed Memorial day.

Representatives of patriotic organizations will visit the schools to participate in the program and pupils have been asked to bring flowers to the building the Saturday before the holiday, to be placed in cemeteries May 30 by members of the G. A. R. posts.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

LETTER IN THE CANDLE

When you blow out a candle and a bright spark remains glowing on the wick it is a sign that you will soon receive a welcome letter. A few years ago "The Letter in the Candle" was a popular song of the day.

All primitive races regarded fire as invested with a peculiar sanctity and as a vital principle of life. Though acquainted with the art of producing fire by rubbing together two pieces of wood it was a laborious process and a perpetual fire was kept burning in the house of the king, or chief, from which domestic fires could be lighted should they chance to go out. And the primitive mind conceived a strong sympathy as existing between any parent fire and its offspring.

This idea persisted into classic times. Now when a Greek went on a journey he took with him, for convenience sake, in a stalk of the giant fennel, fire lighted at his home fire. This stalk had a hard bark inclosing a pith which, when dry, smoldered for a long time without harming the outer covering. The legend of Prometheus shows this to have been a very ancient custom and it remained common among the Greeks down to the introduction of matches.

Now in the old days when a Greek matron whose husband was on a journey blew out the flame of a candle—and a little spark remained brightly glowing, it was a clear case of sympathetic magic which told her that her husband's fire was still burning. His fire had communicated with her fire and its effect remained in the shape of the bright spark after her fire had been extinguished. She would hear from him soon.

The match box has replaced the fennel stalk; but for the superstitious there is still "a letter in the candle"—a vestige of fire-worship in the Twentieth century.

Silent Sounds Are Guide for Vessels

Instead of baying blasts from foghorns, sounds that no human ear can hear are being employed by a lighthouse at the port of Calais, France, to guide ships into the harbor in thick weather. These inaudible sounds says Popular Science Monthly, are like ordinary sounds except that they are so shrill they cannot be heard. They can be detected(however, by electrical instruments which make them visible. They travel long distances under water. At Calais, the lighthouse on shore transmits inaudible sounds in a code of dots and dashes. The signals travel under water and are picked up by amplifying devices on ships nearing the harbor.

With the Clock Turned Back

By COURTNEY RYLEY COOPER

Old Brent was a grouch. Business had made him so. He never had had time to be a boy, to be a youth, to get married or do anything else except make money. The doctors read him a sentence which was: to drop everything and get back to nature unless he desired to wear a wooden overcoat and be the chief figure in a funeral.

Read the laughable and thrilling experiences of Brent while he was trying to learn how to turn back the clock.

Mr. S. A. S. Ziroll, 142 S. Warren Ave., announces the removal of his offices to No. 821 First National Bank Bldg., 33 N. High St. Mr. Zirolli's wide and varied experience in this work enables him to offer a complete Architectural Engineering and Appraisal Service.

The legislature of California has made an appropriation to enable a committe of engineers under Paul Bailey to make some investigations in regard to supplying water to the San Joaquin Valley. There is surplus water in the Sacramento Valley in the north of the state. According to the plan under consideration the common mouth of the Sacremento and San Joaquin Rivers would be damned up, and the surplus water of the Sacremento would be forced southward into the channel of the San Joaquin. This would mean that water would flow uphill for a long distance in the San Joaquin, which would be made to flow southward insteal of northward. To perform this feat a series of pumps and dams would be used.

To three, our hearts and lips will ever sing.
For high ideals, for purpose ever true.
We bring today, our grateful praise to you.

Chorus

Love and loyalty to Highland
The school we love so dear,
Proud are we to be thy children.
Your name we will revere.
Though to other schools we wander,
Our thoughts will e'er return
Back to dear old Highland
And for thee our hearts will yearn.

Dear old Highland, the scenes we love so well
As sweetest mem'ries in our hearts will dwell.
And through life's path-way, we ever will hold dear
The rules of life you taught us to revere.

CHAPTER I

Here Goes

As Thomas Brent left the elevator he resembled somewhat a man at bay. His hands were deep in his pockets, his heavy chin was jammed against his collar, and his lips were in a straight line. There was a glitter in his eyes which carried an impression of pent-up rage.

"Idiot!" he grumbled to himself. "What's he think I am, anyway? Doesn't he know I have something better to do than to go tearing around the country like a wild man? I know what I'll do"—he stopped short and waved a hand impotently—"I'll see another doctor, that's what. I'll see whether anybody is going to make an idiot out of me."

Whereupon Mr. Thomas Brent dived as fast as his palpitating heart would allow him into another office building and scanned the register of names. Soon, panting from the exertions of a hurried entrance, he stood before a professional-appearing man in one of the upper suites.

"Brent's my name," he said shortly. "Thomas Brent. I'm president of the Amalgamated Foundry company, and I've just been having a session with a pure idiot. One of your tribe," he added sarcastically.

Doctor Jordan smiled blandly. "There are idiots in all classes," he said with a laugh. "Now what's your particular grievance?"

The president of the Amalgamated Foundry company seated himself and grunted in a distressed sort of way.

"There's enough of a grievance," he began. "Here I've been going to Doctor Jim Henderson for the last ten years and paying him my good money, for what I though was professional work, and now when I need him, he comes rising up with a proposition that a ten-year-old schoolboy ought to know is pure idiocy. You know what he's just told me to do?" he asked with a sudden flare of anger. "He told me to live in a cave."

"A cave?" Doctor Jordan appeared interested. "I think we had better get to the bottom of this thing. Tell me everything from the beginning."

Mr. Brent looked at the floor a minute, then with his hands on his knees he began, while the sharp eyes of Doctor Jordan watched his every action.

"Well, it's enough to drive anybody crazy," he began. "Here I've been working for the last twenty-five years trying to build up a good business and it just seems that everybody in the world is eternally hanging around trying to bleed me for something. I haven't got an employee that's satisfied. All of them are kicking for more money all the time. All I hear is money, money, money."

His hands went up and waved windmill fashion. "I'm getting tired of it—tired of everything. I'm sick of the whole blamed business. I know what I ought to do, but nobody will let me do it. They won't let me run the business the way I want to—and I'm president, too, understand that. Every time I turn around somebody is sticking a requisition for money in my face and it has just got on my nerves until I can't stand it any longer. I need a tonic or something of the kind—

"I've been working ever since I was knee-high to a grasshopper. Carried papers to get through school on and washed dishes in a restaurant at night. That's the way I got my start. I'm self-made all the way through. I haven't got a loafing bone in my body, and—"

"You've been keeping at it pretty steady for the last twenty or twenty-five years, haven't you?" Doctor Jordan asked.

"Day and night," came the answer. "Why, man, I had to! You ought to have seen that foundry when I took hold of it. I've built the thing up to a half-million-dollar corporation. See? There isn't any company in the state handling any bigger contracts than I do right now—"

"So I see," interrupted Doctor Jordan. "You don't have any amusements, do you, Mr. Brent?"

"What do I want with amusements?" the other man growled. "I need a tonic, that's what I need—and somebody to keep this eternal gang of money grabbers off my neck."

What this world's record means to you

IN APRIL, 1927, GOODYEAR FINISHED THE 100,000,000th GOODYEAR PNEUMATIC MOTOR VEHICLE TIRE.

When we offer you a Goodyear Tire we offer you the benefits of a world-record production.

Your money buys more because the Goodyear tire is the product of an organization that does things in a big way.

For example, Goodyear uses nearly one-seventh of all the crude rubber produced annually—almost 50% more than any other manufacturer! Goodyear uses 100,000 bales of cotton yearly, operates its own cotton plantation, textile mills, rubber plantation, coal mines, factories and branches.

You get all the benefits of this efficient, economical production when you buy a Goodyear Tire.

We're Goodyear right here in Your Neighborhood.

When you buy a Goodyear Tire from us you make a direct and close association with the Goodyear organization. As Goodyear's accredited representatives in this district we are pledged to do everything possible to see that the Goodyear Tires on your car give you satisfactory service long, economical mileage. We offer the free service of application, inspection, inflation, and examination for any sign of unnatural wear. All you have to do is drive around at regular intervals.

DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

Sessions Will Be Held June 27 to July 29—Teaching Staff to Be Announced Later.

The committee on arrangements for a community Daily Vacation Bible school met last Friday evening in Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church for the purpose of organization for the coming summer term.

It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that a school should be provided for children of the Hilltop again this year as previously and organization of the committee was made for that purpose.

The following officers were elected: President, Rev. H. C. Hutchison; secretary, E. A. Garrison; treasurer, Miss Hazel Linville; chairman of committee on faculty and curriculum, Rev. A. C. Baughman; chairman of publicity, Rev. G. F. Barber.

A representative from each co-operating church will compose the finance committee. The time for the school was set for June 27 to July 29, and the teaching staff and place of holding the school will be announced later.

In the Dispatch piano contest for building winners, Charles Walton received the medal for West Broad Street school. The other contestants were graded high, and the judge, Miss Virginia Whitcomb, spoke very highly of the musicianship of these children.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of Glenwood church will meet in the church parlors Thursday afternoon, June 2, at 2 o'clock. A special demonstration, "Aunt Fanny's Miracle," will be given by the following ladies: Mrs. Ray Cromer, Mrs. L. E. Kline, Mildred Phalor, Mrs. H. R. Gibson, Mrs. R. E. Hite and Mrs. E. J. Swigert.

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK TRIBUTE TO MASONRY

MEMORIAL SHAFT FOR MASONS AT MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK.

This imposing shaft of Barre gray granite is to rise 30 feet above the level of one of the Masonic sections at Memorial Burial Park, a tribute to the memory of Masons and their families buried there. The management of Memorial Burial park has already graded and set aside and opened one of its largest, best located sections to be known as Acacia Lawn, for the exclusive use of Masons and their families. In addition to the above section two adjoining sections, with special features, are being reserved for Masons.

The memorial, in its entirety will be emblematic of the Masonic fraternity. It will stand on a base forming three steps, emblematic of the three degrees. Three pillars of Tuscan, Ionic and Corinthian architecture, will be carved on the die, emblematic of Wisdom, Strength and Beauty, above which will be a panel with Acacia leaf carving. The official emblem of Masonry, the square, compass and letter G, will appear on the side of the shaft. Mounted on the top of the shaft will be a globe, richly carved, denoting the universality of Masonry. On each corner of the plot of ground set aside for the memorial there is planted evergreens, which, by means of their perpetual freshness, bring thoughts of life everlasting. On the point of Acacia Lawn section is the square, compass and letter "G" planted in Berberis Buximolea. This memorial will be the only monument on Acacia Lawn section and the graves will be marked by markers only, while lots in the adjoining Masonic sections have individual monuments.

This memorial will be a landmark for everyone as well as Masons since the Acacia Lawn section is so near the entrance to Memorial Burial Park which is located on the slightly rolling vista of the National highway.

During recent years, the management of Memorial Burial Park points out, in some of the largest cities where there are thousands of Masons, cemeteries have been built exclusively for them.

In cities the size of Columbus, such a plan could not be carried out to complete satisfaction. However, the same results can be achieved by setting aside several sections in a burial park in such cities for the organization.

The Embroidery club met at the home of Mrs. H. C. Engelhard Thursday, May 26. The afternoon was spent in embroidering, after which a delicious luncheon was served. Those present were: Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Mrs. Haydn Jones, Mrs. R. P. Rauch, Mrs. R. O. Benefield, Mrs. Henry Jones and the hostess.

LINDBERGH

Out of the West, into the night!
Out of the dawn, into the light!
Undaunted courage, virtuous might.
Uncharted the path where he winged his way,
Marking the dawn of another new day.
Unheard the whirring of Mercury
As swift he winged his way along.
Unseen by human eye was he,
Who led by God to victory!
Tumultuous thrones his name will sing,
His, a victory of a king.

HIGHLAND AVE. SCOUT TROOP

Enjoy Week-end Activities—To See Movie Show of Camp Life Thursday Morning.

By Gifford Markesen

On Thursday, June 2nd, at 10:30 a. m., Grant O. Graves, Field Executive for the Columbus Council of Boy Scouts will show a picture of the life at Camp Ko-Fre-La, summer camp for Columbus boys, to the boys of Highland school. This film is being shown at practically all Junior High schools in Columbus and is being well received. A goodly number of boys from Troop 45 are planning to attend the camp this summer.

Plans are under way for the arrangement of a banquet for the boys belonging to the "August Assembly," an organization composed of the Junior leaders of the troop. The feed will probably be held at the Matsonia some time within the next ten days. Fathers of the boys will be invited. It is planned to make this an annual affair after this year. A committee composed of James Matheny, chairman, Gerald Tallman, Robert Wolfe and William Craft are making plans.

About 20 members of the troop accompanied by the scoutmaster and Mr. G. T. Cooper hiked along the Scioto River Friday night, May 27. T-bone steaks were a favorite on the rugged camp bill of fare. Phil Kunts'e dashing young athletes inspired by Phil's virile leadership outplayed a similar but less inspired group led by "Golf-eye" Jim Matheny in a baseball game. A splash in the waters of the Scioto culminated a happy evening. Those attending were Jim Matheny, Robert Wolfe, Bill Craft, Cyril Foster, Red Tallman, Kenneth Cox, Fat Harper, Jack Miles, Phil Kunts, Ray Gaib, Fred Marsh, William Van Rushling, Bob Cooper, Charlie Coatellier, Bill Miller, Bill Elliott and John Michaelis.

In order that a boyhood ambition might be realized and a longing for situations created by an unregulated reading program and last but not least to do a civic good turn for the Columbus Gallery of Fine Arts, a number of boys from the troop offered their services as ushers at the Rodeo. Those doing duty were Ralph Harper, Robert Wolfe, Jack Miles, Cyril Foster, James Matheny, Kenneth Cox, Hubbert Jones, Raymond Gaib, Gerald Tallman, Fred Marsh, John Michaelis, Lyman Moler and William Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Rauch and children and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jones spent the week-end at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Jenkins, Venedocia, Ohio. While there they attended the Welsh musical contest and Mrs. Gilliam, Mrs. Rauch, Mr. Haydn Jones and Mr. Henry Jones won the mixed quartet number. Mr. Henry Jones also won the baritone solo.

A very good attendance of Hilltop people were delightfully entertained on Thursday evening, May 26, at the Hillcrest Baptist church at the recital given by Mr. Carl Guffey, baritone, assisted by Mr. Henry Shultz, pianist.

Mr. Guffey has recently opened the Hillcrest School of Music. He is assisted by Nora Bayles Maule and A. F. Southard.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

PARSLEY

In some sections of the country it is considered most unlucky to replant old parsley in the garden—that is to set out a parsley root which you have had growing in a box in the house all winter—as it endangers the life of the head of the family. Always sow fresh seed. This superstition we inherit, along with parsley itself, from the days when Greece and the gods were young together. Parsley was an indigenous plant in Greece, growing wild and with special profusion in Argolis, where was the vale of Nemea, in which stood the temple of Nemean Zeus, and where Hercules killed the Nemean lion.

NATURE BUILT ONE PLANT AS FLYTRAP

The Venus flytrap is but another amazing instance of animal instinct in the plant world. The device of the flytrap is a leaf, but hinged, and set with sensitive hairs.

Like the pitcher plant, it offers a lure of sweetness, says the Nature Magazine of Washington. No sooner has the infatuated insect so much as touched one of the fateful hairs than the hinged leaf closes and entombs him, and the digestive cells exude their juices, and so no more of the adventure.

The flytrap opens to cast forth its waste upon the ground, and the waste enters the soil, and between soil and plant is contrived the cycle for a gnat.

Vines that persist in twining either to the left or right, leaves that tremble when touched, vegetation that creeps toward the sun as a spent traveler toward water, plants that seize and hold and consume their food—all kinsmen of ours and with us kindred to the dust.

EARL MYERS

Mr Myers, formerly of Pickerington, Ohio, where he conducted a funeral directing establishment for twelve years for himself, has been secured by Glenn L. Myers, Funeral Director of 23 West Second Ave., as manager of his Hilltop branch, located at 2431 Sullivant Ave.

The business was recently established by Earl and Rollen Myers and was known as Myers & Myers. Mr. Earl Myers is a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge and the Glenwood Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Glenn L. Myers states that in opening the Hilltop branch office it is just another step in rendering a greater service to the Hilltop fast growing community.

The University of Illinois has acquired a huge raincoat for its gridiron. This sheet of rubber fabric consists of four sections, each 158 by 83 feet, and cost $10,000. The ground slopes from the center of the field to the side so that the rain runs off the coverlet into gutters at the side.

Probably these trans-Atlantic flyers are believers with Walt Whitman in his lines "It is just as lucky to die as to be born."

Just another example of the American spirit of accomplishment was the feat of our young air ace who smiled at the 3600 miles that stretched between New York and Paris and then hopped off. It was just another phase of the spirit that took the first covered wagon westward and the spirit that dug the Panama canal. But nothing is accomplished until its tried. That's Lindbergh's spirit of attack.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

PARSLEY

In some sections of the country it is considered most unlucky to replant old parsley in the garden—that is to set out a parsley root which you have had growing in a box in the house all winter—as it endangers the life of the head of the family. Always sow fresh seed. This superstition we inherit, along with parsley itself, from the days when Greece and the gods were young together. Parsley was an indigenous plant in Greece, growing wild and with special profusion in Argolis, where was the vale of Nemea, in which stood the temple of Nemean Zeus, and where Hercules killed the Nemean lion.

Parsley—possibly from its availability in making wreaths and garlands for his shrine—appears to have come to be regarded in the valley as the specially favored plant of Nemean Zeus, and so when, some five hundred years before the Christian era, the Nemean games were instituted in memory of a local young hero, Archemorus, who died from the bite of a serpent as the expedition of "The Seven Against Thebes" was passing through the place—a crown of wild parsley was the reward of the victor.

Now wild parsley being dedicated to such purposes was naturally protected: probably the penalty for the profanation of rooting it up was death. And here we get the modern superstition that the planting of an old parsley root in the garden is likely to cause the death of the head of the family. Only three columns of the temple of Nemean Zeus remain standing: yet many a man today hesitates to plant an old parsley root in his garden, and you will find in many of the modern books of "Dreams and Omens" a warning against doing so.

Goodyear Establishes New Production Mark

"When the hundred-millionth Goodyear tire was produced in April by the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company at Akron, Ohio, it marked a manufacturing accomplishment without parallel in the rubber industry," according to Renner Bros. Auto Service, Goodyear dealers.

"This achievement is of particular significance to the tire user and car owner," Mr. Renner said, for into every Goodyear tire goes the experience gained in establishing a world's record in tire production, and the skill of the largest development and engineering organization in the tire business.

"In addition to one hundred million pneumatic tires Goodyear has produced more than three million solid and cushion tires and thousands of bicycle and carriage tires in the early years of the company's existence.

Milliners Create In Terms of Straw With Fabric or Ribbon

Here's a really-and-truly story about a new hat, as laughingly related by a certain well known club woman, who seeing the humor and psychology of it, thought it too good to keep from her friends. "Soon after donning a new chapeau," said she, "I met a dear woman friend who exclaimed, 'How becoming that new hat is to you!' Later on a friend of the sterner sex met me with a 'Good morning! How well you are looking, what have you been doing to yourself—you seem to have found the fountain of youth—look ten years younger than when last I saw you!'" The man of it, the woman of it! Anyway it is a fine argument in favor of becoming millinery.

A more diversified styling of hats seldom has been recorded, as exists this season. Perhaps this is because the modish compose idea so encourages imagination to soar to very heights. Not only in terms of combination of color but of materials does the milliner create. Especially are fine straws and crochet visors partnered with taffeta, faille and ribbon.

The hat to the right at the top shows a wide side crown of hand-sewed pedaline with a voluminous drape of faille silk.

Belting ribbon in two colors is picketed about a milan crown for the model in the center. Note how ribbon ends are brought up through openings in the crown.

Handsomely tailored is the large leghorn hat which goes fifty-fifty with black crepe faille in its designing. Wide brims are surely coming in!

The last model features sand-colored milan with a crown basket woven of narrow grosgrain ribbon in string color with tan.

JULIA BOTTOMLY.

Wolfe, and Charles Coutellier, sr; and fourteen boys were present.

James Matheny, toastmaster, was presented with a Senior Patrol leaders badge; Robert Wolfe was presented with a check for thirteen dollars for a period at camp which he won in a point contest, and John Wolfe and Gifford Markeson were presented with junior assistant scoutmaster's badges.

Short talks were made by P. B. "Pop" Weaver, H. H. Reighley, E. N. Littleton, V. E. Wolfe, J. H. Smith, A. W. Elliott, E. H. Matheny, C. Coutellier, sr., and were replied to by impromptu speeches by John Wolfe, Gerald Tallman, Kenneth Cox, Ralph Harper, and the cream of the speeches was made by Phil Koontz which branded by some of the boys as a little sour.

Last Sunday a hike to Burdell's cabin at Lancaster was headed by Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Reighley, and Mr. C. E. Markeson, jr. Boys attending were: "Red" Tallman, John Michaelis, Cyril Foster, Bob Cooper, Ralph and Bob Harper, and Gifford Markeson. Hiking, swimming, and baseball made up the days fun.

HILLTONIA CLUB PICNIC

Residents of Hilltonia Avenue Will Celebrate Saturday, June 18.

A most commendable spirit is being shown by members of the Hilltonia Community club in their efforts to boost and establish good will among their residents by means of a community picnic to be held Saturday, June 18, from 2 to 8 p. m., at 465 Hilltonia avenue.

P. S. Schall, publicity man for the event, announced early in the week that plans were complete for a bigger and better celebration than last year. Those who witnessed and took part in the event last year will agree that it will be hard to beat.

The celebration begins at 2 o'clock with a general mixing and warming up. At 3 o'clock they will have an auto parade and all persons are urged to lay on plenty of decorations. From 3:30 to 6 p. m. the time will be taken up in games and contests, such as a bean race, horse race, needle threading contest sack race and various others. Many prizes are to be awarded the winners.

Plenty of good eats will be served at 6 p. m. These are being supplied by the many families and everyone is to help himself.

At 7 p. m. there will be a grand prize drawing at which time many valuable things will be given away, among which will be listed an order good for $50, another good for $25, auto tires, radio battery, candy, motometer, spot light, auto tubes and baskets of groceries.

An entertaining program of fun is planned for 8 o'clock, after which an orchestra will furnish music for the dance.

This is the second annual community affair of this kind held by the Hilltonia Community club. It is not an advertising feature in any sense of the word, but only goes to create a real home and community spirit.

LIBRARY CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

The Library Committee would urge all workers to make an effort to complete their tasks of collecting the contributions this week, and turn all money and names over to C. H. Campbell, the treasurer of the Library Committee. Is there a family on the Hilltop who cannot give $1.00 to help Keep the Kiddies Kontented?

The list of contributors turned in to the committee this week appears on page 2 of this issue.

Anyone who contributed before Monday of this week and is not included in this list will please communicate with Dr. M. K. Weber, the secretary of the Library Committee, who will be glad to make the correction.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT ST. PAUL'S

STORY OF THE WHITE HOUSE

When in 1792, James Hoban suggested to the commission appointed to supervise the erection of public buildings at Washington that the Executive Mansion be modeled after the palace of the Duke of Leinster in Dublin, his proposition was accepted, and he was given a premium of five hundred dollars for the plan. More, he was engaged, at the same amount per year, to take charge of the builders.

No time was lost in laying the corner stone. The ceremony was performed on October 13, 1792, and operations were pushed with such sped that the building was finally completed about ten years afterwards.

In November, 1800, six months after the transfer of the Government offices from Philadelphia to Washington, Mrs. Adams joined President Adams at the White House. She had a hard time getting there. A few days after her arrival she wrote to her daughter:

"I arrived here on Sunday last, and without meeting any accident worth noticing, except losing ourselves when we left Baltimore, and going eight or nine miles on the Frederick road, by which means we were obliged to go the other eight through woods, where we wandered two hours without finding a guide, or the path. Fortunately, a straggling black came up with us, and we engaged him as a guide, to extricate us out of our difficulty; but woods are all you see, from Baltimore until you reach the city, which is only so in name. Here and there is a small cot, without a glass window, interspersed amongst the forests, through which you travel miles without seeing any human being. In the city there are buildings enough, if they were compact and furnished to accommodate Congress and those attached to it; but as they are, and scattered as they are, I see no great comfort for them."

Mrs. Adams found no great comfort in the White House, either. "To assist us in this great castle," she wrote, "and render less attendance necessary, bells are wholly wanting, not one single one being hung through the whole house, and promises are all you can obtain. If they will put me up some bells, and let me have wood enough to keep fires, I design to be pleased. But, surrounded with forests, can you believe that wood is not to be had, because people cannot be found to cut and cart it! The house is made habitable, but there is not a single apartment finished. We have not the least fence, yard, or other convenience, without, and the great, unfinished audience-room I make a drying-room of, to hang up the clothes in. The principle stairs are not up, and will not be this winter."

The building itself was in good condition, though the surroundings were far from prepossessing when it was burned by the British in 1814.

The cost of rebuilding and refurnishing the Executive Mansion was about three hundred thousand dollars. The work was begun in 1814, and in September, 1817, the work was so far completed that President Monroe was able to take up his quarters there in some degree of comfort, though the floor in the East Room had not been laid and some of the walls were still without plastering. On January 1, 1817, the first New Year's reception was held there. It was gratifying to be able to salute the President of the United States with the compliments of the season in his appropriate residence, the National Intelligencer said. It may be added that the editor called the building "the President's House." The title, "the White House," was not yet in common use.

For many years the successive occupants of the building were subject to all sorts of criticism. Mrs. Monroe refused both to make first calls and to return calls! President Monroe bought foreign-made furnishings! John Quincy Adams actually introduced a billiard table, and the use of public money to buy "a gaming table" was bitterly attacked! (Of course the purchase was made with personal funds.) Mrs. Adams was cold and haughty! When President Van Buren left Washington he took with him the gold spoons and the gilt dessert service that had attracted attention! But these were private property.

Until with recent years the President's offices were in the east end of the White House. A pleasing description of these offices has come down from Isaac N. Arnold, who thus described the quarters which were the official home of President Lincoln:

"The furniture of the room consisted of a large oak table, covered with cloth, extending north and south, and it was around this table that the Cabinet sat when it held its meetings. Near the end of the table and between the windows was another table. On the west side the President sat, in a large arm-chair, and at this table he wrote. A tall desk, with pigeonholes for paper, stood against the south wall. The only books usually found in this room were the Bible, the United States Statutes, and a copy of Shakespeare. There were a few chairs and two plain hair-covered sofas. There were two or three map frames, from which hung military maps, on which the positions and movements of the armies were traced. There was an old and discolored engraving of General Jackson over the mantel and a later photograph of John Bright. Doors open into this room from the room of the secretary and from the outside hall, running east and west across the house. A bell cord within reach of his hand extended to the secretary's office. A messenger sat at the door opening from the hall, and took in the cards and names of visitors."

During the time of President Roosevelt outside executive offices were built, and rooms that had long been needed for the personal uses of the President's household were released. The change has increased patriotic pride in the White House, one of the simplest of the mansions provided for the rulers of the nations.—John T. Faris in Forward.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THE HONEYMOON

Would you not be indignant if for the origin of that divine habit, the honeymoon, I could give you nothing more romantic than the theory that it dates back to the time when a prospective husband captured his woman and dragged her by the hair to his cave, where, to prevent her from appealing to her relatives for release, he kept her for a time in seclusion?

Likewise, wouldn't you hate me, hopeful girls, and you, sanguine youths, scoff at me, were I to tell you that because love has been likened to the moon, which begins to wane when at its full, the married couple's period of mutual affection is called the "honeymoon"?

Both theories have been advanced for the origin of the custom and its name. The fact is, however, that the honeymoon is traced back directly to an ancient practice of the Teutons by which newly wedded couples drank mead or hydromel (honey wine) for thirty days after their marriage—the "honey month," or "honeymoon."

To the glory of the honeymoon be it said that it was to this custom that Attila, the cruel and invincible king of the Huns, succumbed. It is said that his death was caused by drinking too much on his wedding night.

BABY'S LIBRARY

Billie Brownie had gone again to call on Charles Norman. Charles Norman was now about a year old—well, he was a little more than a year old, and strange as it may seem he was collecting books.

"I'm going to have a big library," he told Billie Brownie. "Of course, I won't bother about reading now, and then I'll have to be read to before I'll read to myself. At present I'm too busy with other matter."

"What other matters?" Billie Brownie inquired.

"Well, I'm interested in drinks of water and drinks of milk and rides in my carriage and in sweet sleep and sunshine and out-of-doors and my mother's society and my daddy's society and all such important things.

"What Other Matters?" Billie Brownie Inquired.

"My daddy takes care of me all the time he is home from the office. He loves to do that and I love it, too—well, that takes up all that much time.

"And when my daddy is at his office my mother is constantly with me if I am not asleep on my sunny porch—and that takes up that much time. Then they sit and look at me and chuckle with delight about me and I chuckle, too, so as to be polite. Really, I enjoy it hugely, too.

"They say I am decidedly boyish in my looks, which is fine, for I am a boy, of course.

"I have a small boy cousin, too. He is younger than I am, however. Yes, he is all of four weeks younger.

"Of course, I cry at times. Then my mother soothes me, but my daddy speaks to me sternly in a very manlike way. When I don't cry my daddy keeps calling me, 'You darling little thing,' over and over again.

"So that by way of variety and change and to have him say something else to me, I cry once in a while. That's one of my reasons, anyway. Another is that it is expected of me to cry just a little bit.

"But I don't cry much. It's a waste of time, and as I told you of all the other things I have to keep me busy, you will realize that I haven't much time in which to cry.

"I was going to tell you about my library. Well, as I told you at one time, I have any number of beautiful garments—just quantities of clothes. If it were not that I am so busy and that a baby would be out of place keeping a store, I really believe I'd set up a store and I'd have everything for customers with babies.

"But at the same time I don't need the money from a store, for I've got a bank account. Dear me, yes, Billie Brownie, I've a bank account!

"And then some one gave me a book. Well, my mother showed it to me and I grinned and made little 'talky sounds,' she said, and she also told me I'd been especially good after receiving it. She said books made people contented and happy and pleased.

"And she said I thanked the one who sent me the book by sending a friendly and gummy grin, much fist waving and enthusiasm.' Yes, she said all this. I do love the way my mother expresses herself and talks. It's not just like every one else. It's always interesting.

"But I'll tell you, Billie Brownie the book itself wasn't anything much. It gave my mother an idea, though, to start a library for me while I was young so I'd have quite a fine one when I grew up, and while growing up.

"So, I have a library and quite a number of books now. When I'm a bigger boy I shall just have the best time in the world with my library.

"It is a good idea to start a library when one is only a baby. It gives one a good running start!

"And now I must bid you a polite good-bye, Billie Brownie, and do come and call on me again soon. My grandfather is coming to call on me now and I must give him my entire attention—he is very important and learned and I'm a wee bit afraid of his importance."

So Billie Brownie went on in the best of spirits for he had a chat with his dear little friend, Charles Norman.

"Trade Your Smiles"

Rayon Curtain Panels, $2.00 value, 98c—Seiller's.

A modern playground where children of the well-to-do are wont to congregate represents rather an appearance of a Lilliputian style-show, with miniature mannikins all "dolled up" in fetching frocks and rompers, with cunning socks to match and amusing little sweaters, or perhaps a protecting coatee, with possibly a hat now and then. Even their little tin pails and shovels, their jumping ropes, dolls 'n everything seem selected from the standpoint of fitting into the color scheme.

Mother does not say any more of her child's simple play frock: "I'll just run it together in a hurry." She goes about her sewing preparedly—seeks the latest patterns, studies up on newest embroidery and appliqué ideas. As to choosing materials, that is the most important thing of all.

Of course with most mothers "gingham first" is the sentiment. If wise mothers will make it a rule to always buy a solid color for trimming. Even the simplest rompers exploit the cross-compose idea nowadays. The gay-patterned gingham rompers in the picture ture cleverly takes unto itself ragian sleeves made of a solid color, with pockets to match. It is well to remember in selecting patterns for tots' frocks and rompers that ragian sleeves are the "last word." Note, too, the touch of smocking across the front neckline of this romper model. Few coats or frocks these days, escape the smocking vogue.

COPYRIGHT W. G. CHAPMAN

Scrottles pounded his desk. "This isn't any time to ask for a raise," he ejaculated. "It seems that you would get it through your head after a while that we don't want to raise you."

"But I must have a raise," Edwards broke in. "There are certain things in my life that demand it. I have been figuring on getting married for some time, but I can't do it as long as my salary stays as low as it is now."

"Well, you can't count that against us," Scrottles answered him. "We pay a man what he's worth. If he wants to get married, that is not our lookout at all. You ought to realize that, Edwards."

"But I don't believe you are paying me what I'm worth," Edwards retorted. "I know I am young and all that but just the same I have the ability to do a lot of things that you don't give me credit for.—If you would only give me half a chance here I could show you. Now to be frank, Mr. Scrottles, I must have a raise, or I will be forced to leave my position and hunt another. Of course, I would like to stay, but I must—"

Scrottles interrupted with a gesture. "It has always been a rule of this company that we hold no man here against his will. Mr. Brent has made up his mind that he is not going to give any more raises around here, and that rule will be enforced. I am very sorry, Mr. Edwards, but if you don't care to work here at your present salary, you had better find another position."

The young man's hand twitched, his face grew the least bit pale, then suddenly he turned and left the office, while the eyes of Mr. Scrottles once more turned toward the door of Brent's office.

"He ought to be here—he certainly ought to be here," the confidential manager mused. "I can't make it out." Then, somewhat uneasily, he telephoned the janitor. Five minutes later, the door having been opened by the master keys on the janitor's ring, Mr. Philip Scrottles entered the office and started hastily toward the table by Mr. Brent's desk. Two envelopes lay there. He picked up the smaller, read the note it contained, and then motioned in an agitated manner for Mr. Brent's stenographer.

"I can't make it out." His voice was husky. "You read it, Miss Sylvester."

The stenographer rustled briskly by Mr. Brent's closed desk to the table. Her brows contracted as she read. She compressed her lips and allowed her eyes to roll a bit as she laid the note back on the table—without comment. Scrottles waited impatiently.

"Well?" he asked.

Miss Sylvester spread her hands and shrugged her shoulders. She said nothing. Scrottles again picked up the offending bit of paper, gazed at it fixedly, and then pushed it into the hands of Miss Sylvester.

"Read it out loud," he ordered, and his voice was a bit strange. "I couldn't see well—without my glasses."

Miss Sylvester obeyed and read:

Dear Scrottles: In the long envelope you will find power of attorney to act for me in all things except the merger as long as I am away, which may be a long time. The merger which is coming up can be delayed by you as you see fit. I don't care whether we merge or not. I don't care about anything. School can keep or it can let out, just as it chooses. You needn't fly up in the air and look for me. I'm all right. Maybe you will get some satisfaction out of the inclosed ad. I would have talked to you about this thing in person, but you would have called an ambulance and had me put in the private ward.

"That is all," said Miss Sylvester slowly.

"Read the advertisement," came in a strange voice from across the table.

The paper rustled again as Miss Sylvester held the bit of finely printed paper to her stenographic eyes.

Wanted: Small, red-haired, freckled-face, barefoot boy of about sixteen years, to act as companion to a man of forty-five years who is forced to turn back the clock. Must know how to fish, swim, hunt, and live in a cave if necessary. Imperative that he is a country boy who has never lived in the city. G-111, Chronicle.

After that for ten minutes there was silence in the private office of Mr. Thomas Brent. Then Philip Scrottles wandered unsteadily to a window and stood looking out.

"Give it out that he has gone to Europe," he said at last. "Nobody will believe a sane man could do such a crazy thing. What are we going to do I don't know. I guess I will have to look for him myself, and bring him back. That's the only way—"

"Where will you look?" asked Miss Sylvester with a quick upward jerk of her head.

"I don't know," Scrottles said with a sigh.

CHAPTER III

In the Jutting Ledges

Indian creek strolls along through bluff and prairies—mostly the former. And cleft in the highest of these, one hundred feet by a sloping footpath above where the reflection of the shimmering moon told of the water, there sat that night two figures.

Their faces were lighted from the glow of the fire which blazed cheerily on the ledge they had made their resting place. The great rocks behind them were dark shadowed and formed a background of almost overpowering weirdness. Beyond gaped the darkness, of a small cave, or, rather, a sheltering hollow in the jutting ledges of rocks. The heads of both figures were bare. One was much so, because it wore a crown of baldness. Both shirts were open at the neck. Both pairs of feet were short of covering—but in them was a great difference. Those of the boy were brown and calloused, while those of the bald one were gingerly extended, toes rampant, splotched with marks of purple and blue.

In a park at St. Cloud, near Paris, a memorial to the famous Lafayette Escadrille is being constructed. Sixty acres have been set aside for the monument, which is being built as a result of an endowment provided by a New York and Paris lawyer, at a cost of about $125,000. There will be a main arch of over seventy feet, with facades on which will be inscribed the names of both the living and the dead members of the Escadrille.

We're Goin' to Gran'ma's!

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

It won't be long buffore we go
To Gran'ma's house again;
An' say, I guess you oughter know
We'll have a big time then!
They live way back in Illinois;
That means we'll drive it in
About two days an' then—Oh, boy,
The fun 'll just begin!

Our ol' home town is full o' folks
That treat us awful good—
Invite us to their house, an' coax
Us kids t' eat. I could Eat all the stuff they want me to,
But mother shakes her head,
'Cause she knows if I ever do
I'll hafta go t' bed.

There's lots o' cousins waitin' there
For us t' come an' play;
We'll be on pop'lar everywhere
We'll hate t' break away.
An', gee, it's fun out on a farm!
We run a mile or more
An' there ain't nothin' we can harm—
Nor neighbors to get sore.

But where I'm anxiouser t' be
Than any other place
Is at my Gran'ma's house, an' see
The smile that's on her face.
She'll be so glad t' hug us all
She'll hafta stop an' cry;
An' then I'll hear my Gran'pa call,
"Well, who's all this? Hi-yi!"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

STIRRING WITH A KNIFE

"Stir with a knife; stir up a strife."

This rhyming piece of old-time superstition is still firmly believed in by a great many people. It is especially prevalent in some rural districts—and is of ancient descent. The superstition has its root in imitative magic in which our barbarian ancestors were particularly strong. Seeing effects only, and ignorant of causes and yet convinced that causes must exist, they adopted the homeopathic doctrine of "like produces like," imitating what they desired to produce.

In those days a man's knife was not a table implement; it was his weapon for strife with wild beast and with his fellow man. In the old Teutonic dialects the word "stir" has, besides its present meaning, that of "to destroy," "scatter," "disturb." In the depths of that vast and gloomy forest which once covered Europe from the shores of the Baltic a savage ancestor of yours stirred up something with his knife in imitation of what he was about to do with that same knife to his enemies, upon whom this stirring up ought to have a homeopathic effect. So today it is a barking back to a belief in imitative magic which makes us say, "Stir with a knife; stir up strife."

That's a few thousand years in the life of superstition.

Diagnosis

Johnson—So your baby is ill? What's its ailment?

Jackson—The doctor said it was rickets, but from the noise it makes I'm pretty sure it's rackets.

Messrs. Doolan and Daley were examining a building.

"Doolan," said Daley, pointing to an inscription cut in a huge stone, "pwhat does thim litters MDCCCC-XXIV mane?"

"That," replied Mr. Doolan, "manes nointeen hundred an' twinty-four."

"Doolan," said Mr. Daley after a thoughtful pause, "don't yez t'ink they're overdoin' this spellin' reform a bit?"

Wife.—Well, John, I see they are appropriating a lot of money for snow removal this winter.

John.—Where'd you see that?

Wife.—Haven't you heard all this talk about slush funds?

A woman in the suburbs was chatting over the back fence with her next-door neighbor. "We're going to be living in a better neighborhood, soon," she said.

"So are we," volunteered her neighbor.

"Why, are you going to move, too?"

"No," said the neighbor. "We are staying here."

The Kansas City lawyer, whose office was on the tenth floor of the skyscraper, was expecting a client from the country. The door opened and the client entered, puffing violently. "Some walk up those ten flights!" he gasped.

"Why didn't you ride up on the elevator?" asked the lawyer.

"I meant to, but I just missed it!" was the answer.

She.—No sane person can understand this map.

He.—Let me see it.

I'm going to give you this violin."

"An out-and-out gift?"

"Absolutely! No strings to it!"

John.—Just burned up a $100 bill.

Demijohn.—You must be a millionaire.

John.—Well, it seemed easier to burn it than to pay it.

Hard Guy (in street car).—Why don't you put your feet where they belong?

Harder Guy.—If I did, you wouldn't be able to sit down for a month.

The following sign is displayed above the ice-cream counter of a prominent drug store:

"Take a brick home; it's fine when company comes".

"Rhubarb," wrote a youngster, "is a kind of celery gone bloodshot."

Fresh.—What would you do if you were in my shoes?

Senior.—Get 'em shined.

The traveler had returned to his native village after being abroad for twenty years. He stopped as he saw a little boy with a small baby coming down the road.

"Ah! a new face, I see!"

"No, it isn't, sir," replied the boy looking at the baby. "It's just been washed; that's all!"

WHAT IS PERPETUAL CARE?
PERPETUAL CARE is a sound, scientifically fixed method of maintaining each lot and grave in a beautiful condition forever without additional expense to the lot owner.
Cemeteries without PERPETUAL CARE become miniature jungles soon after all lots are sold and often before.
Cemeteries with some lots PERPETUAL CARE and adjoining lots without such care soon become unsightly. Cemeteries of small acreage with promised PERPETUAL CARE dependent on some contingency will be found equally unsatisfactory.
Cemeteries with a PERPETUAL CARE PLAN which guarantees that as each lot is sold the agreed amount of PERPETUAL CARE is immediately deposited in the Official Depository at which time the fund at once begins to earn and ever thereafter continues to earn the required upkeep is the only safe cemetery in which to inter your loved ones.
Why bury your loved ones in cemeteries with no or partial PERPETUAL CARE? Why not avail yourself of MEMORIAL PARK'S ASSURED PERPETUAL CARE?

JUST A LITTLE POLITICAL DOPE

Situations have arisen in Columbus during the past week which have caused considerable embarrassment to leaders of both political parties. On the Democratic side the veto of the Chappelear election code and the state library appropriation have brought a storm of disapproval, not only from Republican forces, but from Jeffersonian as well. The governor asked for the election code and the charge of bad faith insofar as senator Chappelear is concerned is as bitter as gall, as the senator is regarded as being a type of representative as high as ever sat in the senate.

The trouble around the Republican table is of different nature. Charges against former Secretary of State Brown have brought criticism from many sides, some favorable to him and others unfavorable. The majority opinion seems to be that whatever the merits or demerits of the case, they should have been brought out while Brown was in office and when whispered charges were made prior to the last primary election. The charge is that money from automobile tag sales was held in banks longer than the period described by law and that the former secretary and banks are liable for the interest.

But what is more discouraging to Republicans is that the charges made involves several potential candidates for governor next year. Former Secretary Brown charges that Deputy Auditor Sliver attempted to use the same accusations to aid in the nomination of Myers Y. Cooper. If this is true, Mr. Cooper knew nothing of it. This correspondent personally heard Mr Cooper demand of those associated with him that personalities were not to be tolerated. And, during his campaign, Mr. Cooper kept the faith himself. In the present action, if brought against Mr. Brown, State Auditor Tracy, Attorney General Turner, former Attorney-General Crabbe and others are likey to be involved.

The "calling of names" and some of the actions of the general assembly have elected "Vic" Donahey three times. If straight from the shoulder talk is in order, it will do it again: if the bitterness of the last pre primary is allowed to enter Republican leadership ought to be looking for a "big stick," a term that has been allowed to die out all too woon.

From what is considered an authoratial nomination next year. This, comptive source, it is learned that Governor Donahey will have a solid delegation an Ohio's candidate for the presidential nomination next year. This, coupled with the inside dope of erudite newspaper correspondents at the capital, means that Congressman Martin L. Davy, of Kent, will have Democracy's unqualified support for governor without a primary fight, a strategy the Democrats have used numerous times since 1912. That is to say, the Democratic party in Ohio holds conventions, even now.

As the old "country editors" would say: "Things are blamed funny." No less authority than the State Highway Department, calls attention to the fact that summer use of roads will increase 250 per cent. That will be fine for the gas tax increase and maybe it will mean close to $5,000,000 for new road construction before the year is closed. Great applause

This correspondent would like to sound a warning note, if possible, on some of the road construction. (Ever drive between Marysville and Kenton on No. 21?)

What is the use of spending as much each year for "dragging" and "filling," or whatever they call it, on main highways? It's a drain on the county, the municipality and the abutting property owner. Why should not Ohio, as in Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and other states, make her main highways of a durable and hard surface type of road? Why not, as other states, eliminate the cost of maintenance? Why should it be in Ohio that 51% of the total of 30% of state expenditures for roads be for maintenance? These are questions asked by those interested in road building. Why should they not ask?

In line with their long standing policy, the Redpath management is presenting an exceptionally strong program on chautauqua's opening day this season. The Filipino Collegians and Arthur Walwyn Evans are the attractions.

Mr. Evans was born in Wales and in this country, as well as in England and Scotland, he was educated. While still a young man he was sent as a special evangelist by the Church of Scotland to the Shetland Islands. For several years he preached in various parts of Great Britain. During the world-famed Welsh revival he spoke nightly to an audience of 5,000 in Music hall at Aberdeen.

His lecture, "What America Means to Me," stirs latent patriotism and sends the hearer home prouder, if not "chestier."

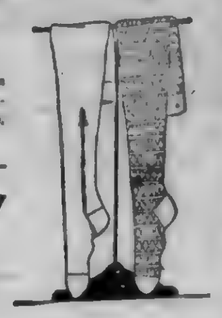
A MAN WHO CAN

by O. LAWRENCE HAWTHORNE

Let me be known as a man who can—
As a man who is eager to try!
I may not finish what I began,
But the spirit of do-it-or-die
Will take me far in whatever game
I chance to play in pursuit of fame.

Let me be ready for any test,
Any problem that duty shall bring.
I may not win, though I do my best,
But defeat has a less bitter sting
For him who knows that men do succeed
Whose hearts are true to a noble creed.



Let me be willing to fight my way
To the goal I have chosen to gain.
The path may prove to be hard each day
And my efforts may seem all in vain,
But I shall know what it means to feel
The ceaseless urge of a great ideal.

Let me so live that the world will see
In the record I'm leaving behind,
No sign of fear or despondency,
But high courage of heart and of mind.
Consistent with a progressive plan,
Let me be known as a man who can!

THE BOSSY COW

"I belong to Mahalia," said the cow, "and I tell you I'm mighty fond of her.

"She's just the dearest little girl in the whole world. Her voice is so sweet and her manners are so sweet and she is so kind and gentle.

"She laughs, too, and she knows how to have a good time. She is a great one for a joke and everyone around her always feels merry and gay.

"Why, even though I am only a cow, I feel better the minute Mahalia comes around me."

"Don't you belong to the farmer?" asked the neighbor cow.

These two cows were talking to each other.

One was in a pasture on one side of the fence and one was in a pature on the other side of the fence.

For these cows did not belong to the same farm. They were chatting across the fence in a most neighborly fashion.

"I am owned in a way by the farmer, of course," said the first cow. "But my real owner is little Mahalia. Her

Chatting Across the Fence in a Neighborly Fashion.

Daddy said she could call me her cow.

"For I have always been her favorite cow, and she says I will always be her favorite cow.

"She can milk me too. Oh, yes, and she says that the milk and the cream and the butter I give are the best in the world.

"But I must tell you of the little girl who came to see Mahalia. The little girl's name was Nelly.

"Nelly was being shown over the farm by Mahalia.

"'And now,' said Mahalia, 'I am going to show you the most wonderful animal on the whole farm, and she is my animal, too. She is my dear Bossy Cow.'

"Then Mahalia pointed to me, and she said:

"'She is my pet. She knows me when I call her. She will follow me, and you know a pet cow isn't usual.

"'She is most certainly not usual. She is too wonderful to be usual.'

"I was just as proud as could be when I heard this, and then, what do you suppose that Nelly said?"

"I can't imagine," said Neighbor Cow. "I'm sure I can't possibly imagine. Moo, moo, moo, do tell me."

Nelly said, continued Mahalia's cow:

"I wouldn't want a cow for a pet. I've a kitten at home, and the kitten is my pet.

"'Why, there's nothing pretty about a cow. You can't take a cow in your lap. And a cow isn't cute. I wouldn't want an old cow for a pet.'

"Well, you should have heard Mahalia. I didn't know what she would be able to say, for I knew she would want to stand up for me, and yet the words that Nelly had said were true, though I didn't like them at all.

"Mahalia spoke up quickly, and said:

"'I wouldn't have a kitten in exchange for my cow. I wouldn't have any pet in exchange for my cow.

"'Why, a kitten drinks milk, all right, but a cow gives milk.

"'Just think of the number of lives a cow saves every year. Yes, a cow gives milk so that babies and children and grownups, too, may be strong and live long.

"'That's what my Bossy does, too. I can't take her in my lap, but I can put my head close to hers, and I can pet her just as well standing up.

"'I don't care for a cute pet. I want a pet just like my cow, a pet who thinks of others and a pet who is good and gentle and sweet.'

"Well, Nelly had nothing to say to that but when Mahalia came to me and kissed me, and I smiled at Mahalia in my cow way out of my big eyes and gave Mahalia a kiss, Nelly said:

"'Well, your cow is nice, though she's a funny old thing for a pet.'

And Mahalia said:

"'She may be a funny old thing for a pet to you, but to me she's my own dear Bossy Cow.'

"And I can tell you, Neighbor, that made me happy. Sometimes I used to think I was a big clumsy, stupid sort of a creature, but since Mahalia spoke as she did, I know that I, too, am of some account in this life.

"It has certainly put new life, as they say, into me, and given me heart to go on with my work.

"And, oh, above all, it has made me a happy, happy cow, for Mahalia—the sweet Mahalia—loves me!"

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

Crochet crepe paper hats! Are you rubbing your eyes and looking again to see if you have read aright? Yes, of paper! What is more, they are not only as handsome as one would wish, but practical and wearable as well. To make them is a fascinating pastime. Of course this crepe twist has been processed to make it durable and as usable as raffia.

The hat to the left in the picture is crocheted in single plain stitch, such as are the visca hats which are at this moment among the smartest of millinery items. To make this model one must begin by crocheting a circle which measures four and one-half inches from center to edge. Anyone accustomed to crocheting understands how to do this. First step is to chain two, then join. Make four stitches in this ring and join. In order to widen, every so often two stitches must be made in one. After the twenty-ninth row, no more widening is necessary, so continue by making one stitch in every stitch (this is for the side crown) until this hood or cap measures eight inches from the top center to the edge. Bring this to proper headsize by skipping a stitch now and then. Add one inch to front of crown, by starting three inches from center back, crocheting around hat crown to three inches from center back on opposite sides. Then break thread and start second row one-fourth inch shorter at each end and each succeeding row one-half inch shorter for six rows. Then make one row all around. This completes the crown. The cuff or brim is widened and designed according to the ingenuity of the one making it.

When finished, brush the crown (inside) with liquid paste to stiffen it. The creases that help shape the crown are put in while the hat is still damp with paste. A transparent coat of varnish will give a glossy straw effect and will help make the hat shower proof.

The star-stitch is used for the other hat in the picture. This is a loose fanciful stitch requiring several loops thrown over the needle, then brought together with a slip stitch.

For the bags shown one can get them stamped as pictured to the left or one can buy canvas by the yard and cut to fancy. They are embroidered with crepe twist the same as if using raffia. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

COPYRIGHT W. G. CHAPMAN

Neither the man nor the boy had spoken for a few minutes. The younger person was busy attaching the white meat of two frog saddles to two forked sticks preparatory to roasting them. The older man's mind was busy in thought.

"Freck," he began in a complaining sort of voice, "my feet hurt."

"Stone bruised, mebbe," came from the boy. "That's always the way, though, when you first take off your shoes. They'll toughen up after a while. I know Jennie says when I first take off my shoes in the spring I look like a bow-legged goose on a hot griddle."

Mr. Brent, undergoing the first painful stages of his metamorphosis, stared glumly ahead, "Who's Jennie?" he asked.

"Why, Jennie's my sister," "Freck" returned. "She's older than I am—she's twenty-one. She works in the city, but she comes out every couple of weeks to see ma and me. I guess if ma hadn't looked at Jennie and seen what the city had done for her I wouldn't have been here now."

The bruises on Mr. Brent's feet absorbed his attention too much for him to delve into Freck's conversation to any depth. He merely grunted while the boy went on.

"You see, ma knows that Jennie knows what's what and she's just been thinking lately that maybe the place ain't nice enough for Jennie to come to visit us in. So she wanted to get a new rug for the parlor, but, bah! we haven't got any money. So when I got a chance to take this job I took it. Five dollars a week would help out lots.

Mr. Brent had looked up quickly. "I didn't say anything about five dollars a week," he broke in. "I said four-forty. By George! If I'd go to the end of the earth, there would be somebody nagging me for money."

"Beg your pardon, sir, but I wasn't nagging." Freck interrupted. "You said you would give me four-fifty now and five if I gave satisfaction."

"Well, you haven't given satisfaction yet," Mr. Brent said, adding, however, with a little twinge of conscience, you are a pretty good boy, though. What are you going to do with those frog legs?"

"I'm going to cook 'em. See, here's yours and here's mine." Freck handed Mr. Brent his forked stick with the frog leg dangling on the end. "We'll brush the fire away a little so we can get down to the embers and hold 'em over and let 'em roast."

Mr. Brent doubled up on the ledge, felt himself taking rather an elephantine interest in the doings of his young companion.

"Then what?" he asked.

"There won't be any 'then what' after that," said Freck. "We'll just eat 'em." A moment later he added: "It's going to rain."

Mr. Brent looked at the young prophet with a queer expression in his face.

How do you know it is going to rain?" he asked, casting a glance upward. "I can't tell whether there are any clouds or not."

Freck moved his frog leg closer to the ember. "Can't you hear that rain crow? " he asked.

Mr. Brent listened. "I thought that was some one chopping wood."

"No; it's a rain crow," said Freck. "You'll get so you'll know all these things after a while. Screech owls, and rain crows, tree toads and all them things. You'll like it fine after you get started."

There was a snort. Mr. Brent had almost ruined his frog leg by jamming it into the very ashes for emphasis. "Yes; I'll like it," he broke out sarcastically. "I'm crazy about this sort of thing. I love living this way. Yes," he said, "I'll like it, I'll like it."

"We're Going Through It," Freck Announced as He Saw the Speck of White in the Distance.

"Well, you will," Freck protested. "I know that's just the way it was with Mr. Edwards when he and Jennie first came out to visit us. He used to laugh and make fun of us, but I'll bet you if he had a chance to get a little farm he'd be tickled to death all right.

"He's Jennie's beau," Freck added. "He works in the city—in a foundry or something of that kind, if he ain't got fired since I saw him last. He says they got the meanest boss in there that ever was. He doesn't even let 'em breathe almost. He's been trying to get a raise, Mr. Edwards has, so he can marry Jennie, but he hasn't got it yet. I don't think he will get it." Freck's voice trailed off while Mr. Thomas Brent glared at the fire.

The very mention of buiness had brought back all his worries, all his uncertainties. "Scrottles won't be able to handle the plant right," he was saying to himself. "He'll let the force do him in spite of everything. Well," he added in a resigned sort of way, "I guess it doesn't make much difference to me one way or the other. If I go in there and attend to things, it'll just about kill me off, and I'll lose the money anyway. If I stay out here I'll probably lose the money and get killed off just the same. Six of one and a half dozen of the other. Huh," he grunted after his reverie, and looked up. "What sort of a fellow is this Edwards man you seem to think so much about, Freck?"

Freck's eyes glowed. "Oh, he's a smart man. He tells Jennie lots of times what he'd do with the business if they'd give him a chance. He says they throw away twenty-five thousand dollars a year, just wasting it, but they won't give people enough salary to keep 'em from starving to death. I bet he'll make 'em see what he's good for some day."

"Foundry business?" Mr. Brent asked. "What foundry?"

"I don't know—it's one of the biggest one's there:"

"Edwards—Edwards," Mr. Brent repeated the name. "I guess it's just because it's a common name that it sounds familiar to me. I haven't got any competent people in my employ. Nobody in the whole shop knows enough to pound sand into a rat hole."

"Burning your frog leg," Freck broke in.

Thereupon thoughts of mergers and the foundry business were dropped for a time while Mr. Thomas Brent, capitalistic invalid, gingerly began to chew upon the browned and well-cooked flesh of a frog saddle, and after the first bite was forced to admit to himself that frog legs cooked over live embers on a forked stick were rather good after all.

CHAPTER IV
Under Cover

An hour later, in spite of the discomforts incident to a first day in the woods, Thomas Brent was undergoing a feeling of half contentment for the first time since he could remember. The meal which had started with frog legs had ended gloriously with light bread and cream gravy cooked by Freck. And the strangest part of it had been that, although Mr. Brent approached every bit of food gingerly and with suspicion, and with many maledictions against the physician who would send him there, he kept on eating and relishing just the same.

Freck was nodding a few feet away. Mr. Brent allowed his eyes to travel upward toward the tree above him, then far down to where the stream lay.

"Freck," he asked presently, "don't I see a light down there?"

Freck rubbed his eyes, gazed hard, even stepping out of the range of the fire that he might see the better. "Yeh," he answered authoritatively. "It's a light."

"What's it doing there? I hear somebody talking—sounds like a couple of women."

Freck started back again to his place against the rocks. "Guess it's old Mammy Taylor and Mammy Bacon. They come out here crawdadding once in a while."

"Crawdadding? What's that?"

"Catching crawdads. They're little hard-shelled things with flippers on that live in the water." Freck tried his best to give as vivid a description as he could. "We'll get some of 'em tomorrow. We've got a lot of things to do, Mr. Brent. We got to go swimming, and hunting, and rob birds' nests, and lot of things."

The answer was only a grunt from Mr. Brent. He closed his eyes and soaked in the sounds of the night, the faint screeching of an owl in the faraway hickories, the droning of the crickets, the lapping of the water, and the ripples far below.

Freck's voice at last aroused. "Guess Mammy Taylor and Mammy Bacon are going to stay all night. They've built a fire."

The teredo, the shipworm which does great damage to ships, piers and wharves, has small, hard shells in its head which form a drill powerful enough to bore into the hardest wood

The large increase in the sales of lumber from national forests is due to the exhaustion of private supply and the consequent demand of industry on national forests for supplies, says Colonel W. B. Greeley, chief of the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture. More than a million board feet of timber were cut in national forests within the past year.

Chautauqua Opens With Musical Group From Philippine Islands

FILIPINO COLLEGIANS

From America's far-away island possessions, the Philippines, have come the native instrumentalists who are to entertain on chautauqua's opening day. The stage will be set with a typical Philippine scene and the boys of the company will appear in garb that is characteristic of their home life.

Among the peculiar native instruments used by this company are the bass guitar the mando-cello, the mandola and the banjo-guitar.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

AN ITCHING PALM

If the palm of your right hand itches you are about to receive money. "And you yourself are much condemned to have an itching palm," says Brutus to Cassius in Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar." The superstition is venerable and flourished by the Nile and the Tiber before it saw the Thames or the Hudson. A Greco-Roman amulet of a hand in the British museum has carved on the palm an altar with three cakes, an offering to the gods invoking prosperity.

When we use the expression "an itching palm" as Brutus used it to Cassius, and as we use it with regard to our friends, it means that the person referred to is avaricious and not particular as to how he comes by his money. But when our own palm itches—why, that's another matter: we content ourselves with saying that money is coming to us and ignore the details.

The whole superstition is one of suggestion and association. It originated before the days of paper money, when all money was "hard." A coin taken in the hand, presses upon the palm as the hand closes upon it. The sensation produced becomes identified with possession. Any tingling of the palm subconsciously recalls the sensation, thereby arousing the idea of money in hand with which it is identified. The natural wish for money makes it prognostic. It is the right palm that prophesies because, generally, we use the right hand in accepting money.

New Confectionery On Sullivant Avenue

A new confectionery opened last Saturday at Sullivant and Oakley avenues under the name of "The Oakley Den." They are carrying a full line of confections and groceries and serve lunches at all hours.

O. E. Reed, formerly in business at 1245 Sullivant Ave., is manager of the new store. Mr. Reed has been a resident of Columbus for the past 35 years.

NEW CLEANER ON THE MARKET

P. L. Roush and J. H. McLean, Hilltop residents for the past 15 years and in business at Sullivant avenue and Highland, announced last week that they have a new kind of cleanser ready to be placed on the market.

It contains no lye and is perfectly harmless. It also contains ingredients that heal cuts and bruises and leave the hands clear and soft. Many workers and housewives that have tried it are very well pleased with it.

Mr. Roush and Mr. McLean have been experimenting on their product for the past two years and now have it perfected.

After more than four months of traveling through jungles and mountains, Dr. Matthew W. Stirling's Dutch-American expedition into the heart of Dutch New Guinea discovered the villages of hitherto unknown pygmies. These Negritos of Africa are very good-natured and kind to strangers. They have no iron but use stone implements, and bows and arrows are their usual weapons. Their business is agriculture, and they raise a kind of white sweet potato, besides sugar cane, raspberries, tobacco, and other provisions. They have a custom forbidding certain groups of people to speak with certain other groups. An elaborate sign language is used between these groups.

Claims Sewer Order Is Discrimination

To the Members of City Council, Columbus Ohio.

Gentlemen:

You will recall that on March 21 last your body passed a resolution directing the service department to enforce an ordinance of 1907 against property owners on the Hilltop. As I understand it, this was done to provide a temporary relief from sewer conditions on the Hilltop. Being an owner of property affected by this order I wish to enter protest against it for these reasons:

1—The order is discriminatory unless ALL property in Columbus is ordered to be disconnected from sanitary sewers.

2—Roof drains connected with the sanitary sewers have been acceptable to and permitted by city authorities for the last 20 years. Indeed, I have but recently received information that the practice is still being permitted in the city. Are present owners to be penalized for doing or continuing the very thing which the city itself has permitted?

3—Compliance with your order will cost property owners of the Hilltop from $80 to $100 and there is no certainty that COMPLETE temporary relief will be given by so doing. In other words Hilltop property is to be made to pay this amount of money for an experiment.

4—Not one cent of the $1,000,000 collected by a special sewer tax has, to my knowledge, been spent on Hilltop sewers, although Hilltop voters expected some return when they voted for the levy.

5—Your own engineering department and Service Director Duffy have recommended the construction of a new trunk sewer to serve the Hilltop and to provide permanent relief, but no action has been taken thereon.

6—Plans for a joint city-county sewer have been completed and county commissioners are ready to proceed as soon as the city takes definite action.

In view of the foregoing, may I respectfully urge upon your body to rescind its action of March 21 and to substitute therefor an immediate and definite action to proceed with the construction of a new trunk sewer as recommended by the engineers and service director.

FOR THE PUBLIC'S CONVENIENCE

Opportunity to Subscribe to the Support of Holmes Hilltop Library Will Continue.

During the past several weeks a committee of Hilltop citizens have been working to raise by subscription $1500 for the maintainance of our library for the coming year. In last week's Record it was announced that the canvass of the business district had been completed.

The canvass of the residence sections has been slow largely due to the fact the canvass was made during the busy season of the year for those on whom we have to depend, the housewives, hastily tied up with house cleaning. In spite of this many volunteered and much of the territory canvassed. A few streets have not been canvassed yet but an effort is being made to complete these this week.

To accommodate those who were missed in the canvass and those who made a pledge it is being arranged with a number of Hilltop business houses to receive contributions. A complete list of these places will be announced in next week's Record. A placard in these stores will identify them and assure the contributor prompt and courteous attention. Each contributor will be given a receipt which will be made in duplicate.

We know this method will appeal to those who are interested in our library and have not yet had an opportunity to subscribe.

R. P. Rauch, chairman.

SCOUT CAMP TO OPEN JULY 2

Camp Ro-Fre-La to Be Under Direction of Edwin J. Bath, Columbus Scout Executive.

July 2 will see the Boy Scouts of Columbus returning to Camp Ro-Fre-La, the 200-acre Scout reservation, 20 miles north of Columbus between High street and the Olentangy river.

The camp opens for its third year of operation since its presentation to the Boy Scouts by Jeffrey Lazarus in honor of his mother and father, Rose and Fred Lazarus.

This camp is located on the site of an old village of the Wyandott Indians, who selected the location for its natural drainage and protection. On two sides deep ravines and on another a 1000-year-old Indian mound mark the campus for the deep woods that rise beyond.

This summer's camp will be under the supervision of Edwin J. Bath, Columbus Scout executive.

Phil B. Weaver, local assistant scout executive, will act as camp director. Weaver is an expert in camping and runs one of the best camps in the middle west.

Walter J. Caldwell, athletic director, is again to be in camp to put over his fascinating program of water and land sports, consisting of baseball, volley ball, tennis, horseshoes, track meets, swimming meets, water polo, water baseball, canoeing, rowing, diving and instruction for beginners in the art of swimming.

A. W. Elliott, business and field executive of the Columbus Council, Boy Scouts of America, is again to plan the wholesome menu to be cooked by Pullman dining car cooks.

To direct the nature department comes Francis S. Widrig of Detroit. In 1924 and 1925 Widrig was assistant supervisor of nature study in the public schools of Cleveland Heights. In 1926 he occupied the same position in the Detroit public schools.

The department of campfire dramatics, music and pageantry will be under the supervision of W. E. Knepper, a student at Ohio State university. Assisting him will be Lloyd Reber of Ohio State.

J. Robert Long, scoutmaster of Troop 14, Indianola M. E. church, and a grad ate of Ohio State university, will direct the keeping of records. Jake Helm, senior patrol leader of Troop 25, South High school, will be director of handicraft under the supervision of Elery Grutt, chief woodcraft director. Helm will also be instructory of archery.

Elery Grutt, manual arts instructor of Indianola Junior High, will lead the handicraft projects of the camp. Jack Taylor of Ohio State university will assist.

Every opportunity for advancement in Scouting tests is made possible in the practical school period from 9 to 11 in the morning. Every staff member devotes his time during these hours to instruction and examination in the tests of Second, First and Merit Badge ranks.

Outdoor cooking and fire building, rustic bridge building, surveying, archery and nature hikes feature the program that can only be possible in the great out-of-doors.

The all-round good camper is awarded the White Swastika emblem. This coveted honor is all the more sought by campers, for there are secret trails and midnight initiations that lure one on.

Good Indian, the highest camp honor, is open only to White Swastika members who become expert campers and render signal service to the camp.

Camp Ro-Fre-La will continue from July 2 to August 26, there being four periods of two weeks each. Any boy, whether he be a Scout or not, provided he is 12 years old or more, is eligible to the camp.

ANNUAL MISSION CONVENTION

United Evangelical Missionary Societies in Session Last Week.

The Ohio branch of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary society held their annual convention at St. Paul's United Evangelical church on South Warren avenue from June 16 to 19, inclusive.

A very interesting program was arranged. Interesting Thursday evening specials were: The welcome address by Mrs. Byerly; the response, by Mrs. D. B. Wilson, from Canton, and the annual address given by the branch president, Mrs. H. D. Shultz.

Friday evening Mrs. G. Wes. Marquardt of Allentown, Pa., was the principal speaker. Ethel Porter of Findlay, Ohio, gave a reading; Miss Evelyn Dauber and Mrs. Wagner, Akron, Ohio, sang a duet and the local auxiliary presented the pageant, "The Challenge of the Cross."

Saturday evening Rev. A. E. Fenning, a returned missionary from Tibet, gave an illustrated lecture of his work in the foreign field. This field of labor is especially hard, and only men are accepted as missionaries there, and so far they have not been able to get beyond the borders of Tibet.

There were three services on Sunday. Rev. W. E. Seesholtz of Canton, former pastor of St. Paul's church, preached the morning sermon; Mrs. G. Wes. Marquardt gave the address in the afternoon, at which the two little Rex girls of Akron sang, and Juanita and Helen Lee of Findlay provided a special number.

The Sunday evening address was given by the returned missionary, Rev. Fenning. After hearing of the many difficulties to which the missionaries are subjected, one is impressed that there truly is a need for the spreading of the gospel in all foreign countries, and much prayer and finances are needed for the work.

The local senior and junior choirs, the male quartet and Miss Evelyn Poulson, as soloist, provided the special music throughout the convention. The convention proved a blessing for all who attended. A large delegation from Akron and Findlay came for the Sunday services.

The following are the state branch officers for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. H. D. Shultz, Columbus; vice president, Mrs. D. B. Wilson, Canton; recording secretary, Mrs. L. F. Lee, Findlay; corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. J. Broadway, Columbus; treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Courtney, Knox, Pa.; organizer, Mrs. D. B. Wilson, Canton; superintendent of Y. P. M. S., Mrs. H. E. Dauber, Akron; superintendent of M. B., Miss Verda Hershberger, Canton; superintendent of Cradle roll, Mrs. Charles Ebersole, Akron.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. G. Lyday, 65 S. Westmoor Ave., entertained fifty-eight guests at dinner Sunday, June 19 in honor of their fifteenth wedding anniversary. The guests included: Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Rowe and children, Emily Jane, Susan and Maurice of Zeesburg, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Leach, Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Ella Griesheimer, Chillicothe, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Neff, Mr. and Mrs. Elgy Redman, Derby, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis and children, Jay and Joanne of Mt. Sterling, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Johnson and children, Margaret and Homer, and Misses Pauline and Ines Nelson of Homer, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Ditrick, Mr. and Mrs. V. B. Ditrick and children, Eugene, Gilbert, Warren, Dale, Doris and Calvin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller and sons Harry, Roy and Billie, Mrs. O. L. Wilkins, Mrs. Ella Smith, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Lorch, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Allbright and Master Malcolm Lorch, Orient, Ohio; Mr. Mark Bailey, East Liverpool, Ohio; Miss Dora M. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Leach, Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Fairchild, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Westerman and son Leslie, Mrs. Iona Allis and son Donald, Miss Payster, and Vieman and Marvin Lyday of Columbus.

Carload Sale of Living Room Furniture

The Hilltop Furniture Co. will this week demonstrate that things can be done in carload lots on the Hilltop. They are offering in a two-day sale, Friday and Saturday, a carload of living room suites. Their ad on page 8 of this issue tells the story.

Mrs. Earnest A. Cady and son Charles, 102 Whitethorne Ave., returned Saturday, June 18, from Brighton, Ohio, where they were guests of relatives for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Lyday, 65 S. Westmoor Ave., entertained 58 guests at dinner Sunday, in celebrating of their fifteenth wedding anniversary.

The Thumb Route

Thumbing it is no longer a mere way of travelling but is now a profession of college students during their intervals between cities.

• • • •

Why not go a step farther and call it an institution? And we feel that, as a well deserving institution it should be preserved and protected for college students only.

• • • •

Most everyone can recognize the difference in the genuine collegiate thumb and that of impersonators.

• • • •

Another difference in the rah, rah boys and the fakers is that college boys don't even have the price of a black jack or pistol. This is one great reason why people should strive to keep our collegiate thumb moving and give a helping lift.

• • • •

If its companionship you want just pick up the thumber. He'll talk on any subject you care to discuss and just think of all the late snappy college stories you can hear without buying College Humor.

• • • •

Thumbing is the major of most college education today.

• • • •

Since variety is the spice of life this mode of travel does away with boresome long rides with the same person.

• • • •

If you ride over 160 miles with the same person you should ask to get out. Just look at all you are losing by not making more friends along the road.

• • • •

Beggers can't be choosers but that's the reason why the collegiate thumb is careful the kind of car it hails. Only high powered sixes or eights can be handled easily since Fords are too slow.

• • • •

Last week I rode with a farmer I had hailed the week before and asked if he was making the same trip again and he answered yes. He hadn't been home from the week before yet.

• • • •

If a man fails to pick you up it's not more than proper to just pucker up and whistle.

• • • •

Rumble seats are wonderful accommodations to us thumbers. When you get home you can tell people you got your coat of tan at the sea shore.

• • • •

Thumbing is just another opportunity Abe Lincoln wasn't exposed to. No telling how great he would have been had he have been so lucky.

• • • •

Lindbergh will no doubt lend his support to air thumbers when we advance to that stage.

• • • •

The only disadvantage to airplane thumbing is that it'll be pretty hard to change cars if you should get tired of riding with one person.

• • • •

More power to the collegiate thumb. May it be respected!

How It Started
By JEAN NEWTON

"HYPOCRITE"

The hypocrite today may be, indeed, he usually is, a good actor. He may be an artist in dissimulation; but if so, it is a shameful art and one that is looked upon with nothing but contempt. Originally, however, the hypocrite found nothing derogatory in the appelation, for it named an honorable calling and described an artist in the right sense of the word.

The word comes from the ancient Greek, where hypocrisy meant acting a part on the stage. The more artistically a role was performed, the more perfectly a player concealed his own personality in that of the character he was supposed to assume, the greater artist he was acclaimed to be and the more he was lauded by the people of his beauty-loving race. The "hypocrite" of old was the Hampden and the Barrymore of today.

Little did the lovers of the Greek theater dream how their good word would be perverted and corrupted in the centuries to come.

Dream Play Full of Thrills on Chautauqua's Second Day

SCENE FROM "A MESSAGE FROM MARS"

Richard Ganthony's great drama, "A Message from Mars," is novel in both conception and treatment. It is the story of the redemption of a disagreeably selfish man. It is a dream play with many thrilling situations and with considerable humor. Someone has remarked that "there never has been a kindlier or more helpful message presented on the stage." There are no triangles in the play; there is no unpleasant romancing, but when it is all over a good taste and a warm heart are left with each listener.

Among the interesting characters, in addition to Horace Parker, the man of self, are the aunt who can work herself into a frenzy at a moment's notice —giving fine opportunity for comic acting—and the tramp, who "goes 'arves." There are seven people in the New York cast which is to present the play at chautauqua.

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK

Perpetual Care — THE BURIAL PARK BEAUTIFUL — Non-Sectarian

The purchase of a cemetery plot is an obligation that sooner or later will have to be met. Being indispensable, it is better attended to when we may, than when we must.

The time to make such a choice is when there is opportunity for deliberation and wise selection, not when distracted with grief, or perhaps financially inconvenienced by reason of expenses necessarily incurred at such a time.

It is a comforting thought to the survivors to have a place of interment already secured at MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK, and the management has fixed prices at a very low figure that can accommodate all, no matter what their circumstance, and the plan by which purchasers can arrange for terms of payment makes the cost hardly noticeable.

LIBRARY DRIVE TO CONTINUE

Sixty Per Cent of Budget Has Been Subscribed to Date, Survey Shows.

A survey of our recent campaign for funds for the Holmes Hilltop Library reveals that less than 50 per cent of the homes on the Hilltop have actually been solicited, although most of the streets have been covered. Solicitors report that in their calls on various streets as low as 40 per cent of the homes were entered and a much smaller perventage gave.

We are all living in a busy age and it is hard for people to give much time to charitable causes. However, we want to pay tribute to those who have given of their time and energy to this work.

The budget for this year has been about 60 per cent subscribed or pledged. The committee is continuing its appeal and continuing its slogan. "A Dollar from Each Home."

Arrangements have been made with the following business houses to receive and give a receipt for any subscriptions. When you see the following announcement in a place of business, pause to think whether you have done your bit:

PLAYGROUNDS NOW OPEN

New Ones at Dana Avenue and Westgate Make Total of Six for West Side.

The twenty-five city playgrounds under the direction of A. W. MUCH COMMENT ON SEWER ORDER

Many Property Owners Believe Order to Disconnect Roof Drains Is Unjust.

Considerable discussion and comment has been going the rounds of the Hilltop relative to the notices sent to a number of Hilltop property owners by the city service department to disconnect roof drains from sanitary sewers, in accordance with a resolution adopted by city council March 21, 1927, authorizing and directing the director of public safety to cause notice to be served on each property owner on the Hilltop whose roof water drains into the sanitary sewer.

Some residents feel that it is unjust to require them to go to the expense of disconnecting these drains when the city building inspection department permitted and passed these connections at the time the buildings were constructed, and that it is an unjust discrimination against residents of the Hilltop in asking them to disconnect roof drains from sanitary sewers when the same practice (so we are informed) is now permitted in other parts of the city.

Others feel that were they assured the disconnections would give permanent relief in the matter of flooded basements on the Hilltop they would willingly go to the expense of making the necessary alterations without any protest.

However, Chief Engineer Simpson, in his letter to the director of public safety under date of March 7, 1927, which follows, states "A new trunk line must ultimately be built from the sewage disposal plant to the Hilltop, in order to take care of the territory now developing west of Hague avenue and south of Sullivant avenue."

SIMPSON'S LETTER

March 7, 1927.

Director of Public Service:

1. Since the recent complaints of flooded basements on the Hilltop, we have been looking into the question of sewer relief in this section of the city, with a view of ascertaining what could be done to afford, immediately, some substantial relief. The results of this study show that if we can divert the water now getting into the sewer through the perforated manhole tops and through leaders from the roofs of about 40 per cent of the buildings, to the streets and then into the storm drains, there would be a very substantial relief from basements being flooded by the backing up of the sanitary sewers. The attached report by Mr. Bonney, which has been approved by Mr. Gregory, our consulting engineer, goes into this matter in considerable detail and is submitted herewith.

What a whale of a difference just a little water makes when it's in your basement. It seems that we have "sewers, sewers, every where" but not a one of proper size. The question is, to disconnect or remain as is. It all appears, to be added weight on property owners.

LICE ON CITY FOLIAGE

Cool, Wet Weather Cause of Plant Pest Epidemic, Says City Forester.

Complaint of many Columbus residents that their trees and plants are suffering from an epidemic of plant lice caused City Forester Underwood and Service Director Duffy to issue a warning Friday against the use of strong sprays or solutions that may harm the trees more than the lice.

Hot dry weather makes treatment of any kind unnecessary, Underwood said.

Plant lice are generally most abundant during a cold wet spring and the attack usually does not continue after the first spell of hot dry weather," he declared.

"Most shade trees suffer from plant lice, especially the Norway Maple. These insects multiply very rapidly, suck the juices of the leaves and shoots and so exhaust their vitality.

"When the insects become abundant the honey dew excreted by them sometimes covers the leaves. This excretion tends to clog the foliage so that it may drop while perfectly green."

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

THE BEAUTY SHOW

For the first beauty show, the original ancestor of that now popular modern institution, we must go to the pages of Greek mythology and the award which caused the Trojan war!

It all started when Eris, the Goddess of Discord, enraged at not being invited to a certain wedding, threw among the guests a golden apple marked, "For the most beautiful." Juno, Venus and Minerva each made claim, and Jupiter, who was expected to make the decision wisely passed the buck to Paris, the beautiful shepherd.

All three goddesses went to Paris, on Mount Ida, where he tended his flocks. Juno promised him power and riches, Minerva glory and renown in war, and Venus the fairest of women for his wife. It was Venus who got the golden apple, and, under her protection, Paris went to Greece as the guest of Menelaus, king of Sparta. It was Helen, the wife of Menelaus, whom Venus had destined for Paris. And now Paris, aided by Venus persuaded her to elope with him, and so started the Trojan war, the subject of the greatest poems of antiquity.

Speaking of modern beauty shows, the one held at Spa, Belgium, in September, 1888, appears to have been the first. There were three hundred applications, we learn, and a French girl took the prize.

Newspapers are to be delivered on board transatlantic liners before they come to dock in New York Harbor. The United States mail boat, President, which meets the incoming vessels at Quarantine to take off mail, will deliver metropolitan papers so that travelers can read them in the last few hours on board, while they are waiting for the boat to dock. The only news received by the passage from Europe is the brief notices from the ship's radio, and transatlantic voyagers are always eager to get in touch with the world's politics and business again as quickly as possible.

Home-Town Friends

By O. Lawrence Hawthorne

It don't ever make much dif'ence
Where you go, you'll always find
That yer home-town friends 're faithful,
Though you leave 'em far behind.
Mebbe you won't know they like you
Very much, for years an' years—
Mebbe not till death or sickness
Or some other grief appears;
But it's then they prove the sayin'
That, no matter where you roam,
There'll be someone glad t' help you
When you turn again towards home.

There'll be friends you had forgotten—
But their hearts have been so true
That it's part o' their religion
Jus' t' be a friend t' you.
Mebbe you won't understand 'em
An' you'll treat 'em kinda mean,
But I hope yer heart 'll tell you
What yer eyes had never seen.
Life may bring you many blessin's,
But there's few that can compare
With yer home town an' the friendship
That's a-waitin' for you there.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

IN THE AQUARIUM

"I am going to tell you a story of the aquarium tonight," said the Sandman.

"The aquarium, you know, is the home of many members of the fish family. This is a big city aquarium I am now speaking about, though of course there are little aquariums, too."

"Yes," said Nancy, "for I call my fish bowl where my two gold fishes are an aquarium."

"Of course," agreed the Sandman.

"Well, in this big aquarium there have been many new arrivals, some sea robins, toad fish, a new pipe fish. The pipe fish daddies help the mothers carry the little pipe fish eggs about and are really very useful pipe fish daddies. Their heads are something like heads of sea horses and they are relatives of sea horses.

"It Was a Great Joke," Said Louis Lobster.

"Spider crabs have also been added later, and some lobsters and some puffers.

"There have been some new arrivals in the blue crab family and some fine young brown spotted lady crabs, and spider crabs have arrived.

"The spider crabs are so named because their long legs have a kind of mossy hair upon them which is something like a spider's web, though others say they look something like spiders and that is why they are named, so you may take your choice here.

"But it is of the talk between two lobsters that I want to tell you about.

"'It was a great joke,' said Louis Lobster, 'and how I did laugh in my lobster fashion when I first heard it.'

"'Tell it to me,' said Leon Lobster.

"'You see,' Louis Lobster continued, 'some one wrote a story about lobsters. Now the only lobsters which had been seen by the one who made the pictures of the lobsters were the lobsters all ready boiled and ready to eat.

"'Of course, such lobsters are red.

"'But the one making the pictures never thought that lobsters were any other color at all at any time.

"'And so the lobsters in the pictures were painted red and they were supposed to be in the sea and were supposed to be adventuring lobsters, and not ones ready to eat.

"'Wasn't that absurd? But at the same time, it was a little sad.'

"'It was perfectly absurd,' said Leon, 'but why sad?'

"'Sad,' said Louis, 'to think how little some people know of lobsters!

"'Now, here was some one with a great talent for painting and yet some one who knew nothing about lobsters!

"'It was so dreadfully ignorant. Almost as though one knew how to skip a rope but didn't know who discovered America!

"'Almost as ignorant as that.'

"'Almost,' said Leon, 'but not quite. Still it is strange to think how ignorant people can be of such important creatures as lobsters.'

"So these two lobsters went on talking in the aquarium while the other fishes there looked their best for the visitors.

"And after a bit the fishes all sang the great aquarium song which goes like this:

Splash, splash, splash,
We certainly eat dash.
We wear so many colors bright,
We look indeed a gay fish sight.
We're of all sizes and all kinds
Some of us are really finds,
Splash, splash, splash
We certainly eat a dash.

"And then the two lobsters sang this duet:

We're the lobsters and you must know
That when we're alive and on the go,
We're not red as some of you think,
But we are green, just like green ink!
We're only red when we're boiled to eat,
When alive we wear green costumes so neat,
And please remember how we look
When we haven't met the lobster cook!

"And then once again all the fishes in the aquarium sang the great fish chorus which goes like this:

Hooray, hooray, hooray,
We're splashing fishes gay!

Talks Health and Makes You Like It

MRS. LOUISE L. McINTYRE

The chief interest of this speaker, announced for chautauqua's second day, is the dispensing of health in doses of facts, all bound 'round with a sugar-coating of psychology and humor. During recent winters she has had classes of approximately 1,000 in Los Angeles and surrounding territory. In 1919 she was associated with the Michigan State Board of Health, and in 1920 she was with the Illinois Health society. She also spent a season in Newfoundland doing special nutrition work among the people in the outposts of Fortune Bay.

Mrs. McIntyre is to appear twice at chautauqua. A morning address will include practical suggestions on how to keep fit. Her afternoon talk will raise the question "How's Your Health?" and will lay down some vital rules for those who would keep in trim.

LACE IN ITS EVERY PHASE WILL GLORIFY THE MODE

Lace has come into its own. For several seasons past the air has been rife with rumors of a coming vogue for lace. The long-looked-for has happened! Lace in its every phase will glorify the summer costume. Not only does this apply to lace as a trimming, for the vogue is also destined to sweep through all fashionland. Nor is the lace-mode confined to evening wear, indeed no! The very latest idea is that of the plaited all-over lace-skirt, attached to a lace-trimmed chiffon blouse, over which is worn a matching lace jacket or bolero with long sleeves. This ensemble is carried out in either black, beige or light gray.

As to the sleeved black lace dress, its name is legion. Here's a suggestion: Buy several silk underslips, a black one, a white one and several favorite tones or tints, thus enhancing the value of the frock as ready for every occasion. Why not have the sleeves made a detachable, thus again scoring a clever move?

So much, and much more for the daytime frock of lace, but what of the ravishing evening gowns all of lace which have entered the summed fashion panorama!

No need to be in quandry as to dress, for lace is the answer. The gown in this picture suggests a pretty styling for lace of any color. The gypsy girdle of taffeta is a smart detail.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

COPYRIGHT W. G. CHAPMAN

"That's enough," grunted the man, and started back to shore. Ten minutes later, panting and exhausted, he dragged the woman up on the bank and left her there as he started for the other.

Once again there was a struggle, once again he went under, this time with Mammy Taylor, both to flounder and to blow water like porpoises. Then, reaching the shore again, Brent stood angrily defiant. "Now!" he shouted.

"Yeh, now!" came back in feminine tones. "Now we'se gwine to lay out sheah an' get struked wif lightnin'. Yeh, now."

"Gwine git pnoomonia, dat's what we'se gwine git!" came from Mammy Taylor.

"Shut up!" yelled Mr. Brent.

"We'se gwine die ob de pnoomonia."

"Gwine die," chanted Mammy Taylor.

"Gwine die," added Mammy Bacon.

"An-n-n-n-n-n go to Hebbin!"

"Gwine die!"

"Stop that singing!" ordered Brent angrily.

"Gwine leave us—" began Mammy Taylor again with two-hundred-flesh power.

"On de bank!"

"All a-lone!"

"Oh-h-h, gosh!" The exclamation was Mr. Thomas Brent's as he seized Mammy Taylor and half dragged her to her feet. "If you're going to sit out here in the rain all night instead of doing the sensible thing, well, grab hold of something."

And thus the start up the hill to the cave was made. Thus it was begun, but thus it was not finished. They went twenty feet and then slipped back ten! then thirty and slipped back twenty. Puffing, blowing, trying to talk and merely gasping, Brent clung to trees, bits of shrubbery—anything that would help him with his hefty burden.

At last he succeeded, placed the chattering figure in the cave by the side of the sleeping Freck, and turned to go down the hill again. And he repeated his former descent, with the difference of receiving a few more bumps.

Once again at the bottom, Mammy Bacon was waiting, chanting again, singing hymns of the camp meeting, while her eyes glowed white and big in the flashing of lightning, and her clothing ran more and more water with every fresh outburst of rain. Mr. Brent pulled himself to his feet and tried to size up the burden that he must haul to the top of the hill. It was impossible in the darkness. He merely grabbed, managed to seize an arm and started.

A half hour later, a huddled, miserable figure of a man sat hunched in the darkness on the little ledge beyond the cave. The rain had changed to a drizzle now, but that, instead of helping, only made his clothing cling to him the more uncomfortably and clammily. He vaguely felt that his body was black and blue and purple. He knew that every muscle twitched and that rheumatism was beginning to get out its sledge hammers for classy work in various parts of his anatomy. His stomach was craving for food that did not exist. His lungs were still sore from their puffing. His bare feet were bleeding. From within the cave were coming sleepy sounds:

"How's yo' all, Lizzie Taylor?"

"Ah's all done wrapped up in dis yere blanket. How's yo'?"

"Ah's comf'table. Ah done guess we'll have to call that man de sailah 'cause he done kem out in his lifeboat an' saved ouah lives."

Outside the man of many bruises and discomforts snorted.

Again came the sounds from within.

"Lizzie—"

"Mm-hum-m-m-m."

"Dat sho is a lovable man: Ah'm gwine give up his cave lak dis yere."

"Who is, Sallie."

"Know what Ah's gwine do? Ah'se gwine t' plump right out theah an' frow mah ahms aroun' him. He sho' wouldn't mind ol' Mammy Bacon."

It was right at that moment when Mr. Thomas Brent, former cave dweller, sent his hands spasmodically into the air. "Back to nature!" he ruminated angrily again as his prize sore toe bumped into a jagged stone on the downward descent. "Back to boyhood! It's back to town for me!"

CHAPTER V
Confidential Agent

A deep, satisfied snore from within the cave seemed to answer Mr. Brent's decision and sent into his brain a flare of anger that grew with every second. He turned and looked into the darkness. His face was scowling. He shook a fist that palpitated with pent-up rage, and then like a turtle dropping from a log he let himself slide over the ledge and down the muddy foot path.

"I can't get any dirtier, I can't get any muddier, I can't get any wetter, so what's the difference where I land?" he growled as he bumped about here and there in his downward descent.

Now and then he would strike a tree or large rock which would hold him and allow him to steady himself for a moment. Then he would go slipping on again. At last he reached the bottom and began a groping, tortuous journey toward the railroad tracks a mile away.

Suddenly He Started. A Shrieking Whistle and a Circle of Light Shone Upon Him.

"I might as well be lost down here as sitting up there on that ledge like a ninny," he grumbled. "I'll find that railroad track if it takes me all night. I'll—" He had bumped into a barbed wire fence and was hanging there something like a quarter of beef on display in a butcher shop.

Daintily he got his bearings, and cautiously [illegible] showed before him the dark [illegible] railroad "fill." Slowly he crawled over the fence and then, something after the fashion of a half-careening sidewheeler, he touched his feet to the rock ballast and started on the long tramp to Dodson, the nearest railway station.

"The next time I listen to a doctor," he burst forth time and time again. "I'll—Ouch!" He had bumped his sore toe against a railroad tie, and further comment upon physicians and medicine were lost.

The storm had died down to a drizzle now—a cold drizzle, which made Mr. Brent uncomfortable and shivering. He rammed his hands deep into his pockets and hunched his head deeper in his shoulders and limped along staring moodily ahead at the faint strip of gray which told of the railroad's course through the darkness.

Suddenly he started. A shrieking whistle had come from behind and a circle of glaring light shown about him. Hastily he retreated from the track to stand in the dripping weeds and underbrush and gaze enviously as a comfortable, bright-lighted thing of steel and wheels whirled past him. Then with mincing steps over the rock ballast he took to the tracks again, shaking a trembling fist at the disappearing train.

"Fool!" he howled at himself. "Idiot! Maniac!" A mile dragged by. Two, three, four, five, and there showed before him the red and green lights of the station. He approached the door, reached for the handle, and then paused with an inarticulate howl on his lips. He had stubbed that favorite toe again. "Doggone it," he muttered "I'll—" He stopped.

From around the corner had come the sound of a voice that seemed familiar. More than that he had heard his own name. Thomas Brent suddenly began to take an interest in life. Quickly he slunk out of the circle of light made by the telegrapher's lamp and into the shadow of a loaded truck. He had not been seen, he knew that, yet someone had called his name. Again he heard the voice. Did the station agent know anything? It was a strange tone, yet one that seemed to carry a vague memory. Mr. Brent listened closely as the answer came.

APPLE CROP IS SUB-NORMAL

Reports Indicate Crop Prospects 25 Per Cent Less Than Last Year.

Prospects for the apple crop throughout the United States are 25 per cent less favorable now than they were for the 1926 crop in June of last year. The crop promises less than the average crop of the past 10 years, it is reported by C. R. Arnold, rural economics extension specialist at the Ohio State University, on the basis of recently nation-wide estimates.

Apples at this time last year were reported to promise 78 per cent of a normal crop. This June indications are for 57 per cent of normal, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Average for the past 10 years is 70 per cent of normal.

MICHIGAN CROP GOOD

Only one leading apple state—Michigan—reports a crop likely to equal last year's.

Ohio, normally producing about 5 per cent of the country's apple crop, reports apple crop conditions this June as 56 per cent of normal, as compared with 82 per cent in June 1926. Virginia and West Virginia, which compete with Ohio to some extent, say apple crop conditions are 50 and 31 per cent, as compared with 70 and 76 per cent a year ago.

Although industry has regained a great deal of lost ground in Germany since the World War, there are a million and a half people there still without employment, according to the report of the United States Ambassador to Germany.

MUCH COMMENT ON SEWER ORDER

2. Under date of Dec. 13, 1924, there was submitted to the city council a report on sewer relief in the Hilltop section of the west side, which was based on the policy of permitting the storm water from roofs to enter the sewers through present connections, and this report, which is on file with the city council, shows that a complete relief to the Hilltop section can only be obtained by constructing a trunk line from the sewage disposal plant to the Hilltop and a number of lateral lines to divert a considerable part of the sewage flow from the present laterals. This method of relief is estimated to cost about $490,000. Of this amount $240,000 is the estimated portion that the city would pay toward a joint city-county sewer, and $214,500 is the estimated cost of constructing the branch lines referred to.

The situation on the Hilltop is so acute that we feel council should determine on some policy of relief at an early date, and both plans are submitted herewith for the purpose of consideration by the city council. If council should decide that the present roof water connections be undisturbed, we can get no substantial relief until a new trunk line has been constructed from the sewage disposal works to the Hilltop. On the other hand, if they should decide to follow the recommendation of our consulting engineer, which is submitted herewith, immediate relief could be obtained for all of the built up section of the city. It would also mean that the territory not sewered at the present time could be improved by constructing a pumping unit which would pump the sewage into the Sullivant avenue trunk line so that there would be no delays in the development of this new territory.

I wish it clearly understood, however, that a new trunk line must ultimately be built from the sewage plant to the Hilltop, in order to take care of the territory now developing west of Dingue avenue and south of Sullivant avenue, but that if the roof water leaders are disconnected the construction of this line should be deferred for some years, or until this new property has been built up.

R. H. SIMPSON,
Chief Engineer.

DUFFY'S LETTER TO COUNCIL

In a letter to city council under date of March 14, 1927, Director of Public Service W. H. Duffy, whose department was "authorized and directed" to serve the notices, writes as follows:

March 14, 1927.

To the Honorable City Council:

Herewith letter from city engineer, reference to sewer relief in Hilltop section, together with recommendation of engineer in charge of sewer relief, which recommendation has been approved by our consulting engineer.

The undersigned does not concur in the recommendation of the engineers that "all roof water now connected to the sanitary sewers be disconnected immediately" for the reason that in his report, the engineer states that "96 per cent of the houses having roof water connections to the sanitary sewers made their sewer connections subsequent to August 27, 1907." If this is correct, why were these violations of the plumbing code permitted? Is not the city at fault through the laxity of the officials charged with the duty of enforcement of the plumbing code? These property owners who in good faith, no doubt, made these connections in violation of the code, are now to be compelled to disconnect roof water from sanitary sewers at considerable expense. We cannot agree that this action would be fair or just.

If the property owners affected should agree to this suggested method of bringing about immediate temporary relief, I believe that they should be encouraged to do so, but as the engineers agree that it will be necessary to build a new trunk line ultimately to bring about permanent relief, I recommend that council take the necessary action to authorize the construction of the new trunk line at as early a date as is practicable.

W. H. DUFFY,
Director of Public Service.

The county engineering department has spent $6400 in preparing plans for a proposed city-county sewer to extend from the sewage disposal plant northwest across the Hilltop and out as far as Rome, and we are informed is ready to go ahead with the project. This proposed plan called for a sewer of 45 cubic feet per second capacity to care for both storm and sanitary sewage water.

In the meantime city engineers are proposing a sanitary sewer for the Hilltop of 10 cubic feet per second capacity, which perhaps would take care of the sanitary sewage, but would not care for the storm sewage as our storm sewers are now notoriously inadequate.

As to the type of sewer to give relief to the Hilltop sewer situation we do not attempt to say, but it is evident that the city and county engineers should come to an agreement that will give permanent relief to the situation and then get busy.

ASKS RULING ON BOND INVESTMENT

City Auditor Otto has requested City Attorney Leach to define the limits within which the city may invest its unexpended bond balances as provided under a bill passed by the last general assembly, effective in August.

Under the legislation it is believed that Columbus will be able to invest its unexpended bond balances by taking up portions of contemplated and authorized issues of the year, thereby decreasing the bond liabilities of the city. The financial effect of this will not be felt for several years, it is believed.

PLAY PARKS VERY ACTIVE NOW

Sewing Classes Started; All Materials and Instructions Are Free.

New faces continue to appear daily to swell the crowds at the various Hilltop playgrounds.

Volley ball and baseball seem to be the games played by the more active group on the playgrounds although there are facilities and games for every person.

Glenwood has some new closed in baby swings that are ideal for children and quite a few mothers are enjoying many hours daily swinging their little tots.

The new slide has also attracted its share of children. Horseshoes and tennis are calling forth large numbers and indications point to the fact that Glenwood will have some real contenders in the city wide tournaments in the late summer.

Parents and children on the Hilltop have as fine a set of playgrounds as there is in the city. If you have not already visited the various recreation centers do so at an early date for you will surely find many good times waiting for you there.

Sewing classes on all the twenty-five city playgrounds were started this week.

All children between the ages of 9 and 14 who are interested in sewing may register in these classes. The classes are free and the needles, thread and sewing materials are furnished all members of the group by the city recreation department.

Embroidered towels, laundry bags, and designed apron patterns will be made by the classes. Quilted pillow tops, bags and princess slips are also included in the plans for the summer's work.

Mothers on the Hilltop are urged to encourage their girls to register for these classes.

The hours for the sewing classes are:

Glenwood—Wednesday 10:30 a. m. and Friday 2 p. m. Miss Ruby Miller will be the supervisor in charge.

Holton Park—Monday and Wednesday at 2:15 p. m. Mrs. Holmes, supervisor.

McKinley—Monday and Wednesday 3:30 p. m. Miss Wildermuth, supervisor.

$500 FIRE LOSS

Clothing Among Articles Destroyed in Powell Avenue Fire.

Fire from an unknown source ravaged three rooms in the home of M. T. Swain, 843 S. Powell Ave., about 8 o'clock last Thursday morning.

One room was completely damaged and two others were partly damaged by smoke and water. The greater part of the loss which was set at nearly $500 came in the destruction of winter clothes which were stored away in a closet. Two new overcoats and two new suits along with shoes, bed clothes and a set of books were completely destroyed.

An investigaiton brought firemen to the conclusion that the blaze was caused by either poor wiring or spontaneous combustion due to the hot weather.

DEDICATE HALL AT "Y" CAMP

$40,000 Club House and Athletic Field Presented to Boys; Camp Classes Begin.

The dedication of the new Pettigrew Hall and Athletic Field at Camp Alfred L. Willson on Lake Mac-O-Chee, near Bellefountaine, also marked the formal opening of the first camp summer school in Ohio.

In this unusual summer school, whose classes are to meet on mornings of week days except Saturday, swimming and science, French and fencing, arithmetic and archery are effectively combined in an interrelated program that increases the boys interest and proficiency in both studies and sports.

Two special classrooms, rustic in finish and overlooking a forest containing some of the finest oak trees in the state, adjoin the main lounge and auditorium of Pettigrew Hall. Many of the boys' parents and friends spent all day Sunday as the guests of the camp, exploring its 205 acres of woods, meadow and lake; swimming, boating and fishing in Lake Mac-O-Chee, and visiting surrounding points of interest to which the boys hike frequently—the historic Mac-O-Chee Indian castles, little known Black Lake, Ohio Caverns and Zane Caverns.

When they gathered in the huge auditorium for the formal dedication exercises Sunday afternoon, they overflowed onto porches on three sides of the building.

Opening the dedicatory exercises at which G. Edwin Smith, president of the board of directors, served as chairman; Fred Mayer, the camp bugler, sounded the assembly call, and K. A. Schumaker, state Y. M. C. A. secretary pronounced the invocation. Following a reading from the Beatitudes by George Schoedinger, another of the boy campers, were the first two numbers of an unusually appropriate musical program.

Ralph D. Allen of Denison University, who is a full-blooded Pawnee chieftain in his own right, and is well-known both as soloist with the Denison Glee club and as a vocal instructor, gave "Trees" and "My Task." Appearing later in a native costume made for him by his mother, he demonstrated the lyric qualities of his remarkable tenor in the unaccompanied minor cadences of three Indian songs.

As quietly as though he were saying, "Now I want you all to have a good time," E. S. Pettigrew arose, protesting against the making of any speech at all, and formally presented his gift of the $40,000 club house and athletic field to Camp Willson and its boys.

Presentation of camp colors was made by Attorney C. A. McCleary, as a member of the board of directors, and Bill Montgomery, another of the boy campers, expressed the exceptance.

In his dedicatory address, Dr. M. H. Lichliter, of the First Congregational church, pointed out the value of the contacts with actuality and with nature secured at Camp Willson as being secondary to the contacts and influence of the college men chosen as camp leaders and to that of Harry L. Spyker, head of the boys' department of the Central Y. M. C. A. and director of Camp Willson. Both Mr. Spyker and Mr. Pettigrew were given tumultous ovations by the boys.

While enroute to Barbarton early Sunday morning the Hupmobile touring car driven by Frank L. Wolford, 402 S. Ogden Ave., was struck by a traction car at Stratford and carried for about 25 feet down the track.

There were nine people in the car when struck and all received a jolt but none were severly injured. Mr. Wolford was cut about the arm and Mrs. Wolford received a cut in the head which required several stitches. Thelma, age 17, a daughter, was cut and bruised. A small son, age 7, and daughter, age 5, were also bruised.

Mrs. Wolford said her husband had been very careful in crossing the tracks along the way but the traction car loomed up before them so quickly that none could see it in time to avoid the accident.

On last Tuesday evening about 7:30 the car of Frank J. Borwitz of 36 S. Hague Ave., met a similar accident as he turned into his drive at his home. A passing speeder failed to see him in time and the result was several bumps for both cars but no great damage.

Don't crowd folks!

Early Wednesday morning, long before the doors opened, a large crowd was assembled in front of Seiller's store so as to be able to cash in on the many bargains offered in their annual July Bargain Carnival.

The adage "The early bird catches the worm" seemed to stand before the several hundred that lined up before Seiller's doors Wednesday morning. A steady stream of buyers continued to keep the sales force busy all day.

When he grabbed the thieves, one of them threw the money over a banister of the grandstand. Sherburn entrusted the thieves to bystanders and went to recover his money. While in back of the grandstand a man intimating he was a policeman escorted the thieves through the crowd and when Sherburn returned they were not to be found. The money was recovered but the thieves are free.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

"Yes. We're on the right track. But I think we'd better go up to the hotel and stay for the night and start our active investigations in the morning."

Thomas Brent knew that voice. It was Philip Scrottie's, and as he came to the realization the president of the Amalgamated Foundry company, wiggled his sore toe in pure excitement. Then he ceased the exertion that nothing might interfere with his hearing. The other man was talking now.

"Just what did you find out, Mr. Scrottie?"

"Well, I described Mr. Brent to the agent and it seems that a man of his description got off the train here day before yesterday morning lugging three or four baskets. There was a boy with him, too, and that's about the only way we can hope to trace him—through the boy."

Then came the other voice: "They are liable to be in any one of a hundred places, and the only thing we can do is to stay around here until we learn that boy's haunts and then trace them out. We've got to get his signature to that thing, and we've got to have him in there to send it through. Now you are sure that you stand with him all right, are you, Mr. Scrottie?"

The injured toe sprang into activity again—and then ceased at the sound of the confidential manager's voice. "Yes, he's trusted me in everything. I can get him to do it, all right. He won't see through."

"What does he place the plant at now?" the other man questioned.

"He figures it about a hunred thousand shy of what it is. I believe if I talk hard enough I can get the place away from him for four hundred thousand dollars. That's two hundred thousand less than it's really worth. You would have to split the difference with me if I got it."

There was a pause for a moment, and in that space of time all the colors in the rainbow flared through the angry mind of Thomas Brent. Scrottie, the man he had trusted for years, was false. This was the reason that items which should have gone into the profit column had gone into that of loss. The man whom he had trusted to work between him and the plant at large had been really working against him. He had been a traitor.

The gyrations of a music master could not have equalled then the twitching of Mr. Brent's injured toe as he came to this realization. A wild desire was in him to leap out, grasp the offending employee by the throat and shake vengeance out of him, but something held him back. The voice had begun again.

"We'd better wait until morning before we do anything," the stranger was repeating. "Then we'll get hold of this kid's mother, find out where he's liable to be, and go after him. I think that is best."

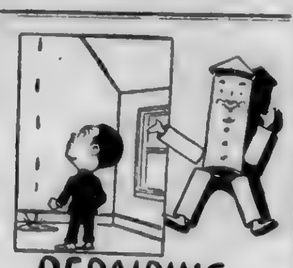
Together they moved away into the darkness, leaving the owner of the Amalgamated Foundry company palpitating behind the truck.

"You thieves!" he cried as he shook his hands in the air. "You holdup men! You pickpockets! You thugs! You blackmailers! You robbers! You purse snatchers! I'll—I'll—I'll—Blame me if I'll do anything of the kind," he ended up shortly.

For a moment he remained in thought, a trembling sort of thought, as it were, in which his whole body shook agnelike. At last he swung his head with that doggedness which had characterized his business life.

"No; I'll not go back there and fight 'em," he said at last. "I'll let 'em run their game as long as they want to run it, and then I'll rise up and swat 'em—like a fly. That's what I'll do," he added with some satisfaction in the thought. "I'll swat 'em hard.

"Where in the world have I heard that voice!" He rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Where have I—Brady!" he exclaimed suddenly and slammed a hand on the truck. "Brady, that's who it was—Brady of the Kelly-Griggs company. They think they'll take me in four hundred thousand, do they? Well, they won't. I'll just let them chase themselves before they get me in on the deal. Brady, huh!" He swung his arms something after the fashion of a windmill. "Woof! Get me back to town to throw away a hundred thousand dollars, huh? Not if I know it! Not by your red bandanna!"



He whirled and started back down the railroad track. Suddenly a sudden thought hit him and he almost ran. "Those crawdadders!" he exclaimed.

Steadily he pushed forward. Now and then he stubbed his sore toe against a jutting tie and groaned with the pain of it. But the exclamation came through set teeth, for Thomas Brent, with a determined air, pushed on.

"Sting me for a hundred thousand, will they?" he repeated time after time. "Yes; they will—not!"

Large Crowd Hears Talks on Hilltop Sewer Situation

City Engineer Simpson Explained Situation From Standpoint of Engineering Dept.

Organization for Permanent Sewer Relief for Hilltop Headed by Alexander.

The intense interest taken by people of the Hilltop in the Hilltop sewer situation was demonstrated Friday evening when the K. of P. hall at Burgess avenue and West Broad street was crowded with residents of this section eager to be enlightened and gain all the information they could in order that they may reach a just conclusion in a matter which, to them, seems to be in quite a muddle.

Just where the trouble lies or who seems to be to blame for the deplorable condition of the sewer situation in this section was not brought out to the satisfaction of the property owners present.

City Engineer Simpson made the main talk of the evening and after reading extracts from opinions and conclusions reached by the engineering department answered many questions put to him by property owners, although at all times his answers were not to the satisfaction of his listeners.

Mr. Simpson stated that we would have no trouble from the sanitary sewers on the Hilltop if the roof drains were disconnected and throughout his talks maintained that that was the thing to be done, and left the impression with many property owners that that thing would have to be done.

Mr. Simpson made the statement that complete relief for the Hilltop could only be obtained by construction of a trunk line sewer and laterals leading into it, the cost of which is estimated at $454,490.

Councilmen Webe, Lewis, Zimpfer were not engineers and of course and Karnes were guests at the meeting and in short talks offered their sympathies and deplored the conditions existing in this section and offered their assistance in remedying the situation in any manner that they could, and defended themselves in voting for the ordinance by saying that they were not engineers and of course took the advice of the city engineering department as their guide.

Councilman Lewis disagreed with Mr. Simpson in his plan of relief and stated that he was in favor of a combination city-county sewer which Mr. Simpson was of the opinion would cost the city around $240,000, and let the roof drains remain as they are which would naturally correct itself in the remodeling and improving of property already built.

Why the Hilltop section is not getting any relief from the bond issue passed a year or two ago was not answered satisfactorily.

There seemed to be no question that a law has been violated in the city departments permitting roof drain connections into sanitary sewers, but as to the responsibility for this violation, was another question.

Nevertheless it was Mr. Simpson's contention that it was up to the property owners to stand the cost of correcting the violation and that the city could not appropriate money to make improvements on private property.

Commissioner Westlake was the only county official present at the meeting and while respecting Mr. Simpson's ability as an engineer, emphatically disagreed with him in the matter of his plans for sewer relief in this section and maintains that there is as much trouble from the storm water as from the sanitary sewer water, and cited one instance where water was in a Broad street residence basement 13 hours after rain had ceased to fall.

It was voted, just before the close of the meeting, to make the organization a permanent one, to be known as the Hilltop Permanent Sewer Relief Committee, and elected J. A. Alexander, of Richardson avenue, president of the organization and R. D. Hastings, secretary.

The president was empowered to appoint a comittee of six to act with him in devising ways and means of furthering relief for the Hilltop. Mr. Alexander named the following men to serve on the committee: H. G. Butler, 2842 W. Broad St., Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., W. G. Davis, 73 S. Burgess Ave., John Burkett, 2527 W. Broad St., C. F. Bigham, 2714 Sullivant Ave., and F. B. Smith, 256 S. Terrace St.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B Hayden of Mt. Gilead were over Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Olive Kaufman, 47 N Harris Ave.

Mr John Shruman, 91 N. Terrace St., has returned home from Grant hospital.

Small Thefts

A loss of $5 in cash and clothing valued at $5 was reported to police by M. Reed, 328 N. Ogden Ave., Sunday. The thieves gained entrance through an unlocked window.

H. H. Watkins, 234 Hague Ave., also reports that $22 was stolen from his home and Mrs. Charles Hults, 28 N. Hague Ave., states that she found a man entering her dining room through a window but when he saw her he ran.

TO INVESTIGATE BUS SERVICE

Business Men's Association Indorses Green for Council—Haunts Previously Indorsed.

The Hilltop Business Men's Association held their regular monthly meeting on Tuesday night at the Matsonia on West Broad street. After a very delightful dinner, various discussions were entered into concerning the Hilltop.

The question of feeder buses for the territory west of Hague avenue was discussed and the conclusion reached was that the placing of these buses on West Broad street temporarily would be approved by the property owners, but street car service is much more desired. The danger of placing the feeder buses in this section would be that street car service would be delayed for several years. W. L. Millikin was appointed to secure the services of a lawyer and investigate the situation.

At this meeting the candidacy of Floyd Green of Crescent Drive for city council was indorsed by the association. R. G. Haunts was indorsed at a previous meeting.

The nominating committee reported that C. M. Painter and Bob Lane would be candidates for president at the next election of this body.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Davidson and sons Claude and Virgil, Mrs. Ida Williams of St. Marys visited Tuesday and Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Williams, 266 S. Warren Ave.

PICNIC PLANS TAKE FORM

"Bigger and Better "Picnic Assured, Hilltop Business Men Report.

Plans for the "Bigger and Better" Hilltop picnic to be held on Aug. 24 are rapidly taking form as is shown by the action being taken by the Hilltop Business Men's Association.

At their regular meeting on Tuesday night at the Matsonia, Fred L. Sulzberger, general chairman of the picnic committee, gave an outline of the affair as it stands to date. Reports from various members as to the buying of the food assures us that no one will go away hungry. Among the list of good eats is listed, of course, the roast meat, but of more interest to the children is the fact that over 300 pounds of peanuts will be given away free.

Mothers are showing an unusual interest in the baby contest, so Mr. Sulzberger reports. Dr. Craddock, assisted by Drs. Cratt, Grace Jordan and Straushaugh will conduct this part of the program. Mothers wishing to enter their babies should have them examined as soon as possible. Silver loving cups will be awarded to the winners.

Plenty of music and entertainment is to be furnished. Foremost in this line will be the contests and stunts. Prizes will be awarded the winners of these events. Dr T. S. Fox and H. G. Deems are in charge of this part of the bigger and better picnic. Any suggestions or contribution of prizes will be received by them.

Every effort is being made by the business men to make this a general holiday for the Hilltop.

Announcement of the complete details of the big picnic will be made in the Record at an early date.

Westgate lodge and Robert Morris Chapter will hold their picnic at Humboldt Country club, July 16. All members of Westgate lodge and Robert Morris Chapter are urged to be present.

Worker Injured

While working on the new McKinley Junior High school last Friday, William Beckett, 98 N. Warren Ave., received an injured foot when a steel beam fell on it. Examination at the White Cross hospital showed that his condition was not serious.

Beckett is superintendent for Burns Construction Co.

Miss Thelma Duncan, 231 S. Warren Ave., spent the week-end with relatives in Huntington, W. Va.

Text Books to Be Sold at Buildings in Fall

No longer will Columbus school children have to wait as heretofore for their school books and supplies. This fall the books are to be placed on sale at seventeen senior and junior high school buildings by four Columbus dealers.

This system was suggested by the Parent-Teachers association and approved by the board of education. The new system allows the dealer the usual ten per cent profit.

The four authorized dealers are Bergeners, Mary B. Allen, McClellands and the College Book store.

Injured in Crash

Edward Paas, 101 S. Richardson Ave., received bruises about the face and shoulders when the truck in which he was riding with Leonard Daugherty, 1294 Forsythe Ave., collided with an auto at Fifteenth and Indianola avenues last Friday evening.

His condition is not serious.

RECORD WANT AD RETURNS $130 CASH

Just another incident of the many ways in which Hilltop Record Ads pay is cited when Mrs. Elizabeth Emmitt, 243 North Park Ave., reported that her purse containing $130 in cash which she lost was returned to her after having been advertised in the Want Ad columns of the Record.

Mrs. Emmitt reports that the finder of the purse was only waiting for the Record to appear so that he could return it.

GLENWOOD PARK MUCH VISITED

Boys' and Girls' Ball Teams Meet Other Playground Teams This Week.

Glenwood Park one of the most popular of the city playgrounds is surely doing a rushing business these picnic and vacation days and yet there is always room for more.

Picnics have been held by the Glenwood M. E. Sunday school classes, Webe's Bible class, East End Crochet club, American club, Eastern Star, Young Men's Bible class, Mt. Vernon M. E. church and various family reunions.

Glenwood offers an ideal spot to get away from the rush and worries of the city. With its spacious shade trees, the ever inviting wading pool for the kiddies and the splendid equipped swings and slides, it is no wonder that mothers send and bring their children to Glenwood where they enjoy good wholesome games and plenty of fresh air and yet are away from fast moving automobiles.

Mothers of the Hilltop, if you have not visited your playgrounds, you are cordially invited. Arrange for a day's outing with your children at the playgrounds. They will have the time of their young lives and you, too, will be refreshed and feel younger. Parents are always welcome on the grounds.

Various inter-playground contests are being played this week between Glenwood and the other West Side centers. The 10-year-old boys play Dana avenue, the 15-year-old boys play McKinley, the 14-year-old boys play Sunshine while the grown-ups take McKinley on for nine innings tonight.

The girls, too, are competing against Dana avenue in volley ball. They have almost three girls trying out for every position. They are: Frances Probst, Loretta Zerer, Eleanor Adair, Lillian McNabb, Mildred McKittrick, Della Means, Ruth Rea, Louise Compton, Catherine Trout, Thelma Cachill, Helen Bailey, Mary Jane Bailey, Helen Hays, Maxine Stauwfer, Evelyn Saylor, Evelyn Slain.

It is expected that the girls will have one of the strongest teams this year in Glenwood's history. Miss Miller, their coach, urges other Hilltop girls to come out for volley ball. She would like to organize two teams.

Next Sunday, July 17, St. James Lutheran church, two miles north of Rome, will dedicate its new two-manual pipe organ, built by the Hinners Co. of Pekin, Ill. St. James' congregation considers itself very fortunate in obtaining this fine instrument, modern in every detail.

Dedicatory services will be held Sunday morning beginning at 10 o'clock. The pastor of the church, Rev. Pennekamp, will preach in the German language. Rev. E. H. Joost of Hilliards will deliver the English sermon. Prof. Martin Lochner, instructor of music at Concordia Teachers' college, River Forest, Ill., and organist of Grace Lutheran church, Oak Park, Ill., will be at the organ.

Sails for Ireland

P. J. Griffin, well-known Hilltop grocer, left last Sunday night for New York and was due to sail for Ireland today (Thursday).

Mr. Griffin is to visit the western coast of Ireland where he will see his father, a sister and a brother for the first time in nineteen years. He has looked forward to this visit for some time. Mr. Griffin came to the United States nineteen years ago.

He is due to arrive there about Wednesday of next week.

D. D. Painter, grocer at 2069 Sullivant Ave., corner Ogden and Sullivant, announced that he would have a formal opening of his new store tonight (Thursday).

Mr. Painter comes to this location from N. Eurkea avenue where he has been in business for quite a long time. In his new location he has a complete line of groceries, vegetables and meats and a line of confections.

Saturday Marks Opening of Chautauqua Program

Juniors to Receive Parts at 9 o'Clock Saturday Morning at Big Tent.

Twelve Big Attractions Scheduled for Full Week of Entertainment.

The big Redpath Chautauqua tent at the West Broad street school grounds will be thrown open and the well planned program of this circuit will begin Saturday, July 16, and continue for one full week. These Redpath artists come here from a week's stay in Portsmouth where they were most heartily received.

Classical music, lectures, comedy, drama and entertainment of an educational nature for the children are to be featured. The bill of entertainment for the week includes many things of interest to the whole family.

Orlando English, Chautauqua advance representative has been on the Hilltop for the past week completing the details for presenting the program. Mr. Whitney, platform superintendent will be in charge during the week of the program. Miss Marion Rupe, of the Hilltop will assist Miss Marriott in the direction of the junior activities.

A meeting for the selection of the parts to be taken in the junior program will be called for Saturday morning at 9 o'clock in the Chautauqua tent. Every boy and girl who wishes to take part should be present at that time.

The chautauqua opens with the Filipino Collegians giving a popular concert in the afternoon and another in the evening and a lecture by Arthur Waiwyn Evans on "What America Means to Me." Mr. Evans is a well-known Welsh orator and gives a good insight as to the way a British subject sizes up the United States.

Then on the other evenings and afternoons there will be a varied selection made up from the following:

A drama play: "A Message from Mars," with a New York company of actors, in which an armoured man from Mars comes down to teach a man a great lesson and causes a completely new person to be made.

Gypsy Revelers, vocal artists in costume presenting songs of the vagabonds, camp scenes and unusual lighting effects.

"The Patsy," a comedy of brilliant dialogue, and the story of how a younger sister of a family makes a sucess as "the life of the party."

Magic, Birch & Company offering the latest in the weird psychic phenemenon and a bag of tricks for the kiddies.

Lectures, including B. P. Hivale of British India, and Major John J. Hill telling of his eperiences with Cecil Rhodes in Africa.

Comedy, Ralph Parlette, giving his humorous philosophy and rare experiences.

Jungle Jubilees, featuring Van Ray Osborne, aged nine, in his special laugh producing acts, assisted by a full troupe showing the development of the colored race from slavery up.

Health Talks, by Louise L. McIntyre mixing her humor and knowledge so as to make it interesting.

All sessions begin promptly at 3 p. m. and 8 p. m. The Junior chautauqua begins at 9 a. m. and the morning lectures are scheduled for 10:30. Prices range from 35c to $1 for adults and 20c for children.

The public should be grateful to the residents of the Hilltop who have taken the responsibilities of bringing this fine program here. Every community needs such a season of wholesome entertainment and bringing these artists here is a very commendable spirit of the Hilltop.

Sunday, July 10, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Williams, 295 Clarendon avenue, Albert, Dorothy and Irma Williams and Mrs. William Thompson, 380 Midland Ave., motored to Logan to attend the annual Clark reunion at Grotto park.

Fire Captain Outwits Supposed Hold-ups

Captain Harry Fetter of the Hilltop Fire Station, No. 17 returned last week from a vacation trip and reports that his excitment began early on this trip.

He reported the following story to his comrades at the station!

While traveling, on the first day out on Moore's road, a detour on the OSU highway, a car approached and proceeded to push him into a ditch at the side of the road. Evidently the men in the other car had robbery in mind since this occurred at three o'clock in the morning. But Fetter was quick on the draw and shifted to reverse and went backward for about 400 feet until he reached a farmhouse. Here he sounded his horn and with the appearance of people from the house the supposed hold-up men pulled off down the road at a swift speed.

Auto Injury

Millicent Jackson, 21, of 84 S. Harris Ave., received scalp wounds Monday when the car in which she was riding collided with a garbage train at Mound and Canal streets. She was removed to Mt. Carmel hospital but was later removed to her home.

The car in which she was riding was driven by Miss L. A. Hull of 49 N. Roys Ave.

Miss Elizabeth Beatty of 160 N. Terrace St., has returned home after spending a two-week's vacation with her parents near Derby, Ohio.

STREET CAR HITS HILLTOP WOMAN

While dismounting from a street car at Third and Mound streets on Saturday morning about 10:15, Mrs. Theodeus Wade, aged 55, of 220 S. Ogden Ave., was struck by the back end of the car as it turned, and sustained injuries to the extent that she was unconscious and was taken to the Grant hospital.

She was later removed to her home and is reported as improving. She was cut and bruised.

Mrs. Wade was on her way to pay her taxes when the car struck her.

Unique Chorus to Appear in Gypsy Setting at Redpath Chautauqua

GILBERT'S ROMANY REVELERS

Featuring songs of gypsy life, this chorus of nine voices comes to chautauqua from the West. Their two-part program opens with a choice array of vagabond songs, with the artists elaborately costumed and with the stage appropriately set as a gypsy camp. The typical covered wagon will be there, along with the gypsy tent and the camp fire.

Members of this company are Ellsworth Gilbert, basso and director; Thelma Marty Gilbert and Mary Adeline Bradley, sopranos; Freda Oakes and Mary Jane Rhea, contraltos; Theo Fenlon and Howard Carmen, tenors; Allan Farley, baritone, and Leith Stevens, accompanist.

AUTO MECHANICS TAUGHT AT "Y"

Students Receive Training in Y. M. C. A. Garage and Lubricating Station on Front St.

Enrollment in the summer auto mechanics class at the Y. M. C. A. school is 100 per cent greater than any previous summer registration, C. Marshall, director of the Y. M. C. A. trades engineering school announces.

Features of the laboratory work which all students in this course take in addition to their classwork are experiences in both the Y. M. C. A. garage and at the new alemite lubricating station and parking lot at 237 N. Front St.

Students also receive training in the regular inspection service, one of the factors responsible for the Y. garage's enlarging to the point where additional space was required to take care of lubricating and parking service. R. E. Kellogg, service manager of the Y. garage, observes that this regular inspection service gives car owners better results at less cost than is possible when oiling, greasing and repair work are done at irregular intervals.

In addition to caring for cars which formerly parked at the Y. garage, the new parking lot operated in connection with the lubricating station, is open to the general public. It is managed by Edward Weisenberger, 17 Wisconsin Ave.

Laboratory schedules of students who fulfill their practice requirements by acting as helpers to the expert mechanics employed both at the garage and the new station, are so arranged that there are always fewer students than mechanics.

Pronounced by Murray C. Marshall, director of the Y. M. C. A. trades engineering school as one of the most promising students in the summer auto mechanics, Kenneth L. Holsinger, who is living this summer at 17 Jones Ave., will complete his course at the Y. school the latter part of this month.

Holsinger, whose home is in Athens, was also a student of the Y. evening schools in Akron during the past year while he was employed there at the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. His present course is a fulltime day schedule, however, and the only day work being given at the Y. this season.

The course Holsinger is taking is similar to that given in auto mechanics during the regular school year with the exception of the fact that it has been shortened four weeks and does not include the burning of lead or battery work. The features included are the regular chassis, motor transmission, differential and ignition work.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

PEBBLES

Says Mrs. Bergen in a publication of the American Folklore society: "Boys believe that they can prevent the stitch in the side which is liable to be induced by runing by means of holding a pebble under the tongue. 'I believe I could run all day and not get tired if I could hold a pebble under my tongue,' said one." Says Doctor Kuns in his "Magic of Jewels and Charms": "Pebble-mania, or lithomania, is an inherent trait in all mankind. From the most primitive man to the most modern this trait is present in a greater or a lesser degree." Not only is man inherently inclined to collect pebbles, but among primitive man there was a tendency to ascribe to pebbles of any peculiar markings, or found under any peculiar circumstances, magic powers.

The boy's believe in the sustaining virtues of a pebble held under the tongue is evidently an atavistic idea which has its counterpart today among peoples living in a primitive state. The Australian aborigines believe that their medicine-men owe their powers to the fact that they have embedded in their bodies small crystal pebbles, and that by transmitting these stones from their own bodies to the bodies of others they can transfer therewith a part of their powers. The Malays have a class of pebbles called Mesticas which are worn by their warriors pressed so closely against the skin as to become embedded in the flesh and which are supposed to confer protection against wounds—in some cases to confer invulnerability. A Dutch writer of the Eighteenth century admits that these Mesticas confer invulnerability but ascribes the fact to "diabolical agencies." The boy's pebble under the tongue, the Mestica of the Maylay and the crystal pebble of the Australian are evidently one as to the main idea—and all three are equally conceptions of primitive man.

BRIDGE RAILING MAY BE CUT

West Broad Traffic May Be Made Easier in Front of City Hall.

On last Friday morning the city and county officials took steps proposing that the northeast bannister of the West Broad street bridge be cut away and that Water street be widened so as to cut down the possibilities of accidents at that intersection, and to facilitate traffic moving on Water street in front of the new city hall.

A committee consisting of City Engineer R. H. Simpson and R. C. Cheney of his office, County Surveyor Curtis Lattimer, County Bridge Engineer G. R. Logue and George Bulford, architect, was appointed to work out plans for the change.

A traffic count extending over a thirteen hour period, Tuesday, showed 1146 vehicles turned west on Broad street out of Water street. Turning north out of Broad street from the west into Water street were 1261 vehicles.

The total travel straight west on Broad street amounted to 6942 and east was 7006.

Charles B. Dolby, who was connected with the Hilltop Bank for two years, is now located with his father in the insurance business at 2241 W. Broad st.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

MR. AND MRS. OSTRICH

Billie Brownie's call this day was to be upon the Ostrich pair at the zoo.

Billie Brownie was always much amused by Mr. and Mrs. Ostrich.

He thought their ways were interesting and he always liked to hear about them.

Then, too, he always liked to tell everyone he could that ostrich feathers meant unhappiness and tragedy in the lives of birds.

The ostrich family weren't hurt when their feathers were taken from them, no, not all; in fact it made them pleased and comfortable.

But this time that he went to see Mr. and Mrs. Ostrich he could see from the moment of his arrival that they were each in a funny frame of mind and Billie knew he would enjoy himself.

"We haven't large brains," said Mr. Ostrich, "but we have a fine system for all that."

"Tell me about it," urged Billie Brownie.

"Our brains are small in size," said Mrs. Ostrich, "and my mate is quite correct when he says what he does. But we have enough brains for our purpose.

"If we had more brains we'd have to study and keep our brains up to the mark.

"That would be a nuisance. Thankful I am that our brains are no more trouble to us than they are.

"To some it would appear, brains are a great bother.

"Yes, our system is fine. Mr. Ostrich was right about that, too.

"We take turns in hatching the eggs. I sit upon them in the daytime for my gray costume looks like the sand in the daytime and so protects me," Mrs. Ostrich explained.

"A good idea," said Billie Brownie.

"And I sit at night and watch out for them then as I wear a black feathered suit which looks like the night," said Mr. Ostrich.

"That does sound like a perfect system," agreed Billie Brownie.

"Neither of us is cowardly when it comes to protecting our young," Mr. Ostrich continued.

"I will hurry the brood away while Mrs. Ostrich will face the enemy and fall down as though there were no more life in her and so it makes the enemy feel it is useless to do anything.

"We have good eyesight. Our hearing is our next best sense and smelling comes third. We really only use this sense in feeding and in recognising our young.

"Some say it is a strange way of knowing one's children, but then it does for us, so why should we overtax our brains and think of other ways?"

"It would be foolish," said Mrs. Ostrich. "But I hope in time people will stop saying I hide my head in the sand when I'm frightened.

"I fall down and have my head quite close to the sand—but I don't hide it. People have thought it was hidden because my head and the sand are so much alike in color.

"And the story has been passed along. And gossip has kept it going.

"I may have a small brain, but I know enough to know that my body isn't safe just because my head might be hidden—and so I don't hide my head.

"Oh, well, I'm above getting mad even if I'm gossiped about."

"That is very wise of you," said Billie Brownie, "for I must admit that while I know it is foolish, I feel a little hurt at anything said about me that is not kind.

"You are far more sensible, Mrs. Ostrich.

"But I've been delighted to have heard your stories and to have had the honor and pleasure of this talk."

"How very handsomely you make your departure," said Mrs. Ostrich, as Billie Brownie made a low bow upon finishing his speech.

And Mrs. Ostrich added:

"You show a fine and respectful manner toward the happy Ostrich pair.

"It makes our ostrich hearts rejoice!"

An electric locomotive of a new type has been tried near New York. It pulled a freight train of 108 cars at thirty-two miles per hour. Three thousand tons' weight was pulled smoothly for 144 miles without a breakdown, and the locomotive used less than 500 volts. A steam locomotive drawing the same train made only five miles an hour.

Paris Sponsors The Silk Goat In Black, Whie tor Dainty Color

All fashionable Paris acknowledges the debut of the silk coat among swagger wraps for the coming months. The term silk coat, as interpreted by the haute couture of the French capital, is all-inclusive, meaning anything from crepe satin, moire bengaline and faille to taffeta. Nor does it limit as to color, running the gamut from biscuit, beige and pastel shades to white, to black. So here it is, straight from fashion's headquarters—the silk coat in any weave, in any color.

Faille-backed satin is, perhaps, of first importance, especially as a popular item, however it is the distinctive silk coat of unique features which makes appeal to an exclusive clientele. There is the matter of taffeta ruching, or rose plaiting if you please, it bespeaks the sought-for "something different." It is that novelty trimming which is so effectively employed to enrich the model in this picture, applied as it is about the hemline, on the collar and as a medium for the picturesque cavalier cuffs which are so stylish.

Rather an elaborate styling is given to the crepe-satin coat to the right in this trio of typical wrap fashions. It highlights the idea of a full skirt, also an elaborate hand braiding.

Moire coats, such as is centered in this group, are a pride and joy among women of fashion. The lighter shades are most lovely for wear over the sheer summer frock and the younger girls will look their prettiest thus colorfully adorned. For a coat for every occasion, black moire is an ideal medium. Some unusually attractive models are "just out," flaunting big bows of wide velvet ribbon, also velvet-faced revers.

Moire is also pleasingly introduced as a collar facing and big bow-trim for the satin coat.

The white fur collar on the silk or satin coat appears very frequently. It is liked because it brings a refreshing daintiness about the face, relieving the somberness of all-black. It is becoming quite a vogue to wear either a simple little white felt or white visca hat with the white fur-collared coat.

The importance of navy blue for the silk coat is very apparent. Smart, indeed, is a navy faille silk coat with a deep collar and tuxedo revers extending to the hem of quilted taffeta, with deep cuqs to match.

The crepe satin navy coat is also a favorite. Of course, it is made up half-in-half, luster and dull finish, for these reversing effects are employed extensively by the stylist.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

It was long after sunrise when the sleepy eyes of the freckled-face boy perceived the figure of a bedraggled man toiling up the slope toward the Cave de la Brent. His eyes were heavy, but there was an air of determination in them. He limped, but his steps did not falter. His face was set.

"Freck," he exclaimed, "I'm hungry! Give me something to eat."

The boy was on his feet now. "What do you want, Mr. Brent?"

"Anything short of sole leather," came the answer. "I've got an appetite that is an appetite. I want a loaf of bread, and I want the slices cut thick, and I want about ten times as much gravy as you made last night. Did you get any frogs this morning?"

"Yes—four."

"I want all of 'em, Freck; I'm hungry."

Slice after slice of gravy-soaked bread was salted and stowed away. Frog leg after frog leg disappeared, before Thomas Brent leaned back grunting with satisfaction, and crossed his hands over his stomach.

"Freck," he said with a look toward the cave, "where's those crawdadders?"

"Gone."

"Live in town?"

"Yes."

"Probably tell all about what happened last night?"

"Maybe. Mammy Taylor said before she left she—"

"Well," broke in the man of the red feet, "Speck, we got to move, and it's up to you to find a cave where ten thousand men on horseback with search warrants couldn't hunt us out if they had to. And you've got to do it quick. Understand?"

Freck looked up unconcernedly. "I know one already," he said and gazed interestedly at the newly manufactured prongs of a bean shooter.

The man above him allowed his face to lighten. The corner of his lips spread wide, then wider. The eyes lighted with a spirit that only the steadily rising sun could equal. "Freck," said Mr. Thomas Brent with a wealth of feeling, "I think you are going to be my confidential agent."

Late that night, after many a stop, after many gruntings and changes of mind on the part of Thomas Brent, Freck led his employer up a little narrow runway from Indian creek and then to the mouth of a large cave.

The next day was one in which Thomas Brent of the Amalgamated Foundry company merely sat at the edge of the cave and closely watched his companion at the work of catching fish and gathering the game which would provide the food for the next few meals.

When he did move it was to the accompaniment of groans and grunts, for the effect of Brent's extraordinary exertions were beginning to make themselves felt in the form of muscles that grew more and more sore with every hour. Another day came—then another; another, and Thomas Brent assayed a little trip to the creek where he watched Freck catch fish.

Then he hobbled back to the cave to sit exceedingly still and nurse his muscles. But all things must end, and within a week Thomas Brent discovered that his muscles were not only well again, but that he was possessed of a strength he did not realize he owned; also that a certain spirit of dare-deviltry was beginning to make itself felt throughout his system. One thing he realized was that for a solid week he had slept as he never had slept before and that he had eaten more than he had in years.

He rolled out of his blanket, thumped down to the creek for his morning ablutions. A jay bird called at him as he went along. He shouted back at it happily. A lazy mud turtle rolled off a dry log into the water as he approached, and Thomas Brent chuckled at the picture.

"Freck," he said when he had returned and begun the demolishment of a fried sun fish, "Wonder how far that cave runs back. Have we got any candles, Freck?"

"Yes—you had me get two dozen; don't you remember?"

"That's right. Well, we'll fill a while and then we'll see what this cave looks like."

So it was that two hours later, supplied with candles and luncheon, Thomas Brent and Freck started on their tour of exploration.

After the first great cavern the cave lengthened into a long, tunnellike affair where stalactites and stalagmites met and where the candles caused strange, gleaming reflections to sparkle before the eyes of the man and the boy as they went along. At last, after a long time of walking, a small white something showed ahead—the light of day.

"We're going through it," Freck announced, as he saw the speck of white in the distance.

As they kept on toward the light the space grew smaller. The sides of the tunnel narrowed down until Brent and his boy companion were forced to crawl on their hands and knees; but this they did, for with Thomas Brent going to the end of the thing was a religion. Slowly they approached the outlet before which showed a dense growth of underbrush and weeds. Freck was first. He stuck his head out into the open air and started to penetrate the underbrush. Suddenly, however, he drew quickly back into the cave plump against Mr. Brent.

"There's somebody out there right in front of the hole," he whispered. "It's two men. Listen! You can hear 'em talking."

The sound of voices had broken in and Mr. Brent strained his ears to catch the words:

"Well, if they ain't at that cave, they must be at the one around the bend. Them-a the only two around here that the kid knows anything about, and if they've gone from the other, they must be here."

"Hear that, Freck?" Mr. Brent asked quickly.

"Yes. It's old Daddy Bill from Dodson," Freck whispered back. "I forgot all about him. He'll find us sure as shootin'. Wonder who else is with him."

"I've got a pretty good idea," Brent growled. "Hang that man! I don't want him to find me. First of all, I've got too much against him, and secondly I'm having too good a time.

"Look here, Freck, I want you to get those people out of the way. You understand? Here's ten dollars. Don't give it up unless you have to, but if it's necessary, hand it to Daddy Bill and tell him to keep his mouth shut. Understand? He doesn't see ten dollars every day in the week, does he?"

Freck only gasped.

Mr. Brent went on: "The other fellow that's with him is named Scrottles. He wants to find me and I don't want him to do it. More than that, I'd like to keep him chasing around the country just for his general health," he added sarcastically. "Do they know anything about this end of the cave?"

"Nobody does, I reckon," Freck answered.

"All right. Good! I'll get the stuff and move it up toward this end where it can't be found. You stay here until those fellows get a little bit off. Then you run out and catch up with them. Tell 'em I left here last night and have gone to St. Louis. Freck, I want you to show me you're a real sport by getting that Scrottles fellow to follow me to St. Louis. Tell him that if he wants you to you'll go along with him, but find a way to get out of it, Freck. Tell him he'll have to pay your fare."

Thomas Brent chuckled to himself. "Tell 'em I got pneumonia out here and went to a hospital in St. Louis—or anything of the kind. If you get 'em on the train for St. Louis, you can stick that ten dollars in your pocket. Understand me?"

"Sure do!" Freck answered.

"And, Freck, if you see that young Edwards fellow, bring him back with you. I want to talk to him about something."

After a few more instructions they parted. Mr. Brent watched Freck slink out of the cave, dart here and there through the underbrush, and at last catch up with the two men. He saw them converse; he saw Freck point vaguely into the distance. He chuckled to himself, slowly at first, then harder.

Philip Scrottles had listened attentively to Freck's story and was busily following him back toward town. Thomas Brent watched them out of sight and then, whistling to himself, he started back through the long tunnel.

"Skin me out of a hundred thousand, will he?" He laughed. "Not if I know it!"

CHAPTER VI

Around the Bend

Thomas Brent sat on a log beside Indian creek earnestly watching a bobbing cork in the stream. It had been three days since he and Freck had beheld Scrottles and Daddy Bill. What had happened he did not know, but he felt sure that Freck had succeeded in a way, else he would have been back long before this.

"That kid's got a lot of sense in his head," he ruminated. "If I had a plant full of people like that instead of a bunch of thieves, I'd be a millionaire today." Suddenly he stopped. "Come to think of it," he mused, "what's a lot of money? It doesn't do you much good. Just keeps you worrying all the time trying to get more. That's the trouble with a man when he's making money. He always wants to keep making a lot more. Tom Brent, if you'd realized that fifteen years ago, you wouldn't be a wind-broken old horse now. By George! I wonder if that doctor knew what he was talking about? Wonder if this crazy stunt is doing me any good. Come to think of it, I've been having a whaling good time. There he goes again."

Mr. Brent was addressing his remarks to the water now. "There he goes again—he'll nibble a little bit too much in a minute. Take it under, take it under— Wow! I got you!" A fish was glittering in the air. Mr. Brent went to detach it from the hook. Then he turned and looked up with a boyish laugh at the sound of a voice behind him.

"Catching many, Mr. Brent?" It was Freck standing there with his hands in his pockets as though he had been gone an hour instead of three days.

"Hello kid. What luck?"

Freck grinned. "I sent him to Cincinnati," he said. "I thought he might get back too soon if he went to St. Louis. Cincinnati must be eight or ten thousand miles off, ain't it?"

Mr. Brent laughed. "Well, it's not that far, but it's some distance," he answered. "Freck, you're a wonder!"

"There was another fellow with him," Freck rejoined. "A tall fellow; wore one of these long coats and a big silk hat."

"Brady!" burst out Mr. Brent. "Brady! Well, of all things. Freck, you're a wizard. When did they go?"

"Last night. They didn't believe me at first. They seemed to think I wasn't telling them the truth until I finally got Daddy Bill aside and gave him half of that ten dollars. Then he broke down and confessed that he was putting up a job on them. So they kicked him out and gave me a dollar for my information an—here I am."

A wild whoop burst from Thomas Brent. He let his feet slide from the rock and dangle in the water. A sunfish, which had involuntarily hooked itself, bobbed the cork here and there in vain.

"Gave you a dollar for your information, did they? Well, can you beat it? Here's a ten to top it."

Freck gasped. "Sixteen dollars! Oh, snakes! That'll buy ma her rug!"

"That just reminds me," said Mr. Brent. "How about that Edwards fellow?"

"Ma's going to keep her eye on him and send him out when he comes. I told ma about you. She'll keep her mouth shut all right."

"Does Edwards know how to get here?"

"Yes. His aunt lives right over here about a mile or two, and every night or so I'll go over and see if he's come out. If he has, I'll bring him over."

"Again I repeat," said Mr. Brent, "you are a wizard, Freck."

He turned and scrutinized the boy. "What have you got under your arm?"

Freck grinned. "Something for you. I want to take you swimming, but I knew you wouldn't go unless you I'd bring you a bathing suit. I couldn't find anything but the trunks though. They'll do, won't they?"

"I guess so. Where do we go, Freck?" Mr. Brent found himself taking quite an interest in the thing.

"Depends whether you can swim or not," Freck answered. "There's a mudhole where we can make a slippery slide and just play around if we want to. And then there's a deep hole farther on where we can do some regular swimming."

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"ALL IS GRIST THAT COMES TO MY MILL"

We are all familiar with this expression to signify "nothing to waste with me." A reporter, cautioned by his city editor to let nothing that makes news slip by him, was heard to reply, "Don't worry, all is grist that comes to my mill!" And in the variety of applications in which the phrase is employed we must not forget the cook famed for her hash who boasts that "All is grist that comes to my mill."

The saying comes to us from the parlance of the flour mill where "grist" means all the grain that is brought to the mill at one time to be ground up into meal. The term signifies literally and in the broader sense, material to be worked on or utilized. For everything that is brought to the mill is crushed and ground up together. Hence the popular figurative use of the phrase "All is grist that comes to my mill" is easily comprehensible.

Radio Tenor on Chautauqua Bill

EDGAR A. SPRAGUE

This popular tenor and manager of the RVII Trio, which has been broadcasting every Friday night from KDKA, Pittsburgh, is to be heard at chautauqua with the Conservatory Artists. He is a popular singer in both Pittsburgh and Columbus, where he has been prominently identified with church and fraternal choirs. In Pittsburgh he is tenor at the Third Presbyterian church and in Columbus he is a member of the Scottish Rite choir. His study of voice was persued with Samuel Richard Gaines of Columbus, and Anne Griffith, Pittsburgh. He also was a student of dramatics at Carnegie "Tech." This spring, for the third consecutive year, Mr. Sprague was a member of the male quartet which enlivened the trade tour of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

July 20 Is Deadline for Paying Tax Bills

Taxpayers whose bills to the state are not paid by July 20, final date for receiving payment until December, will find the treasurer's office closed for repairs the remainder of the summer. For this reason David P. Anderson, county treasurer, urges early payment.

To date $1,250,000 has been received in taxes, as compared to $1,275,000 last year at this time.

Related to Dick

Little Alfred, aged six, whose father's name was Dick, was having a wordy argument with his mother. To close it she said:

"Alfred, don't contradict."

He went off saying: "My dad is Dick and I'm Contradick."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

YOUR WEAK SPOT

A gigantic ship of the air, carrying a burden of human freight, crumbled and fell, carrying with it to destruction a score and more of lives.

Examination of the wreckage showed that in the center of the great framework there was a weak spot which, when the strain of actual operation was placed upon it, could not stand the test and, failing, caused disaster.

Few of us realize on how precarious a base our success reposes until we dare summon courage to look upon our weakness.

Self-examination to most of us is not a pleasant bit of duty to perform, and for this reason we are apt to put it off with an "oh, don't bother me" attitude, and turn to something more agreeable.

In humans the perilous weak spot may be in temper, perverseness, indifference, untidiness, selfishness or inefficiency, all productive of a fatty degeneration of the moral fiber.

The thing to do is to discover just what our shortcomings are, and, having determined their nature, we must then proceed to overcome them—to patch them up, as it were, and resolve that they shall not again be permitted to imperil our progress.

It will cost tremendous will-power to do this, but the reward in the end will compensate liberally for all the effort.

When in command of the American army, Washington was conscious of his weakness and sought strength through prayer in the silence of the forest. When he comprehended his lack of education, Lincoln became an earnest student.

These two beloved men learned where to press forward in the fullness of their strength.

And in such acts as these lies mastery.

If you imitate them, you, too, can overcome whatever weakness you may have before it becomes a settled habit and drags you down.

It is never too late to retrace steps, even though you may be "down and out."

If you are genuinely serious in your desire to rise in the world, to win respect, to put money in your purse, or write your name beside the successful, resolve today that you will no longer be impotent through frailties of your own.

Summon all your energy and with a heart of oak march on to victory.

By imploring Faith and Patience to help you, you will find the battle comparatively easy, the good results being in most instances out of all proportion to your anticipation.

CHAUTAUQUA TO CLOSE FRIDAY

Ralph Parlette, Noted Humorist to Delight Crowd Tonight.

Tonight marks the climax in the chautauqua being held on the West Broad Street school grounds. Ralph Parlette known the country over for his humorous philosophy will be present to give Hilltop people the biggest bargain in entertainment they have had for many years.

When it comes to philosophy mixed with humor it takes Mr. Parlette to deliver the goods, so says the chautauqua manager and those who have heard him. Just a few months ago he was heard by a prominent banker and was later invited to speak before the banker's convention of which this particular man was to attend. For the one hour speech delivered before this body Mr. Parlette was presented with the nice sum of $400. Hilltop people will surely not miss this chance to hear this well-known man.

Today's program also includes the Conservatory Artists featuring Edgar Sprague, robust tenor of radio fame.

Tomorrow the big week of entertainment closes with Major John J. Hill telling of his experiences with Cecil Rhodes in Africa and at night the much looked forward to Jungle Jubilees will appear. Van Ray Osborne, described by comedy lovers as a scream is featured in this bill. Children should be especially interested in this part of the program.

This beings the big tent entertainment to a close until next year. All reports to date as to the success of this year's production have been very favorable.

The regular meeting of the Women's Missionary society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will be held Thursday, July 28, instead of the regular time, July 21. The meeting will be at the home of Mrs. W. B. Chamberlain, 126 N. Burgess Ave.

LINDBERGH AND AIRPLANE DAY

At Glenwood Playground—Girls' Ball Team Whipping Into Shape.

The young boys of Glenwood playground are all enthused over "Lindbergh and Airplane Day" which will be held the last week of July or first week of August. Magazine and newspaper clippings of the exploits of the world famous fliers are adding much interest to the enthusiastic young birdmen.

Among those entering the contest are Richard Wright, 242 Nashoba Ave., Harold Grny, 221 Columbian Ave., Gerald and Paul Eichelburger, 253 Columbian Ave., Bud Grush, 340 Nashoba Ave., Roy and Howard Wilson, 94 Belvidere Ave., Frank Wright, 242 Nashoba Ave., John Lathem, 87 Belvidere Ave., Robert Krause, 270 Nashoba Ave., Paul Cochrane, 253 Columbian Ave., William DeBow, 1949 Floral Ave., Charles Miller, 141 Whitethorne Ave., Pete Scholten, 187 Columbian Ave., Harold Broom, 1827 Sullivant Ave., David Chambers, 144 Whitethorne Ave., Tarry Barnette, 132 Belvidere Ave., George Martin, 85 Whitethorne Ave., and Ralph Smith, 247 Columbian Ave.

STAND PAT ON SEWER ORDER

City Council Refuses to Rescind Former Action in Regard to Hilltop Roof Drains.

By a vote of five to two, city council Monday night refused to rescind their action taken some months ago ordering all roof downspouts in the Hilltop section disconnected from the sanitary sewer at the expense of the property owners whose roof drains are served in this manner. Councilman Postle and Lewis voted to rescind council's action, while Karnes, Weke, Zimpfer, Jones and Woerle voted to let the order stand.

As far as council is concerned the status of the Hilltop property owners remains the same.

The executive committee of the Committee for Permanent Sewer Relief on the Hilltop went before council Monday night and requested that council's action in the matter be rescinded, the committee feeling that council's action is unjust in requiring the property owner to stand this expense.

Cecil J. Randall acted as spokesman for the committee. John Burkett and W. G. Davis, of the committee, also endeavored to enlighten council as to our sewer troubles on the Hilltop.

Engineer Simpson defended council's action, as also did Consulting Engineer Gregory, who stated that if the roof water was removed from the sanitary sewer, the sanitary sewer is large enough to care for the sanitary sewage, eliminating all backing up in basements, and also that the storm sewers on the Hilltop are large enough to care for the storm waters.

The five council members voting to let the order stand as originally passed did so on recommendation of Engineers Simpson and Gregory.

Just what the next step to be taken in the matter has not been decided, but the executive committee probably will call a meeting of the property owners in the near future to discuss the matter.

PLANNING FOR HOME COMING

The program for the Big Plain Home Coming on Sunday, July 24, has been only partially completed, but plans are progressing and a real treat is in store for those who attend.

Rev. C. S. Warner, of Houston, Tex., will preach at the morning service at 10 o'clock and a basket dinner will be enjoyed at 11:30 o'clock.

The program of the afternoon will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock, and will include several numbers by the Big Plain Apollo club, a musical organization in the community of some 30 years ago, the members of which are still living and plan to attend.

"Reminiscences of Forty-five Years Ago," will be given by Mrs. E. J. Chenoweth, of Columbus, who is the daughter of Rev. Alexander, pastor of the Big Plain church more than forty years ago. Several talks of a similar nature are being arranged and several former pastors are expected to attend and take part in the program.

Hip Fractured

Mrs. Bessie Oyler, 57, of 150 N. Ogden Ave., fell at her home Wednesday, July 13, and fractured her hip. She was taken to Mercy hospital and is reported as improving. This is the third time in two years that Mrs. Oyler has injured the same limb. The first fracture occurred when she was in an auto accident two years ago.

Patrolman Edward Winget, 71 N. Warren Ave., Saturday was retired by order of Safety Director McCune on account of physical disability on a pension. He has been a member of the Police Department for 22 years and has never been disciplined.

The Amity Embroidery club met at the home of Mrs. Loomis, 155 N. Park Ave., Thursday afternoon, July 14. The following members were present: Mrs. Brant, Mrs. Ditrick Mrs. Shields, Mrs. Muller, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Park and the hostess. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Muller, 227 N. A Big Jubilee

The Eleventh Ward Republican club will give a jubilee and pot-luck supper, 6:30 o'clock, at the usual meeting place at the Hillcrest Baptist church, corner of Eldon and W. Broad St., Monday evening, July 25. All the Republicans of the Eleventh Ward and their families are welcome. Come, bring just one covered dish and help make this a big jubilee. We are having a band and all candidates are invited. Republican come.

Miss Irma Williams, 295 Clarendon Ave., is spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burferry, Logan, O.

West Church League Starts Second Half

The eight teams in the West Church Baseball league have started on the second half of the season and with the ending of the first round the Glenwood M. E. stood second with six wins and one loss marked up against them.

Gift St. M. E. stands first with six wins and one tie game. Holy Family is in third place having won five, lost one and tied one.

The fact that these three teams stand so very close makes the outlook for the last half very interesting. Other teams entered in the league are Hillcrest Baptists, Avondale U. B., Presbyterian Chapel, Westgate Evangelistic and Hilltop Church of Christ.

These games are played at McKinley field every Friday evening at 6:15. Those interested in baseball should attend these games.

NO NEW MODEL CHEVROLET

Price to Remain Same; Now Producing Eight Types of Cars.

There will be no new model Chevrolet to appear this August as usual, announces W. C. Moore, manager of the West Broad Chevrolet Co. The present model is giving entire satisfaction in every detail, as evidenced by the enormous number of sales made this year, with the demand still increasing he states, and as to a change of colors and body designs there could not be an improvement made over the present model.

Chevrolets are now produced in eight models: touring, roadster, coupe, coach, cabriolet, landeau, sedan and the Imperial sedan. The Imperial is their latest in body design and incorporates the features of the sedan and the coach. The two windows to each side and the bold color designs make it an outstanding car of the day.

The price of Chevrolets will remain unchanged, Mr. Moore states.

GROCER SAYS "TELL 'EM"

"If you don't tell 'em you can't sell 'em."

That was the advice recently given to the National Retail Grocers' association by Fred W. Anderson, whose merchandise store at Cozad, Neb., a town of 1200, does an annual business of $300,000.

"Every groceryman should spend at least 2 per cent of his gross receipts during 1927 for advertising," he said. "It is so powerful that it can change my breakfast, my automobile or my place of living."

Mr. Anderson said the success of his business depended entirely upon carefully planned advertising campaigns.

AVIATION LURES HILLTOP BOY

Travels 2500 Miles By Thumb Route, But Takes Good Advice and Returns Home.

"There's no place like home."

Harold Francis Davis, aged 14, son of Mrs. Clara Gordon, 276 N. Oakley Ave., makes the above statement after returning Monday evening from a 2500 mile trip by the thumb route which took him into the state of Kansas.

Harold vanished on July 9 and was not heard from until a post card arrived Monday evening, saying he would be home about Tuesday. As luck would have it, he was fortunate with the thumb and passing motorists brought him to Columbus a day sooner than he expected.

He traveled as far as Bunker Hill, Kansas, but explains that he detoured quite a bit so as to be able to strike the busy roads.

Harold has had a very keen interest in aviation and reports that the reason he went west was to go to an aviation school. He had corresponded with one in Kansas that had said he could work his way through, but Harold was unfortunate and lost the letter while on the trip and didn't know where to go.

While on the road in Kansas a motorist picked him up and upon relating his story the man advised him to return home if he ever expected to amount to anything. The man said he, too, had run away from home when 13 years old, but saw where he did right when he returned home.

Harold now intends to take an active part in the Aero Club for Boys at Norton Field.

Wanderlust Sidelights.

Harold says the Mississippi is yet very high and lots of damage has been done there.

He just escaped a tornado in Kansas.

When he left home he had but eight cents in his pockets, but managed to get a handout at farm houses and from motorists. His bed usually was a haystack or a pile of hay in a barn.

He says there's nothing to the west. What he saw looked just like it does here.

One man gave him a dollar and along with some food he bought a tooth brush and paste.

"It's been a good experience, but I'll never leave home again."

Legion Elects Officers

Sullivant Loyal Temperance Legion met July 18th at the home of Mrs. Jessie Shaver, it being a birthday party for Robert Shaver, one of its members.

The afternoon was taken up with singing instruction and preparing for public service.

Officers elected were: Lillian Workman, president; Irene Frisne, secretary and Alice Wellman, treasurer. Seventeen members were present.

This legion will take part in a meeting to be held at the Sunshine Mission, 116 Barthman avenue, on Tuesday evening, July 26th.

The Bethany Bible class met last Friday at the home of Mrs. Bina Nelson, 88 S. Roys Ave. A goodly number was present. The lesson was enjoyed by all. The next meeting will be in the form of a picnic, announcement to be made later.

Mrs. I. L. Kidd, 38 N. Warren Ave., returned Saturday from a motor trip through the east, visiting the different points of interest. Mrs. Kidd made the trip in company with Mr. and Mrs. Kidd of Chicago.

BIBLE SCHOOL TO CLOSE TOMORROW

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the Hilltop will present its closing day program Friday morning, July 22, beginning at 9 o'clock.

The program will consist of the regular morning worship service, and a playlet by each of the three departments, the kindergarten, primary and junior.

Following the program, certificates for regular attendance and faithful work will be awarded.

The handwork of each department will be on exhibit at the close of the program and in the afternoon from 2:30 to 7. All parents and friends are cordially invited to the program and to come in any time between the hours named to see the exhibit.

Miss Mary Mead, 86 S. Harris Ave., and Miss Ruth Curry, 35 W. Oakland Ave., left on July 19 for an extended trip to New York and Atlantic City.

Miss Gertrude Corrigan, 214 N. Hague Ave., returned Sunday, July 17, from Russell's Point, where she spent a month with her cousin, Miss Clara Mae Buckley.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

A HAIR OF THE DOG

"A hair of the dog that bit you" is in many parts of the country something more than a handy metaphor signifying that that which caused the evil will work the cure. If one will take the trouble to investigate he will be surprised how widespread is still the belief that the evil effects of a dog bite may be cured by applying to the wound "a hair of the dog." And this superstition exists not only in this country but in many others, being as widespread in locality as it is ancient in origin. It has its genesis in the old, old belief in sympathetic magic—the close connection which the ancients conceived to exist between a person and anything closely related to him or constructed in a resemblance of him and still more closely, naturally, between a man and any part of him which might become severed from his person—such as the hair or nails especially, living and growing parts of his bodily structure.

Thus the hair came to be regarded, even when cut off as still, in reality a fragment of its former wearer and, logically what a man's hair was to a man a dog's hair was to a dog. Now the spital of a man, or of any other animal belongs peculiarly to, in one sense is a part of, the man or other animal which secretes it. Therefore, if bitten by a dog apply to the wound a hair of the said dog and the spital of the dog, with all its properties for evil, will be attracted, naturally, to its homogenous part, the hair and not injure the alien body into which it has been injected. That's the way the ancients reasoned it out. Modern man does not reason it out at all, but still practices his sympathetic magic with a hair of the dog that bit him.

Reclaimed Cabin of First White Settler of Madison County, Ohio

Above is a reproduction of the first cabin of Jonathan Alder, first white settler of Madison county. The original site of the cabin was on the old Alder homestead, but has been moved to Alder Chapel, four miles north of West Jefferson.

Knowing that many people of the Hilltop are formerly from Madison County we give you the following interesting story taken from a rare collection of clippings of Henry Alder, 2808 W. Broad St., great-grandson of Jonathan Alder, first white settler of Madison county.

In printing the following story it is without any attempt on our part to give all the facts because of the small amount of space in which to say so much. Hence the brief and condensed high points in the life of Jonathan Alder, history-maker in Ohio and first settler of Madison County.

He was born a 1773 in New Jersey, when seven years of age the family moved to Wythe County, Va. Soon afterward his father died leaving the mother and four boys to provide for themselves.

A tragedy and turning point in the family life occurred when he was eleven years old. While hunting for a strayed horse he and his brother, David, were set upon by a band of six Mingo Indians. David attempted to escape but Jonathan allowed himself to be captured. Soon two of the Indians returned with a spear sticking in David's body.

The older brothers' scalp was taken but Jonathan was taken with the Indians and lived the Indian life until he was past twenty-one years of age.

During the time he never saw or heard of his family. In the tribe he was adopted by an Indian mother and father and after a few years had forgotten the English language. At one time he was traded as a prisoner to a white man but was treated so cruelly he made his way back to the Indians and no longer had a desire to go to the white people.

Jonathan's Indian mother died when she was eighty years old and the father soon followed. This left Jonathan a lonesome person and he began paying attention to an Indian widow named Barshaw, somewhat his senior in years but he later married her "in Indian fashion" and built a cabin on Big Darby near where Plain City now stands.

The lands at this time were abundant with deer, buffalo and bear.

In 1796 two other settlers came to Big Darby. They were Benjamin Springer and Uusal Osborne. Alder was unable to greet them in any other than the Indian sign language but they soon proved to be valuable neighbors and reclaimed him for civilization.

This reawakening brought him a desire to see his mother and also created a hatred between he and his Indian wife. Before this time they had had two children,but both had died. It seemed that the Great Spirit had provided that his life should be enacted in a different manner.

About this time John Moore entered his life and became a life-long friend and set out to find Alder's family. A trip back to Virginia was unsuccessful at that time but Moore posted some bills inquiring for the Alder family and later a visit to Franklinton (now Columbus) found a letter for Alder from his brother stating that his mother was yet alive.

Alder now settled with his Indian wife and sent her back to the tribe and along with Moore traveled over the mountains and arrived in dead winter at the Alder home in Virginia. This occurred in 1804.

Much rejoicing occured and finally the families decided to move back to Madison County, Ohio. Meantime Jonathan had fallen in love with Mary Blont, a beautiful Virginia maid and they were married and later raised a family of eleven children.

Jonathan Alder's remains now lie in Foster cemetery marked by a beautiful granite monument erected by his great grandson, Henry Alder.

Here again we have illustrated the old adage "Truth is stranger than fiction."

Miss Bernadine Drumm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Drumm, 85 S. Powell Ave., and Mr. Howard S. Williams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Williams, 239 Belvidere Ave., were united in marriage on Thursday morning, July 14, at 9 o'clock. The ceremony took place at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. Harry C. Hutchison, 2503 W. Broad St. Miss Louise Stroup attended as maid of honor and Mr. Joseph Williams, jr., brother of the bridegroom was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Williams left for California, where they will remain four months. The bridegroom, an electrical engineer, was graduated in 1924 from Ohio State university. He has since been employed by the Union Light & Power Co. of Davenport, Ia. The bride was graduated in 1926 from the college of education at Ohio State university.

Square Deal to All

My Republican Friend:

I am a candidate for Presiding Judge of the Municipal Court, City of Columbus, Ohio, subject to the Republican Primaries, August 9th, 1927. It is impossible for me to see all of the Republican voters; hence, this letter.

I live at 3009 North High Street. My entire life has been lived in Columbus. I was educated in the Public Schools of Columbus and at the Ohio State University. I was admitted to the Bar in 1904, and have practiced law in Columbus ever since. I belong to the Church of Christ on East Seventh Avenue, near High street. I am a member of the Buckeye Republican club, the Athletic club, the York Lodge of Masons, and the Elks.

As to my qualifications as a lawyer, I refer you to any Judge of any of our Courts. As to my qualifications as a man, you are welcome to ask anyone who personally knows me.

I believe it to be a Judge's duty to enforce the law impartially. By that I mean the rich should not be either punished or favored because they are rich, and the poor should neither be punished or favored because they are unable to hire high priced lawyers to present the merits of their case. The circumstances of the case and the defendant should be given consideration in every criminal case. I believe it is the Judge's duty to enforce the law as he finds it, whether he personally approve of the law or not, and that it is the Legislature's and the City Council's function to amend or repeal laws or ordinances, and not the Judge's duty or right.

I ask your consideration, and would appreciate your support at the polls.

Yours Truly,
JOY H. HUNT.

AERO CLUB FOR BOYS FORMED

Columbus youths between the ages of 12 and 17 who gazed skyward at Lindbergh and muttered, "Gee, I wish I could be like him," may have the opportunity to realize their wish.

The Columbus Junior Aero Club will be the means. It is an organization designed to stimulate interest in aviation among Columbus boys while giving them opportunity to learn something about the science. It is the idea of Lieutenant Frank McKee, commander at Norton Field and the Columbus Co-operative Club.

Mrs. Coy Church, 168 S. Ogden Ave., was hostess at a miscellaneous shower, Monday evening, July 11, in honor of Miss Beatrice Melenia Richards, 2250 Genesee Ave., whose marriage to Mr. Ivan Churchill, 347 Whitethorne Ave., will be an event of the near future. Following games and contests, refreshments were served. Those present were: Mrs. Emma Hanson of Hollywood, Calif.; Mrs. Nell Plyley, Miss Sylvia Lash, Mrs. Cora Sheron, Mrs. Ethel Jewell, Mrs. Loretta Israel, Miss Irene Engelekes, Miss Mertie Grimm, Mrs. Juanita Pfeifer, Miss Helen Ranhauser, Mrs. Dolores Shaffer, Mrs. Luella Trapp, Mrs. Rose Pfaff, Miss Ruth Burdette, and Miss Philamine Clark.

During November, 1926, Ontario trappers, making use of a specially designed snare, captured 653 wolves, on which the Government pays bounties. More than three thousand wolves were killed in the province between November, 1925, and June, 1926.

The Best Buy for You

You can find plenty of tire dealers who'll be glad to dicker with you, tempt you with all sorts of "special" deals.
We can't. It goes against our grain to pad up list prices in order to give you a discount or a "long trade"—to make ourselves good fellows at your expense.
We've been in the tire business for a good many years. We've watched the "bargain boys" and the "long discount" fellows come and go. Every year our business has increased.
Every year more shrewd tire buyers come to us for Goodyears—and they "stay put" on Goodyears.
Doesn't it seem logical that Goodyears will prove the best buy for you?

Let us show you our new catalog of Mimax Colors and improved methods of painting your car.

You will also note while you are in that we have a force of trained mechanics ready to give you complete 24-hours Auto Service on any make of car.

Beach Ensemble Proclaims the Picturesque In Color

When madam or mademoiselle lolls so happily, lazily under her vivid beach parasol or promenades in the warm sands or perhaps prettily poses upon the pier as she does in this picture, she is expected to do so in gorgeous array.

In the selection of her beach robe, be it coolie coat or one of the large new shawl squares, her headgear, her sandals, likewise her bright parasol and gay cushions and all the accoutrement which goes to make up a perfect ensemble, milady of fashion exercises as fastidious taste as she does in the choosing of her most formal and fetching ballroom attire. And when she does just so, behold! a radiant picture of decorative display on the beach, such as this illustration sets forth.

For this "useful as well as ornamental" beach robe striped khaki kool is the preferred medium. The cap is also of this Romany-striped material.

At every step of the way along this sandy shore one meets these sirens of the sea clad in spectacular beach array. Among the most popular beach coats which affect the picturesque in color are many of smart linen crash dashingly printed, then bordered by way of contrast with black satin.

Of all the interesting beach styles none are perhaps more interesting, at least from the point of novelty, than are the capes and coats made of heavy unbleached muslin, decorated to simulate hand-painting. For instance an artful all-enveloping cape with scarf ties at the throat is bordered to a considerable depth with a huge colorful fish and seashell design.

This new fashion of hand-painted unbleached muslin for resort wear bids fair to assume the proportions of a widespread vogue before the summer is past. One can make such clever coolie coats of the muslin, painting them as amusingly and gorgeously gay as one chooses.

Gingham, too, is receiving its share of notice for beach apparel and bathing suits. Cretonne, also, continues to enliven the beach style, as it appears made up in robes, parasols, cushions and lounging pads.

Mother's Cook Book

"If every one were wise and sweet,
And every one were jolly;
If every heart with gladness beat,
And none were melancholy;
If none should grumble or complain,
And nobody should labor
In evil work, but each were fain
To love and help his neighbor—
Oh, what a happy world 'twould be
For you and me, for you and me.'"

GOOD THINGS TO EAT

We all have some recipes which we enjoy preparing again and again. One of these is a good cooky recipe for in most homes the cooky jar is a very important part of the household equipment, and it is wise to keep it well stocked.

Martha's Cookies

Take one cupful of shortening, add two cupfuls of sugar, three well-beaten eggs, salt and one-half cupful of milk. Sift two cupfuls of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and add lemon flavoring, or the grated rind of a lemon. Let stand an hour to chill, then roll with as little flour as possible.

Raisin Pie

Take one cupful of raisins, chop fine and cook in one cupful of water five minutes; add three-fourths of a cupful of sugar well mixed with a tablespoonful of cornstarch; add the yolks of two eggs and the juice and grated rind of a lemon.

Jelly Roll

Beat three eggs until light, add one cupful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water and a pinch of salt, stir in one cupful of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, adding the flour gradually. Bake in a dripping pan well greased. Turn out on a towel wrung out of cold water. Trim the edges, spread with jelly and roll up while warm.

Apple Roll

Make a rich biscuit dough, roll out and cover with one cupful of chopped apples well sugared and flavored with either cinnamon or nutmeg. Bake one-half hour, then pour over some cranberry sauce and bake ten minutes more.

Chocolate Pudding

Beat one egg, add one-half cupful of sugar and one cupful of milk, pour over one and one-half cupfuls of flour sifted with three teaspoonfuls of baking powder; when well blended add two squares of chocolate, melted, a pinch of salt. Steam one and one-half hours.

A report from the Berlin office of the Department of Commerce says that a German film depicting spider life has been completed by Walter Schultz, Chief of the Biological Division of the Universum Film Company. The film shows a spider spinning his web, catching flies which have become entangled in the meshes, and then killing them. Dr. Schultz says that spiders are camerashy, and that it was only after a hundred attempts that this spider was photographed.

PROTECT AGAINST DAMAGE BY MOTHS

Woolen and Fur-Trimmed Clothing Must Be Stored.

Woolen and fur-trimmed clothing, fur coats and separate pieces, and all the extra woolen blankets that are not in use during the warm weather, must, as every housekeeper knows, be very carefully protected against damage by moths. The miller, or adult moth, does not eat fabrics; it selects them for laying its eggs, however, so that the larvae, or worms, will have an abundant supply of suitable food as soon as they are hatched. If there are spots due to food on the garments reached by the moth, the larva is even more attracted to that part of the material.

It pays, therfore, according to the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture, to put everything away scrupulously clean. Coats and suits that are properly stored immediately after a trip to the dry cleaner have a very good chance to escape moth damage. This is not only because the spots have been removed, but because, in all probability, the garments have been thoroughly brushed, so that any concealed moth eggs are dislodged, and after that they have been aired and sunned to get rid of the gasoline odor. The same general treatment—thorough cleaning and brushing, with a good sunning—applied to all clothing at home before storing it for the summer, will go a long way toward assuring protection from moths.

Everything must be kept in tight containers. A brown paper parcel will do as well as an expensive treated bag, provided it is carefully done up in such a way that no moths could possibly get in to lay their eggs. Any tight chest or trunk is good, if the clothes have first been properly prepared, but cedar chests have the special virtue of killing any young larvae that might chance to develop in spite of the most careful efforts to brush and beat the garments. The use of napthalene or paradichlorobenzene flakes inside a tight package or box or trunk is also good and is recommended, since the fumes, when closely confined, will kill the moth.

It is sometimes possible to seal a closet where clothing is being stored in such a way that moths cannot enter. On the whole, the safest course for the housewife to follow is to put the clothing for each individual in a suit box by itself, with napthalene or paradichlorobenzene, and wrap each one up in several thicknesses of heavy paper, turned under at the ends so that no insects can get in to lay eggs. It is needless to add that each box should have its contents noted on the outside so that it need not be unwrapped in order to locate some article.

Making Use of the Cat Tail

We have found many interesting ways of using the exteriors of cat tails, painting them with different shades of irridescent paints, combining them with painted leaves for winter decorations, but the "adult" cat tail is too large for this purpose, and the inner feathers sometimes burst out surprisingly, flooding the room with a downy mass. Cat-tail down makes a wonderful fluffy filling for small decorative pillows, and one trip in the country will secure enough large cat tails for many dainty cushions.

The fluffiest of baby-crib covers may be made from cat-tail down. A strip of cheese cloth the size of the quilt to be made should be used to spread the down on evenly. The down will adhere to the cheese cloth, but cheese cloth will not be sufficient cover for the fine particles if any pressure is made on it, so another light, finely woven piece of cotton should be used for an exterior cover before the silk or silkaline is applied to the outside.

The cover should then be quilted in the ordinary way, but the knots should be made quite close together.

The finished cover will be lighter than feathers, even though twice the thickness of an ordinary quilt. It is an ideal summer quilt for the carriage, and can be used for a pad on the grass if baby is taken to the park or to the woods.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Thomas Brent, bachelor, and self-made man of wealth, is ordered by his physicians to take a long vacation in the open—"Get Back to Nature."

CHAPTER II.—Brent disappears, leaving Philip Scrottles, his manager, power of attorney to conduct the business. He also advertises for a small, red-haired, freckle-faced boy.

CHAPTER III.—With a young companion he has found, appropriately nicknamed "Freck," Brent is living in an out-of-the-way place, in primitive fashion, subsisting mostly on frogs' legs.

CHAPTER IV.—Brent acquires his first knowledge of "crawdads," incidentally, at the cost of great physical discomfort, rescuing two elderly ladies of color from threatened drowning.

CHAPTER V.—Somewhat weary of the "Back to Nature" idea, Brent sets out for the railroad, and home. He overhears Scrottles and a business rival planning to get possession of his business. He returns to "Freck," with his mind made up to get his health restored and "even" his enemies hard. "Freck" finds a cave, in which he and Brent take up their abode.

"Well, we'll take the slippery slide," came the answer. "I never went swimming in my life."

"You never went— Oh, snakes!" Freck gazed at the man before him with wonder in his face. "You honest about that, Mr. Brent? Didn't you ever go swimming and play slippery slide and wild man or anything of the kind?"

"Never in my life."

"Huh!" Freck voiced his disapproval of such a mode of living in one short ejaculation. "We'll go after dinner," he said shortly.

Thereupon the fishing progressed until Mr. Brent felt he had enough finny morsels to satisfy his steadily growing appetite and that of Freck. Then he motioned the boy to sit down.

"I'm going to do this cooking for a while," he said. "You sit around and look wise. What's that you got there?"

Freck was busily threading a resined string through a hole in a tin can. "It's a lion yeller," he announced. "Wait until I finish it and you'll see." He ended his operation and then, with a long, steady jerk, he drew the string through the can. An unearthly, growling roar was the response.

"Sounds just like a lion, doesn't it?" Freck asked. "I heard one once in a circus. Sounds just like it. I can have lots of fun with this thing when I go back to town. We'll take it along with us this afternoon when we go swimming and when we're playing wild man we can have this for the bears and lions and things."

"Well, how do you know I'm going to play any wild man?" Brent asked with a chuckle as he turned the fish in the skillet.

"You've got to play wild man if you go swimming in a slippery slide," Freck said.

"Well, I guess I'll have to do it, then," Mr. Brent answered. "Freck cut some bread."

Dinner over, they lazied about in the sun a while and slept on the warm logs for an hour or two. Then, doffing their clothes and donning the trunks, they started for the swimming hole.

An hour later two grotesque figures lay on the sand on the banks of Indian creek. Each was striped and circled with mud until all resemblance to humanity was lost. Freck resembled somewhat a painted pygmy of the African jungles, while Thomas Brent, president of the Amalgamated Foundry company, looked like a cross between a Malay savage and a Fiji Islander. His face, his arms, his legs, and his body were ringed and crossed with mud lines. His head was plastered with a muddy crown into which was stuck a decoration of pokeberries. He carried a large piece of bark as a shield and a long branch of pawpaw for a spear.

"Freck," he said with a momentary return to dignity, "this is a fool stunt—but it's lots of fun."

"Sure it is," said Freck; "but we ain't danced the war dance yet."

"Well, let's have it."

Freck let out a yelp and started in a circle. Thomas Brent, forgetful of the fact that he was fighting a half-million-dollar battle against Scrottles and the Kelly-Griggs company, forgetful of the fact that he was a man of forty-five, overweight, with a bad set of nerves, digestion that two weeks before had been extraordinarily poor, and a temper that had made him famous, dropped his shield and started to join in the festivities. Suddenly, however, he stopped and gasped. Around the bend he had seen something fluttering.

"Freck," he said, "your eyes are better than mine. What's that? It's a white something, and it's moving this way."

"Trade Your Smiles"

Be sure and read Seiller's important announcement, page 6.

The pygmy savage of the African jungles looked intently ahead. Then he whirled and grasped his resin can "lion yeller." "Oh, snakes!" he exclaimed. "Quick! We got to hide ourselves."

"Hide ourselves?"

Freck looked here and there anxiously, then started toward a thick clump of brush. "Come on. We'll hide in here." "We haven't got time to get up to the cave." He started ahead and Mr. Brent followed.

"What's the row, Freck. Hide ourselves? What—"

Freck answered anxiously over his shoulder as he hurried toward the brush clump: "It's a Sunday school picnic."

When he and Freck gained the protection of the shrubbery, Brent, panting a bit, turned to look about him. The boy had been right. It was a picnic coming from goodness only knows where, but determined, it seemed, to pass exactly the spot where the boy and man were hiding. There were about fifty persons in the group, mostly women, with a sprinkling of men to carry the baskets. Brent pressed himself as closely as he could to the ground and turned a bewildered pair of eyes toward Freck.

"Think they'll see us?" he asked.

"No," Freck answered. "They're too busy thinking where they're going to stop and eat."

"Well, I hope to goodness they don't stop here," Brent said soulfully, and settled down to watch again.

The party approached slowly with its vanguard of women looking here and there anxiously for a place to stop and spread the afternoon meal.

Brent saw them pause, point, and then hurry forward. He groaned. "We're gone," he said; "we're gone."

And in truth the party had selected for a stopping place a green sward not thirty feet from where the refugees were hiding. They circled about, laughing and talking, and began to spread the tablecloth on the ground, while the men carried water from the creek. Freck looked at Brent with eyes that spoke much. Brent returned the gaze, but neither uttered a word.

Slowly the preparations for the picnic meal went forward while Brent and the boy, in strained positions in the shrubbery, looked on and prayed that something might happen to drive the party away. But no thunder rolled, no lightning flashed, no miracle came floating out of the sky, nothing happened to end the muscular agony of the two cramped and straining bodies doubled up in the shrubbery.

Brent's breath began to come hard. His muscles were rebelling against the unusual strain without relaxation. His eyes sought Freck's appealingly. "Boy, we got to do something," he whispered. "I'm about to break in two." "Go on and move. They won't hear you," Freck answered.

Brent cast another look in the direction of the party. The backs of most of them were turned. He decided to take the chance and to spread out on his stomach. He moved.

And an unfortunate move it was, for in some way the string of Freck's "lion yeller" had become firmly wedged between two of Mr. Brent's toes while the can itself was fairly implanted behind a fork of brush. With the first motion there issued forth a screeching roar which sounded like the wail of a thousand lost souls.

Be sure and read Seiller's important announcement, page 6.

"Trade Your Smiles."

It frightened Mr. Brent. With a half yelp he jumped to his feet just in time to see a greatly surprised picnic party scrambling up and looking amazedly at him. His hands went into the air. "Woof!" he grunted, and with the first instinct of protection strong within him, leaped to one side and ran.

There were screams, yells, shouts. Brent looked back. A woman or two had fainted. Two or three men were seizing clubs and preparing to follow him.

"Gosh," he said to himself with a grunt, "they thing I'm a real wild man!"

He plunged forward into the woods and sought to regain the cave. A yell or two from behind told him that the men were still on his trail. He heard a sharp report from the rear and a stinging something passed by him.

"Good-bye, Thomas," he consoled himself. "They're shooting at you."

But on he went, dodging here and there. Again and again he sought to find the entrance to the cave where he might lose himself from the men who were following. It was an impossibility. Bewildered, befuddled, he had lost all sense of direction, and blindly dodged here and there, anywhere, in the effort to throw his pursuers off the trail. At last the cries from behind grew fainter. Brent realized that the pursuit was over. Slowly he sank beneath a tree and gasped back a part of the breath he had lost, and he remained there.

It seemed good to rest in the sun after that wild chase. It was warm and pleasant and comforting. He allowed his head to sink lower and lower. At last he slept.

"Gosh," He Said to Himself With a Grunt. "They Think I'm a Wild Man!"

When he awoke it was with a start and the realization that night was approaching, that he was hungry, that the warm air of the day was different from the cool air of evening, that he was still in the attire and decoration of a cross between a Malay savage and a Fiji Islander. He groaningly rolled over and looked stodgily at the moon.

"Doggone it!" he burst out wholeheartedly. "Doggone it!" But the ejaculation did no good except to relieve somewhat his overcharged feelings. It brought him no nearer his clothes, no nearer the cave, no nearer anything except the realization that he was lost in the woods in exceedingly thin attire and that it was going to get rather cool before morning.

"No fool like an old fool," he growled as he arose and stumbled toward an open space where the moonlight made progress better. "I've got to get this crazy mud off of me or I'll go insane. If I could find the creek, maybe I could follow it back to the cave or somewhere near it.

"That Freck is a wise one," Mr. Brent commented to himself. "Had sense enough to stay in that brush and not move, and of course they didn't think of looking for him. There he is rolled up in his blanket, asleep, warm, and comfortable—comfortable," he said slowly and with a shiver. "Huh! there isn't any such condition."

A shimmer in the distance caught his eye and he plunged forward, colliding with a few trees now and then, but at last reaching the creek where with chattering teeth he bathed away the hateful mud, and then, shivering and trembling, started along its banks in the hope of finding the cave. The air was growing colder, and every little while Brent was forced to pause and do a short but energetic war dance to keep the chatter out of his teeth and the tremble and shiver out of his body.

"G-g-gosh, it's c-c-cold," he muttered to himself time after time. "I wish I could find that c-c-cave."

He stopped with the assertion and lugubriously surveyed an object displayed before him in the moonlight. He sat down and looked at it. He began to calculate. It was a hollow log he saw—a large hollow log, plenty big enough to accomodate him.

"That would keep off the breeze," he mused. "I ought to be warm in there. No harm in trying it, anyway."

So he pushed himself in feet first. As far as he had gone it did feel warm. He gave himself another push. He felt one foot go through something soft and sticky. He believed he felt several small objects brush against one leg. He heard a drowsy humming. He gave himself another push. The foot penetrated further. The humming grew louder. Then with a yelp the arms of Thomas Brent clawed the air while he sought to pull himself out of the log.

"Bees!" he gasped. "Bumblebees! I've pushed into a nest of 'em. Ouch! Ouch! Ouch!" He dragged himself forth, his arms turned into windmills. Chilliness was no longer a fear with him now. He had plenty of warmth to his body. The bumblebees, sleepy at first, had come forth in a swarm by this time and in the darkness were attacking the intruder from fifty different angles. He leaped here and there, he rolled upon the ground, he grunted, he yelped; he sprang to his feet and ran, brushing away the bees as he went.

"Lovely night, ain't it?" he gasped sarcastically to himself as he felt the bumps on every part of his body. "Beautiful night! Doggone it! There is only one thing for me to do, and that is to keep moving until morning."

And paradoxically with that statement he stopped. Not fifty feet from him was a small house with a woodshed in the rear. With almost a shout on his lips, Brent started forward. Then he hesitated.

"Fine chance I'd have going up to that house at two o'clock in the morning covered with bumblebee bites and a bathing suit," he complained. He scratched his head thoughtfully. "That'd never do, Tom. You'll have to sleep in the woodshed. Ten to one," he added soulfully, "they'll have fifty dogs and every one of 'em will start barking when you get there. Then somebody'll come out with a shotgun and fill you full of buckshot and rock salt. Isn't this a lovely night, though?

14 CANDIDATES FOR COUNCIL

Ray G. Haunts of Hilltop in Race for Seat on Governing Body.

Fourteen men threw their hats in the ring for seats in the City Council, subject to the primary on August 9. Eight of these men will be named at that time and later, in the fall elections, four of these will be eliminated.

Of interest to the people of the Hilltop is the fact that Ray Haunts, well-known Hilltop grocer, Floyd Green of Crescent Drive and William F. Tucker of West Broad street, seek to represent this community in that body.

Following are the other candidates: Reginald Heber, Robert T. Oestrecher, Dr. Howard W. Miller, David S. Parry, Burton M. Huff, J. M. Clark, Henry W. Horch, J. C. McIntyre, Emil C. Ebert, John Lewis and Frank Karnes.

Dr. Charles F. Pabst, attending dermatologist at Greenpoint Hospital, Brooklyn, New York, warns against overexposure to the sun's rays during July and August when the sun delivers large amounts of ultra-violet light. Such overexposure may result in "a chemical burn which damages the skin, induces skin diseases, and even endangers the life of the victim."

The Sandman Story

by Martha Martin

HEARTLESS CHICKEN POX

"Now look here," said Peter Gnome to a mean, ugly-looking creature that went by the name of Chicken Pox.

"Where," asked Chicken Pox, "is there some place where we could annoy where we haven't so far?"

"Dear me, I don't mean that," said Peter Gnome. "Have you no heart?"

"Of course not," said Chicken Pox. "What good would a heart do in our family? We wouldn't want one apiece certainly and we wouldn't want one for the lot of us."

"Don't you ever feel sorry for anyone?" asked Peter Gnome. "Not even a little scrap sorry?"

"No," said Chicken Pox, "we don't. Sometimes you will hear of a mild case of chicken pox which some one has. Well, maybe you think that means we're feeling a little sorry for people, but it doesn't.

"No, no, if you think that, you're wrong.

"It means that we're taking a rest from all our fun. It doesn't mean that we're having sympathy or anything like that.

"Sometimes we get a little weary with all the fun and excitement we have."

"I'd Give You the Chicken Pox If I Could, Peter Gnome."

"I wish you got weary oftener," said Peter Gnome.

"That's the splendidly mean part of us," said Chicken Pox, for we don't care what anyone wishes us to do. You may beg me to be good but I won't be, no, indeed.

"Of course we're sometimes driven away when people are in good health and good health is an enemy of ours, but we're never good because we're asked to be good.

"I'd give you the chicken pox if I could, Peter Ghome. But of course the fairies and the elves and the brownies and the gnomes and the others of your friends and relations can never have any of our sicknesses.

"An yet you are always wishing we'd leave people alone. Isn't it enough that we leave you alone?"

"You can't help doing that. It isn't as though you wanted to do so," said Peter Gnome.

"No, we'd be ashamed to do so out of kindness. It's only because we can't help ourselves.

"But here you are, trying to make us give kindness about when that is not what we do.

"You're different from some creatures, Peter Gnome. Some creatures who're rich or well are so satisfied with what they have themselves that they don't care about others.

"But you're always wishing to scatter good fortune and health about.

"We, of our family, can't understand it.

"You see, years ago we began our mean ways and they've grown on us and we're not in the least sorry, so there is no hope of changing us!

"We love it when children rub us hard and scratch our mean selves, for then we can make them feel even worse.

"Oh, we like to be so mean and so horrid and so hateful. It's such fun to us."

"Dear me," said Peter Gnome, "it is sad to think that there must be such a thing in the world as you, Chicken Pox, but one thing more—"

"No," said Chicken Pox, you've kept me talking enough. I must be off."

"Don't go, Chicken Pox. I have something else to ask you."

But Chicken Pox had gone. Peter Gnome, though, was glad that he had kept Chicken Pox this long for he was kept away from doing his bad deeds in this way, and that was the best Peter Gnome could do with him—to delay him every time he got the chance so that Chicken Pox could do less than was planned.

As for changing Chicken Pox and the family ways! Alas Chicken Pox and the family were without hearts, and what in the world can even a dear little gnome do with a heartless family?

New Camp Ground

A new camp ground, ideal for camping and picnic parties was opened up last week one-fourth mile north of the Girls' Industrial school on the west side of the river. George Geminhardt an old Hilltop resident is owner of the farm there and is throwing the camp sites open to the public.

People of the Hilltop who know Mr. Geminhardt will be interested in visiting his place.

Hilltop School of Music West Broad and Eldon, open from 2 to 5 for registration for fall work.

FINE WEATHER MAY SOON BE MADE TO ORDER

Fine weather may be made to order, just like any commodity, is the prediction of Sir Oliver Lodge, noted British scientist.

"The advance of science since the days when I was a student has been portentous," he said. "Sooner or later, we shall be exercising control over the weather. I do not see why we should put up with bad weather if we do not want it."

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"TOXIC"

Frequently we hear infections or other ills of the body referred to as "toxic" conditions and we know the word to mean "poisonous." Most of us, however, do not know that its syllables are no mere etymological combinations originating in deliberate word coining, but a relic of an illuminating practice of an ancient people. And in its origin the word bears no relation to the sick room or the medical laboratory.

"Toxic" comes to us from the Latin special substance used for the tips in making poisoned arrows. It is from this ancient arrow poisoning also that we have the modern word "toxine" poisonous substances in the body, and to the same source, too, we must credit "toxicology," the science of poisons!

The Jury of Awards of the Sesquicentennial Exposition in Philadelphia awarded a gold medal to the New York College of Forestry, at Syracuse University, for its valuable educational services connected with forest conservation. The award was given for a series of exhibits prepared by the college, "showing progress made in forestry educational methods, in presenting forestry to the public, and the manner in which students have been brought into contact with the subject by taking them into the field where actual operations of forest management are conducted." The college has a larger area in forest experiment stations than any other forestry institution. The area includes over 4000 acres, in which are found all types of forests and all conditions of forest land.

MANY VISITORS AT HILLTOP LIBRARY

A report from the Holmes Hilltop library shows the patronage for the summer to be holding up very well. The librarian gave out 171 books on Monday and states that every day has been good but there has been a drop over the winter months.

Several books have been donated lately and now are ready for distribution.

It is not too late to subscribe to the library yet. Any contribution for this worthy cause will be gladly received or previous pledges may be paid any time now at several Hilltop drug stores and confectioneries or at the Hilltop Record or Holmes Hilltop library.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Curlis and sons Royce and Billy, 300 S. Hague Ave., spent last week at their cottage "Ino," Buckeye Lake. They had as guests during the week: Mrs. William Homer and daughters Fern and Elizabeth; Clarence Hiermer; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd F. Green and daughters Dorothy and Lila Jean of Sugar Grove, Ohio.

GLADIOLI SHOW AUGUST 12-13

Amateur Growers Urged to Compete for Prizes in Hilltop Display.

The Gladiolus Show which is to be held at Hope Memorial Presbyterian church August 12th and 13th is already attracting wide interest. This will be a wonderful opportunity for all who are interested in this, the most popular of all summer flowers to exhibit their own bloom in competition with other amateur growers for valuable prizes, which will consist entirely of high class bulbs.

You will also have the opportunity to see the flowers of more recent introduction as several of the large growers of central Ohio will be there with large displays of the real Aristocrats of the Gladiolus world.

The Hilltop Glad Gardens which are conducted by Mr. F. P. Carpenter of 110 N. Powell Ave. and Mr. E. I. Price of 147 S. Terrace St., are making all local arrangements and have prepared a very attractive Prize Schedule which may be obtained either by calling at either of the addresses given above or calling by phone.

This show is entirely free, no charge being made either to enter your flowers or for admission. Just bring your flowers with vases or containers and the committee in charge will give you every possible assistance in placing them in the proper classes.

This show can be made an annual Hilltop affair if the people of this section will show their appreciation by bringing their flowers and attending the show themselves.

Mr. Carpenter and Mr. Price are both Hilltop men and it is only through their interest and influence that the Hilltop was selected in preference to other sections of the city. Now Hilltop flower lovers, let's help make this one of the big events of the year, come and bring your flowers.

In order to compete for the prizes have your flowers in place by Friday, August 12, at 10 o'clock at which time the judging will be started.

Changing Times

Supply may come and supply may go but as long as the right price is attached the supply goes on forever.

A little over a year ago the gas companies advertised a shortage of gas and urged people to "go easy" on the amount they used. And it pays to advertise because today they are getting a higher price for their product and advertising how handy the good old gas is.

What a whale of a difference just a few cents make.

When Southgate Optimist club met at 2 p. m. Wednesday, July 27, with Mrs. Carl Smith, 236 Columbian Ave., hostesses included Mrs. Harry Putnam, Mrs. Elmer Evans, Mrs. Ray Reinrad, Mrs. William Rader and Mrs. Carl Crawford.

OFFICERS FOR 1928 ELECTED

R. P. Rauch to Head Chautauqua Guarantors; Not Certain of Program for Next Year.

Election of officers for the Chautauqua of 1928 for the Hilltop was held among the guarantors Friday night at the close of the last program. R. P. Rauch, 211 N. Powell Ave., was elected head of the body of guarantors. Other officers are Herbert Davis, treasurer, and R. O. Harrison, secretary.

No definite conclusion has as yet been decided upon in regard to the chautauqua for next year. A total of 200 guarantors is necessary but at the close of the program on Friday night there were only about 120 signers. An attempt will be made soon by the new officers to secure the remaining required guarantors. It is hoped that the task will be accomplished without much trouble.

If the proper spirit is shown by the Hilltop people when asked to sell four tickets there will be no doubt as to the future of chautauqua for the Hilltop. This is a matter that cannot easily be turned aside without leaving a blot on the community. We have had this opportunity of attending chautauqua for the past six years and should continue to do so.

Property Owners to Meet Friday Evening

HILLCREST LOSES TO GLENWOOD

Glenwood M. E. church baseball nine took the Hillcrest Baptist team into camp last Friday evening at McKinley field to the count of 25-4. Twelve runs were scored in the first inning by the Glenwooders.

Glenwood meets the team from the Presbyterian Chapel tomorrow evening at 6:30 at McKinley Field. Baseball fans are missing some good games when they aren't present at the West Church league games.

REPUBLICANS HOLD MEETING

Hillcrest Church Monday; Three Candidates Speak to 11th Ward Club.

At a pot-luck supper held in the basement of the Hillcrest Baptist church on Monday evening at 6:30 three Republican candidates for offices in the coming primaries asked for the support of those present and pledged themselves to an honest career in office if elected. About 250 were present. The meeting was sponsored by the Eleventh Ward Republican club.

Joy H. Hunt, candidate for presiding judge of the Municipal court in a few words told the men and women present that he assured them an honest, fair, and impartial service if nominated and elected. Mr. Hunt says he believes in rotation whereby the judge should serve in police court every three months. He is a supporter of the nineteenth amendment and says the ladies should have had the right to vote long ago. He complimented his opponent and said "Regardless of who you elect, be sure you have the right man in office and save our Republican party."

The next speaker was Harry Lehman, candidate for re-election as clerk of the municipal court. Mr. Lehmman gave the following figures to show the number of cases before the court in the past. In 1916 there were 6300, 1924 there were 11,764 and in 1926 a total of 17,092. He explained that the city was not getting worse but that these figures show the increasing accomplishments of the police and courts. Thugs and bank robbers that infest other cities know better than to stop off here he said.

In concluding his speech Mr. Lehman said he promised a more efficient court four years ago when he was in the race and felt that he had made good and would make the same promise again.

Ray Haunts, says in running for the city council he is doing so for the good of the community and not for any personal gain. His plans if elected are to carry on his part of the business of the council in a business like manner. He urges the people to vote and wants to see the Hilltop come out as one of the leading voting sections of the city. "Thirteen thousand votes from a city of 800,000 is more or less of a disgrace and should be avoided" says Mr. Haunts. Mr. Haunts is a Hilltop business man and his past record in affairs of the community is very commendable.

All those present agreed that Republican women are right there when it comes to serving the food. Music was given by the Sword Melody girls and a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Lillian Warner.

Mrs. Margaret L. Jones and her daughter, Miss Olwen Jones, 34 Midland Ave., left last Thursday for a motoring trip through the east. They were accompanied by Miss Elizabeth Herbert of Cleveland. During the month of August they will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mostyn L. Jones at Ocean Edge colony, Staten Island, N. Y. Mr. Mostyn Jones is a son of Mrs. Margaret Jones. Miss Edith Jones, who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Jones in New York city since the middle of June, will return to Columbus in September, with her mother and sister.

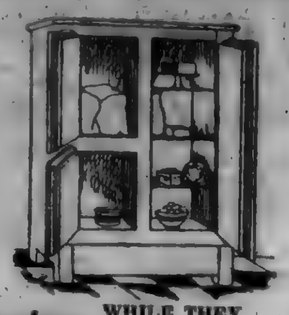
Registration Saturday, Aug. 6



Government is the fundamental basis of our nation but only about one out of every ten take an active part in it," says Ralph Parlette, Chicago newspaper man and national philosopher.

This lends a talking point that should be of interest to everyone in our city as the time for the primaries draws near. All those who have not been registered and all those who have moved into a new precinct will have a chance to register on August 6 at the various conveniently located voting booths. The primary election follows on Tuesday, August 9.

Hilltop people cannot afford to miss this chance to take a part in their own governmental affairs. It is the duty of every citizen to make some expression by voting. Some may think the primaries are not important but it must be remembered that the men to fill the offices are to be picked at this time and without the selection of the proper men in the primaries on August 9 it will be impossible to select the right man to fill the office. If the truth was known it would be little more than impossible to lay the blame for the existing graft and crookedness of politics at the feet of any other than the citizen who has the right of voting but stays away from the polls.

Hilltop people should be especially interested in the coming election since there are three Hiltop men in the race for city council. Community spirit alone should be encouragement enough to draw out a greater percentage vote from the Hilltop than from any other section of the city. If we are to uphold this wide-awake spirit it will be necessary for every one to vote on August 9.

CHAUTAUQUA IS BIG SUCCESS

Tent Well Filled Each Night to Hear Finest Program Sent Out.

Last Friday night brought the last number of a very delightful program of chautauqua to the Hilltop.

Disregarding the fact that nearly every program was hashed by the campaign for guarantors for next year, we can say this year's program was a big success. But many Hilltop people gained the wrong impression and were lost to chautauqua through these repeated interruptions that were promised not to come up for this year.

Probably the outstanding numbers on the whole circuit were the Romany Revelers and "The Patsy." These two alone were well worth the price of a season ticket.

Following are a few quotations from the outstanding numbers:

"A Message from Mars"

One is able to cope with the elements when he has cleaned the windows of his mind.

There is but one foundation that will last—love.

There can be no summer of love in a winter of self.

Human nature can be changed.

Love and science don't agree.

A woman can't do anything for a man unless he loves her.

"The Patsy"

There's no use crying over spilled milk because there's enough water in it already.

All the world's a stage but most of us are merely stage hands.

If it wasn't for the rain there wouldn't be any hay to make in the sunshine.

Love is like a toothache—nobody has to tell you when you have it.

People are always interested in those who are interested in them and what they are doing.

A chicken is the only animal that's useful before it's born and after it's dead.

If it wasn't for you our family tree would die—you're the sap.

Open confession is good for the soul but not for the reputation.

Ralph Parlette

On Thursday night, Ralph Parlette spoke on the subject "Swat the Snake." From the many good things this philosophical humorist said we repeat the following:

There is no finer place in God's world than right here in Columbus.

A Fable: "Once upon a time a snake wriggled up to a man and said: 'Mr. Head, Mr. Hands, Mr. Feet, Mr. Legs—you are all getting an unfair deal. You do all the work and Mr. Stomach gets all the food.' He finally coaxed them to strike and on Tuesday Mr. Mouth refused to open up for business and all other parts refused to work. The days grew on but the parts grew weaker and weaker until they went back to work and from then on cooperated. Since that time man has been looking for the snake to swat."

Mr. Parlette returns from a trip around the world and says the American dollar is bowed to everywhere.

This chautauqua is a bargain. You'll do better on the Hilltop.

We are all kings by co-operation and the business of the public is our business. Just for example, they built an 18 million dollar building at Chicago just for me to buy my ticket in when I started down here.

What we need is less dollars and more sense.

There's nothing wrong with the young people of today. A Chicago preacher last week preached his "annual sermon to the young." During the time he pointed out the many things wrong with the young people of today as he read them from his sermon. When he had finished he said: "The young people of our day were not that way were they?" A large count of the older people piped up with "Of course the weren't." "Well," he said, "the sermon I have just finished reading was written in 1868.

Mr. Parlette admires the women for wanting to be beautiful and says "Long may she permanent wave."

He pointed out the instances of modern co-operation and showed the great progress made by those who co-operated.

Mr. Parlette very delightfully entertained his audience by describing the maneuvers of his hometown band but says there were too many solos and especially too many knockers at the drums. "When you of Hilltop get your band organized remember that you'll be more admired for your concerts together than you will for your solos."

"Trade Your Smiles"

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"BROADCLOTH"

In the word "broadcloth," by which we described a certain fine textured woolen suiting material, we have a good example of the curious twists and turns of words.

The name originally referred to the width, not the quality or texture, of the material. It had its origin in the early days of the industry in England when this cloth was made double width.

With the methods when "broadcloth" was being made, then in vogue we learn, two weavers were required at the loom in order to bring the shuttle across the entire width.

TRY THIS

By EDNA FURDY WALSH

For centuries cat fanciers have thought and planned unsuccessfully to give pussy medicine without a struggle. It was never a one-man job. Even after three healthy individuals had successfully given pussy a pill or a dose of medecine, that is, they had conveyed it to her mouth and then closed her jaws upon it, to their dismay if she did not want it she would not swallow it, and at the first chance would spit it out.

But there is a natural law in the affairs of cats. A cat will always lick off material that clings to her paws.

Acting upon this law, a cat connoisseur discovered this way of successfully giving medecine—by saturating her paw with it. If the medecine is in pill form it can be made into a paste and smeared on her paw. Angora cats who need olive oil can be given sufficient for their needs in this way.

Many cats will take the various oils if they are first heated and whipped into warm milk.

"Hamlet," one of the most famous, is also the longest of Shakespeare's plays, containing 3930 lines, and "The Comedy of Errors" the shortest with 1777 lines.

WARNED OF DIPTHERIA

Toxin-Antitoxin Should Be Administered Says Dr. Beer.

So far this year there have been twelve deaths from diptheria. City Health Commissoner Beer has warned parents to take necessary precaution against this disease. Dr. Beer says parents should have their children immunized against the disease by treatment with toxin-antitoxin, administered by the family physician.

Ada Keil, 12, of 1535 Thomas Ave., died Thursday at her home, since the antitoxin had been given too late to save her.

The Department of Agriculture has signed a statement to discourage the superstition of "moon farming," which has survived since the middle ages. Some farmers still regulate their work according to the "light" or the "dark" of the moon. But since the moon has no influence on the weather or on the condition of the soil, and since its light is never enough to affect the growth or diseases of plants, the changes of the moon make no difference to agriculture.

CHAUTAUQUA CRITICISM

Hilltop, Columbus, O.
July 28, 1927

Editor Hilltop Record.

Dear Sir:—Last night I was among that crowd of Hilltop people that filled the tent of the chautauqua for the purpose of listening to the program to have been given by the Jackson Jubilees but very much to my disappointment as on the previous nights the whole program was butchered and the entire connection of thought was lost when one whole hour was taken for the solicitation and pleading by the chautauqua representatives and our business men in an attempt to get guarantors for the program of 1928.

Last year the same thing happened only not in the same amount of time but they promised it would not happen this year or would these perfectly fine programs be spoiled again by this useless waste of time.

I call it a waste of time because it is safe to say that our Hilltop chautauqua lost more supporters last night in that one hour than they have gained in the past two years. It isn't necessary to point out the characteristics of the American people today but it must be remembered that we are a class of people who are boosters as long as left to do our duty but when would-be speakers feel it their duty to repeat over and over the things already known about the subject there is but one thing left to do and that is to dig the grave and bury it. We all know the benefits of chautauqua and feel it absolutely out of order to take our time to spoil the program by home talent speeches.

There are other ways of securing the chautauqua for the Hilltop than by spoiling the programs. All this matter should be taken care of outside the tent and a greater Hilltop chautauqua will be assured and no longer will we hear such remarks as those that were given out last night in the audience. If such would continue the time would come when those in charge of the programs would refuse to sign with the Redpath Bureau because of the annoyance of the interruptions. And who could blame them?

I feel that chautauqua has come to Hilltop to stay when the present system is abolished UNLESS it was killed last night.

A Hilltop Booster.

Wide Brims Frame the Face Often In Quaint Bonnet Effect

Modern woman, at least so far as fashions are concerned, has recovered her femininity. She now wears picturesque frocks with picturesque millinery—which means for the latter, brims which frame the face in a most enchanting manner.

Even the tailored straw and felt hats have yielded to the wide-of-brim idea. Types of straw with felt, such as pictured first in this group, are among leading midsummer millinery numbers. This ultrafashionable model has a complementary way of handling the felt crown with straw, at the same time bordering the straw brim with felt.

It is, among other things, the versatility of the new wide brims which fascinate. Some of them flippity-flop in such a winning way, others assume a cartwheel aspect, while many recent types suddenly narrow at the back, suggesting a bonnet-like silhouette. She who wears this type must "right about face!" else who can tell whether her eyes be blue or brown such a teasing way have these brims of shutting off the view from the side. That this type is the cunningest ever, is a truth attested by the clever model of black straw, centered below in the picture. It is simply banded with ribbon, of course, for the ribbon trim is outstanding at this moment.

The zig-zag fabric applique is a feature worth taking note of as it appears on the hat at the top to the right.

It's a new way of embellishing the chapeau without disturbing its contour. There is a pretty play of color in the interworking of several shades of taffeta for this model.

There is also an effective two-color scheme displayed in the straw-and-fabric hat pictured to the left below. The newest wide brims show straws of many colors sewed together in around-and-around stripe effect.

The last hat is a beige hair body, with beige velvet ribbon. It's the correct thing this summer to trim the straw hat in matching velvet ribbon. Pink roses at the side unite with a fan of velvet by way of a finishing touch.

Mother's Cook Book

Why should we be in such desperate haste to succeed and in such desperate enterprises? If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away. It is not important that he should mature as soon as the apple tree or the oak.—Henry David Thoreau.

SOME SANDWICHES

A group of good sandwiches will always be popular for reference in any home.

May-Time Sandwiches

Work two Neufchatel cheeses with a little thick cream until smooth, add a few drops of green vegetable coloring mixing until the cheese is a vivid pea-green tint; add one cupful of finely chopped blanched almonds, season with salt and cayenne. Spread thin slices of sandwich bread with mayonnaise dressing, sprinkle with finely minced chives and an equal number of slices with the cheese mixture. Put together in pairs, press edges together, trim and cut into three narrow strips, sprinkle the top side of the sandwiches with paprika. Serve with coffee.

Picnic Sandwiches

Clean and remove the intestinal veins from fresh or canned shrimp. Chop fine and take one cupful, packed solidly. Marinate with two tablespoonfuls of French dressing and let stand two hours. Now add one-half cupful each of shredded lettuce, water cress, and one-fourth of a cupful of chopped green onions. Add the sifted yolks of three hard-cooked eggs and the finely chopped whites; moisten with mayonnaise and use as a filling on buttered bread.

Salted Cheese Sandwiches

Cut white bread into thin slices, remove the crusts and cut into rectangular pieces. Spread thinly with mustard butter. Cut mild cheese into one-eighth-inch slices the same size as the bread; sprinkle with salt, paprika and cayenne. Place a slice of cheese between two slices of the bread and fry in a little hot butter until brown on both sides. Serve hot with a green salad.

Sorority Sandwiches

Mix thoroughly one-half cupful of finely minced Canton ginger, one-half cupful of stoned and chopped dates, and one-half cupful of chopped pecan meats. Season with salt and moisten with some of the ginger syrup to the consistency for spreading. Spread on buttered brown bread or saltines. Serve with hot cocoa or chocolate.

Square Deal to All

My Republican Friend:

I am a candidate for Presiding Judge of the Municipal Court, City of Columbus, Ohio, subject to the Republican Primaries, August 9th, 1927. It is impossible for me to see all of the Republican voters; hence, this letter.

I live at 3089 North High Street. My entire life has been lived in Columbus. I was educated in the Public Schools of Columbus and at the Ohio State University. I was admitted to the Bar in 1904, and have practiced law in Columbus ever since. I belong to the Church of Christ on East Seventh Avenue, near High street. I am a member of the Buckeye Republican club, the Athletic club, the York Lodge of Masons, and the Elks.

As to my qualifications as a lawyer, I refer you to any Judge of any of our Courts. As to my qualifications as a man, you are welcome to ask anyone who personally knows me.

I believe it to be a Judge's duty to enforce the law impartially. By that I mean the rich should not be either punished or favored because they are rich, and the poor should neither be punished or favored because they are unable to hire high priced lawyers to present the merits of their case. The circumstances of the case and the defendant should be given consideration in every criminal case. I believe it is the Judge's duty to enforce the law as he finds it, whether he personally approves of the law or not, and that it is the Legislature's and the City Council's function to amend or repeal laws or ordinances, and not the Judge's duty or right.

I ask your consideration, and would appreciate your support at the polls.

Yours Truly,
JOY H. HUNT.

BAKING POWDER BISCUITS GOOD

Should Be Light, Fine-Grained, Tender, Brown.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Tastes in biscuits differ, and it would be remarkable, among a dozen people, to secure an unanimous opinion on the comparative merits of soft or crisp biscuits, drop biscuits or rolled ones, water or milk or sour-milk biscuits. Almost everyone would agree, however, that an acceptable biscuit should be light, fine-grained, tender, and delicately browned. The dough should be worked as little as possible, therefore, so that the gluten will not be developed too much and the product made tough. Using soft-wheat or pastry flour and having the oven very hot are two other points that contribute to good texture.

Here's a recipe furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture:

Biscuits.

One cupful milk, three cupfuls sifted soft-wheat flour, four to six tablespoonfuls fat, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt.

All dry ingredients are mixed and sifted together, the fat is worked in and the liquid is added to this fat-and-flour mixture. Cutting the fat into the flour with knives, a pastry fork or a biscuit cutter is often recommended to avoid warming or handling it too much, but the tips of the fingers may be used if the work is done quickly.

Either milk or water may be used as the liquid in baking powder biscuits, and the quanity varied to obtain the biscuit desired. Sometimes a very stiff dough is wanted, and as little liquid as possible is used. A lighter biscuit is made by using more liquid than for a soft dough.

Bake the biscuits in a shallow pan or on a baking sheet. The pan should be lightly greased for drop biscuits, but this is not necessary for the other type. Biscuits require a very hot oven (450 to 500 degrees F.). If you have an electric table stove, try baking biscuits right in the dining room.

A European steel-and-iron trust has been formed at Brussels. Plants in Belgium, Luxemburg, France, and Germany are included in the trust, and companies in Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia are expected to join later. There will be a limited production of steel, at fixed prices, and the European market will be kept from American and English competition. An economic interest common to all these countries should be a unifying influence in Europe.

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER I.—Thomas Brent, bachelor, and self made man of wealth, is ordered by his physicians to take a long vacation in the open—"Out Doors Nature."

CHAPTER II.—Brent disappears, leaving Philip Scrottles, his manager, power of attorney to conduct the business. He also advertises for a small, red-haired, freckle-faced boy.

CHAPTER III.—With a young companion he has found, appropriately nicknamed "Freck," Brent is living in an out-of-the-way place, in primitive fashion, subsisting mostly on frogs' legs.

CHAPTER IV.—Brent acquires his first knowledge of "crawdads," incidentally, at the cost of great physical discomfort, rescuing two elderly ladies in color from threatened drowning.

CHAPTER V.—Somewhat weary of the "Back to Nature" idea, Brent sets out for the railroad and home. He hears Scrottles and a business rival planning to get possession of his business. He returns to "Freck," with his mind made up to get his health restored and "swat" his enemies hard. "Freck" finds a cave, in which he and Brent take up their abode.

"Still," Brent added as he started toward, "what would life be without a little excitement? Tom, you're an old fool. You're a whopping old fool. But this thing'll be funny when you come to look back on it." He chuckled a little bit at the thought. Blamed if it won't. It'll be about the funniest thing I ever had happen to me.

"Well, they haven't got any dogs after all, have they?" He had reached the woodshed and had opened the door and closed it again in safety. He paused anxiously about in the darkness for a moment. Then with a great sigh of relief, he found a pile of sawdust and lay down. Then he slept—slept in spite of the bumps, in spite of the bumblebee stings—in spite of everthing.

CHAPTER VII
There's the Gamble

The sun was shining when Thomas Brent awoke. With a sense of strangeness in his surroundings, he raised himself and looked about him. For a moment that sense of humor which had grown into his being in the last two weeks came uppermost and he laughed at the thought of what had happened. Then just as suddenly his face grew serious.

"Better wait until you can get out of this thing, Tom Brent, before you do much laughing," he said. "You've got a long way to travel yet and you don't know where you are. You—"

Someone was singing outside. He stopped to listen. He trembled a bit. Someone was singing, someone was approaching the woodshed, and worst of all, it was a woman. Panic-stricken, Thomas Brent scrambled to his feet and dragged himself behind the highest part of the woodpile, leaving only his head exposed.

The door opened and a form entered. For a moment she bent low filling her arms with wood, then as she raised, a blank look came into her face. Her arms opened, the wood clattered to the floor, and she screamed.

Thomas Brent started from behind the woodpile, then drew back again. "Don't run," he begged, "I won't hurt you. Don't run, please. I—why, I'm harmless," he added. "I'm worse than harmless. I can't move."

The woman's face showed amazement; fear had left it. She was not an elderly woman. She was just betwixt and between, as Freck would have said. Perhaps she may have been thirty-five or thirty-six, vigorous, well formed, pretty, a healthy tan on her face and arms, and the wrinkles of appreciation of life and what it means were about her eyes.

Slowly she regarded the head which stuck above the woodpile with much of the mud crown it once bore sticking to it and one or two pokeberries still drooping and awry. For a second or two the expression about her mouth and eyes were changeable, then it resolved into a laugh—a deep, feeling laugh in which even Thomas Brent was forced to join.

"Well," she said, "I don't know who on earth you are, but you're about the funniest-looking creature I ever set eyes on. Why don't you come out from behind there?"

"Can't," answered Thomas Brent with a return to lugubriousness.

"Can't? Why?"

Brent stuttered a moment before answering. "Because you're a woman," he said at last, "and I'm a man, and I haven't got on anything except a stingy little old pair of bathing trunks."

"Bathing trunks?" Another shriek of laughter. "Well, I never. What on earth are you doing here?"

"Goodness knows, madam. It's too long a story for me to go into now. It'd keep you standing here from now until tomorrow noon if I'd try to tell you all about it. Say, has your husband got any clothes in the house that would fit me?"

"He might—if I had a husband," the woman answered. "But I haven't. I'll ask the hired man, though."

The door shut and she was gone. In ten minutes more it opened. A pair of overalls and a shirt were thrown in.

"Best I can do," came in through the door. "I'll be waiting for you outside."

Thomas Brent looked but little more impressive than before when he left the woodshed. The woman was waiting for him. With an appearance of dignity that made him only the more comical in his bare feet and mud-streaked hair, he strode forward and stuck out his hand.

"I want to thank you," he said slowly. "I may not look it, but my name is Thomas Brent and I am the president of the Amalgamated Foundry company in Kansas City. I—"

The woman laughed again. "No, you certainly don't look it," she answered. "For goodness' sake, come into the house. I'll bet you're about starved."

"Worse than that—I'm famished," Brent answered.

She led him to the kitchen, and as she busied herself with the biscuits and country-smoked ham, and as Thomas Brent later busied himself with the very same delicacies, he told his story, leaving out what details he thought were unnecessary. Gradually his words ceased as the biscuits were pushed with greater frequency between his teeth, and he merely gurgled now and then as he attempted to end up his story. The woman, weak from laughing, sat on the opposite side of the table and gazed at him, her hands on her hips.

"I don't know whether to call you the funniest man I ever saw in my life, the craziest man I ever saw in my life, or the most sensible man I ever saw in my life," she said at last. "Do you think it has done you good out here in the woods?"

"I wouldn't admit it to any one else but you," Thomas Brent said from behind a bulwark of biscuits, "but it's done me more good than twenty thousand sanitariums, a flock of nurses, and a whole regiment of doctors. You ought to see this kid I've got. He's the wisest little head I ever ran up against. I'm going to grow him up to be general manager of my business."

"What's his name?" asked the hostess.

"Goodness, I don't know," Brent answered. "I call him Freck. Say, these biscuits are good. Wonder why they don't cook 'em like this in hotels."

"Hotels?" asked the woman. "Do you live in a hotel?"

"Haven't lived in anything else since I can remember," Brent answered. "What kind of ham is this?"

"Country cured."

"Good. Isn't it? Mind if I take another slice? Funny thing how the country gives a man an appetite. I never felt this way in the city. I don't suppose you know much about the city, do you?"

"Don't I?" The woman laughed. "I've had both sides of it. I came out here to get away from it and I think I'm going to stay."

"Well, maybe you're right. Still, the city's a pretty good old place. I made up my mind I'm going to stick out here sixty days, and then I'm going back."

"You're a fool if you do," the woman said.

"Well, what am I going to do about my business?"

"How much of a business have you got? What's it worth?"

"Well, it's worth half a million. The Amalgamated Foundry company, you know," Brent said proudly.

"Half a million. And you'll probably go back and try to build it up to a million. Then when you've built it up to a million, you'll be about sixty years old and they'll be putting you into a coffin and saying nice things about you, before they cover you up with dirt. Then what will you do with your million?"

Mr. Brent slammed the table with one hand as he lifted a biscuit with the other. "By George," he said, "I'd never thought of that! Mind if I have another biscuit? Say, by the way, I never asked you your name?"

"Mrs. Williams," was the answer.

"Oh!" There was a tone of disappointment in Mr. Brent's voice. "I—I—thought you didn't have any husband."

"I haven't," Mrs. Williams answered. "He has been dead eight years."

"Oh," said Mr. Brent again. "Oh." And then by way of changing the subject, he added: "Mind if I take just one more biscuit?"

Following that one, which was the last, he rose heavily and watched Mrs. Williams pile the dishes into the pan. Once or twice he clumsily helped her, then stood bashfully by looking with something of amazement upon the masterly way in which this woman handled things. To tell the truth, Mrs. Williams was the first real woman Thomas Brent had ever come in close contact with. She was the only woman he had ever seen engaged in the mysteries of a culinary department, and to him in this stage of life the picture was amazing.

"I'd like to do something to help you," he said awkwardly, "but I don't know anything about this sort of business."

"Well, it's time a man like you was learning," Mrs. Williams answered with a laugh. "You've missed the best part of your life if you're never washed dishes. Now here, you take the towel in your hand like this, see? Then you take up the dish with it and then you get your hand under the other end of the towel like this, see?"

"Uh-huh," said Thomas Brent, raising his hands awkwardly and then dropping them again. "Then what do you do?"

"Why, you just wipe the dish."

"Suppose I drop it and burst it?" he asked.

"Well, there's the gamble," said Mrs. Williams. "There's a gamble in pretty nearly everything, even dish washing."

Thomas Brent gazed admiringly across the dishes and dish water. "You're a wonder." He beamed. "I never thought I—"

A door opened, there was the sound of running steps, and a boyish voice called:

"Aunt Margie, has Mr. Edwards come yet? He said he—"

Freck paused in the door.

"Why hello, Mr. Brent," he said in amazement. "How long you been here?"

The cup which Mr. Brent was wiping juggled for a second and was in imminent danger of falling as he turned to gaze in amazement at Freck in the doorway.

"Well—well, where did you come from?" he asked.

"Came from the cave," Freck replied with a grin.

"What're you doing here?"

"Good lands!" The voice of Mrs. Williams had broken in. "You don't mean to tell me that this is the wonderful boy you have been talking about. Goodness gracious me! I didn't know Jimmie Phillips was good for anything except to catch crawdads and get into mischief."

"Good for anything? Mr. Brent said heatedly. "Why, that boy's got more sense in a minute than most men have in years. He's got more business judgment, he's got more tact, he's got more diplomacy about him than half the ambassadors at Washington. Why, Mrs. Williams," he concluded, leaning far back and gazing admiringly at the boy, "you don't know what an honor it is to have Freck in your family?" He turned quickly. "I heard him say something about an aunt of his that lived over this way, but I never connected you two until just now."

"Yes; he's in the family." Mrs. Williams laughed. "Sometimes I'm glad of it, and sometimes I'm sorry. That boy can be the greatest blessing or the worst trial of anybody I ever saw in my life. Freck, how's your ma?"

"I don't know. I haven't seen her for three or four days. Soon as Mr. Brent'll let me I'm going to take her to town and buy her a rug. She'll be tickled." He turned shortly. "Here comes Mr. Edwards," he said.

A tall young man had opened the gate and was coming slowly down the walk toward the house. As he looked at him Mr. Brent's forehead gathered into puckers and he strained his eyes. "I've seen that young man before somewhere," he said to himself. "Now where was it—where was it?"

Edwards reached the door. "How do you do, Mr. Brent," he said coldly.

"How do you do," answered Mr. Brent. "I believe you've got the best of me. Your face is familiar, but I don't remember just where I've seen you before."

"I guess not." There was a sort of an ugly coolness in Edwards' voice. "I worked for you only four years."

"Huh! That so? Funny I didn't remember you," Mr. Brent said as he put forth his hand. "What department did you work in?"

"I was head of the checking department. I should say, Mr. Brent, that it would be a little queer that a man could work for you for four years and you not know him."

"There's something to that," Mr. Brent answered with a little laugh. "To tell the truth, when I was in town I buried myself so much with the contract end of the business that I was forced to allow my employees to to be taken care of by Scrottles. I've been wondering the last week or so whether I did the right thing."

"I hardly think you did," Edwards replied. There had not been a smile on his face since he entered the house. Freck and Mrs. Williams were staring at him.

Freck stepped forward. "Mr. Brent is the man that wanted to see you," he said. "He wants you to help him out with something."

Edwards laughed a little harshly. "I don't believe I care to help Mr. Brent out with anything."

"Jim Edwards, what is the matter with you?" Mrs. Williams had stepped forward. Mr. Brent said nothing. The

THE EASY ROAD

There never was a road I came
I couldn't turn around;
You cannot get so deep in shame
But that the solid ground
Lies right behind. The way is straight
The latest hour is not too late.

And may not sin's the easy way,
And righteousness the hard.
I've had my fun, I've had my play,
And I've discovered, pard,
That slipping down the thing grows flat
But climbing up is not like that.

Each hour you get a finer view,
The higher that you climb,
Each day you find some gladness new—
You have a better time
Than they who walk the road below
They say it's easier to go.

Up here you find the fresher air,
You find the fairer flow'rs;
They walk among life's ooses there,
Up here the hills are ours;
The sun is bright, the skies are blue—
Up here's the easy road for you!

The Boston Transcript has published its annual survey of eighty-six typical colleges and universities. Enrollments per capita of population are steadily increasing. Thirteen out of every ten thousand persons go to college in France; fifteen out of every ten thousand, in Great Britain; and sixty out of every ten thousand, in the United States. The total enrollment of the eighty-six specimen colleges was 253,630 full-time students in 1925, and 265,564 in 1926. The fact that about four per cent of all United States colleges enroll about forty per cent of the students shows that higher education tends to become centralized.

The Sandman Story

THE CHILDREN

"Cackle, cackle," said young Miss Hen, "I feel sorry for children when they become a certain age."

"Why so?" inquired Red Top, the rooster, "pray tell me why so, young Miss Hen. Cock-a-doodle-do, it would be interesting to know why you felt sorry for children."

"When they become a certain age," said young Miss Hen.

"Well, then, when they become a certain age," Red Top repeated. "I'd like to know why you feel sorry for them at such a time or why you have felt sorry for them, or why you will feel sorry for them—if you are going to keep on feeling sorry for them.

"And then, too, I'd be interested in hearing what age children must reach in order to have you feel sorry for them.

"Do you suppose they are thankful and pleased that you feel sorry for them at that age? Are they in need of sympathy then?"

"Well," said young Miss Hen, "I will answer all your questions. First of all I feel sorry for children when they reach a certain age because I understand them. In other words I have a fellow feeling for them."

"I Will Answer All Your Questions," Said Young Miss Hen.

"I don't see," said Red Top, "how a young hen han have a fellow feeling for a lot of children."

"I mean," said young Miss Hen, "that I understand how they feel because I, too, have had the same feelings.

"Little children are always so much admired. They are thought so cunning and if they're naughty they seem to be very quickly forgiven and they're smiled at almost at all times. They're hugged and loved and made great pets of and everyone thinks they're so sweet and pretty and dear and lovable.

"Then they become a little older. If they're bad they're scolded good and hard. They're not thought nearly so cunning, and they're not thought nearly so sweet, nor so lovable, nor so dear, nor are they smiled at almost at all times.

"Sometimes it is said they have reached the awkward age. I do not know what age it is or just when it comes but it is the age between being a little child and a big boy or girl.

"It comes at different times, or at different ages, not always at the same time with everyone. I do not know whether children are thankful and pleased that I have so much sympathy for them at such times or not, but I have at any rate. And the reason for it is this. Yes, this is the reason why I so thoroughly understand, and I know how they feel when they're not admired as they have been and I know how it makes them feel only more awkward. You see when I was a little chick I was a dear, plump, fuzzy, cunning little thing.

"I had soft yellow down and I was really quite sweet. I realize it now that it has gone from me. Then I became older. I couldn't help it. It was not my fault. And I grew. My shape was awkward and I moved awkwardly. If I bumped into anything or run in a silly way I was called silly, but if I had done the same thing as a little chick I would have been thought a poor, dear, frightened little chicken.

"And as I became older I became more and more awkward and more and more I realized that people thought of me as being a pretty unattractive hen.

"Then I heard some people talking about some children who had grown from babyhood into boyhood and girlhood. They said those children had been so cunning when they had been little but that now they were at the awkward age.

"And I've got so much of it since—unappreciated children because they're not little and cunning, and it's the same way with hens! The very same way. Ah, it is a great shame!

"Hens are awkward, too, before they become older, settled hens. They understand how children feel. Ah yes, young hens are sympathetic. They know what it is like to lose their dear little chick ways and looks and to be thought so much less attractive and not loved in the same indulgent, affectionate way."

"Now I understand," said Red Top, "and I dont' wonder you have a 'fellow feeling,' as you call it, for children."

Australia Needs Teachers

Australia has a shortage of teachers, and many schools have been forced to close. In Victoria more than 300 are needed, and 30 county schools are having enforced vacations. To cope with the situation the department of education is employing 100 married women, mostly former instructors. The teachers' union explains that low salaries, many receiving less than $15 a week, and unreasonable restrictions, have caused many teachers to resign. Officials are considering salary increases.

Hercules Man of Strength

Whenever the Greek gods of Mount Olympus were confronted with a hard task, they sent for Hercules, whose mighty strength could be depended upon to accomplish anything.

Hercules would find little to do in modern times, when machinery accomplishes our herculean tasks. The demand of modern times is not for strength, but for energy with which to keep up the swift pace of our day. Corn is an excellent energy food.

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK—PERPETUAL CARE

THE SOFTENING INFLUENCE

The crudity that has surrounded burials in the past in most cases proved painful and trying, has been removed in MEMORIAL PARK. The old-fashioned custom allowing unsightly mounds of earth to lie in plain view of the grave and the practice of permitting workmen to set about their work before mourners have left, has been discarded for a better plan.

Every effort has been made to soften the ordeal. A tent shields the mourners; the walls of the grave are hidden by rich, heavy draperies; a noiseless lowering device is always used; carpets are laid from the roadway to the grave and on the lot around it. Every particle of earth taken from the grave is removed from sight; workmen do not appear until mourners have left and the entire service is under shelter.

Bowling Shoes

The shoe that we have on display in our window has been marked one of the best by Chicago bowlers. We have made a special effort to find the right one. This shoe has met the approval of several bowlers on the Hilltop and has been recommended by A. K. Selbach. Therefore following there advice, have decided to carry in stock a run of sizes at all times during bowling season.

Of course everyone has their own idea about footwear. We get this shoe from a manufacturer that has been making bowling shoes for over fifteen years, and they also state this shoe has met the approval of bowlers all over the United States.

In the past two years there has been a wide request for a shoe, where the right sole has a white rubber sole and heel and the left shoe with a buck padded sole. This is exactly the one we have and have made arrangements with the manufacturer to supply us with this make shoe.

The new Bowling Alleys open Monday. We invite you to come in and try a pair of these shoes on, see how they feel, the real fitting qualities of a sport shoe. They are light weight, flexible, and designed especially for this popular indoor game.

TWO PORTABLES FOR HIGHLAND

At the meeting of the board of education on Monday it was decided best to move two portable school buildings on the Glenwood Methodist church lot, next to Highland Junior High school. The church has given permission for use of the lot for two years without extra cost provided Sunday school classes may be held in the buildings.

This will help relieve the crowded situation on the Hilltop for a short time.

Miss Goldie Stewart and a staff from White Cross hospital are directing the health making activities at the camp this season.

The "Gloom Buster," will be under the general chairmanship of E. King Povenmire of the Oakwood Methodist Epworth league.

MINIATURE GOLF COURSE

Nine Hole Game Is Played With Ball and Bat; Grounds Very Active.

Holton Park playground located in the ravine between North Eureka and Eldon avenues has one of the latest novelty stunts in playground pastimes to be found in the city. It is a nine hole golf course on which the young folks play the regulation game of golf with ball bat and recreation ball. The teeing, driving, putting and all are similar to the regular game of golf with the exception of the clubs and balls used.

A great amount of enthusiasm has been shown. The lowest score for the nine holes was made by Charles Blumm of 221 N. Burgess Ave. His score was 32. In an elimination match Howard Davis, 234 N. Ogden Ave., took first place and his brother Walter, was runner-up. These two boys will meet the winner and runner-up from Kent and Gault playground either Wednesday or Friday of this week.

The girls held a similar tournament and Irene Stewart of Richardson avenue was winner. Other girls' activities center around the sewing and crepe paper work.

The directors for the girls are Miss Sarah Kluney, 929 Franklin Ave., and Mrs. Margaret Dunnigcomes, 1766 Oak St.

W. A. Moler, 342 S. Ohio Ave., is in charge of the boys' activities. He is a senior at Ohio State university next year and a member of the football team there. He says the playground is no longer a rendezvous for the rougher classes and that a more pleasant gathering of children cannot be found.

Last Wednesday a goldfish chase was conducted at the park. Two goldfish were placed in the pool and an exciting time followed when the youngsters were turned loose to catch them. The tennis and volley ball courts are busy nearly all the time the directors state.

Mr. Moler says he has a thirteen-year-old recreation ball team that will challenge any team of the same age in the city.

Miss Mary Wade, 123 Highland Ave., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bishop Wade of Logan, and Dr. William D. Massie of Burgess avenue, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Massie of Baton Rouge, La., were united in marriage Monday morning, July 25, at 11 o'clock by the Rev. George F. Barber at his home, 74 Highland Ave. Miss Betty Cannon and Mrs. E. IF?

You had a message for everyone on the Hilltop and attempted to call by telephone it would be impossible and to mail your message would require a great amount of time and would cost more than you would suppose. The only simple way that does away with a high cost is through the columns of the Hilltop Record. If it's news you have we will be glad to have it.

NEW COLLEGE AT CENTRAL Y

Evening Junior College Will Open September 6—Large Enrollment Expected.

Enrolments from the Hilltop is expected to make this community one of the best represented in the new evening junior college which Charles M Roudebusn, director of the Columbus Y. M. C. A. schools, has announced will start classes Sept. 6th. This new college, which will be the first junior college in central Ohio, will be the sixth school to be established at the Y. M. C. A. Others include law, commerce, preparatory, day school for boys and trades-engineering.

In the commerce and preparatory schools, the only departments giving regular evening classes this summer, as well as in the day auto mechanics classes of the trades-engineering school six Hilltop men and women are now enrolled.

A faculty selected from outstanding professors from colleges and universities of central Ohio is being selected for this new junior college. Charles E. Stuiley, of Teachers College, Columbia, is announced by M. Roudebush, as dean of this college. He has been principal of the preparatory school and headmaster of the day school for boys.

Demand which has been voiced for several years for the sort of advanced work that could be obtained in a junior college, has been particularly heavy this past year, the registrar at the Y. M. C. A. schools reports. While the original demand was from students in the preparatory school, there has been added the requests of students who wish to secure their two years liberal arts pre-professional training of evenings and from others who can not secure collegiate education unless it is offered in evening school. Still another class asking for junior college work has included men and women who expect sometime to finish a regular four-year course, but who can best take their first two years work of evenings.

"As there are no evening college courses offered anywhere in central Ohio, the Y. M. C. A. schools are establishing this new evening junior college to "fill the gap." We have all the necessary equipment, administrative personnel and facilities to care for students in such a college as well as for the more than 1300 who were students in the five other schools last year," Mr. Roudebush observes.

"Particularly since the new law requiring that candidates for the Ohio bar have two year liberal arts training as well as that they be graduates of an accredited law school, the continuance of our law school required the establishing of a junior college. Students of all other professions must meet practically the same requirements.

"For persons who are married and have dependents the evening junior college offers the only possible means of securing collegiate training. Enrollment statistics at the Y. M. C. A. schools for the past year show that more than 60 per cent of students are married. In several instances husbands and wives are taking work together."

Planned to meet the liberal arts college standard hour for hour, the curriculum of this new evening junior college will extend over three years with classwork nine semester hours per week during two semesters of 20 weeks each year. This will give the exact equivalent of two years daytime enrollment. Classes will be held Monday, Wednesday and Friday from September until June.

Freedom to concentrate on the particular subject most vital to a student is given in this junior college curriculum by elective and alternative courses. The main schedule is rather uniform, however, as is the case in first two years of all college work. Requirements for all students include three to six hours of English and 15 to 30 hours of language other than English. Both these requirements and the alternative subjects depend upon subjects included in student's high school credits.

Five out of these six are to be selected: organic science, six hours of botany or zoology, inorganic science, six hours of physics, chemistry or geology, mathematics, six hours of college algebra or trigonometry and philosophy, and social sciences, six hours of sociology, political science or economics.

"Trade Your Smiles."

According to Prof. F. R. Moulton, in The Dearborn Independent, the distance from the earth to the moon has been determined with as great precision as the distance from Chicago to Detroit. Astronomers "have determined the period of the moon's revolution around the earth to within one one-thousandth of one second of time. They have measured the diameter of the moon with an error not exceeding one mile. Its motions are known so accurately that a telescope could be set today so that our successors a thousand years from now, looking through it, in a given year, month, day, hour, minute, and second, could see any part of the moon which we might decide upon at the present time.

Memorial Burial Park to Be One of the Beauty Spots About Columbus

A very profitable and interesting afternoon or evening drive from this section of the city is to the new Memorial Burial Park out West Broad street on the national highway. A ten minute drive from the edge of the city brings you to the newest cemetery and one of the most beautiful of Central Ohio.

This tract of land was bought about four years ago and development was not started until over a year later. It has only been used by the general public the past two years.

At present there are 108 acres in the hands of the developers but there is a total of 900 acres of land that can be used and incorporated in the cemetery when the time comes that it may be necessary and it is the only burial park close to Columbus that has this necessary room for expansion.

In beauty the new cemetery will be very hard to match when another year has passed and given time for the new developments to become completely covered with grass. At present it is exceptionaly well taken care of for the short time hat it has been opened. Smooth lawns, trimmed shrubbery, growing trees, wide white rock drive ways, and a clover leaf shaped lake near the main Highway add to its beauty.

One of the outstanding features of the grounds is the three special sections that have been developed for Masons and their families only. On one of these sections there will be erected, at an early date, a shaft which will stand thirty feet above the level of that section and will be dedicated to the Masonic fraternity. There will be no other monuments on this section as this one monument will answer for all lot owners on that section thereby making it a real park section; however, there will be markers allowed for each grave on the section. On the other two and one-third section monuments as well as markers will be allowed on each lot.

At Memorial Burial Park the grounds are developed on the park and lawn plan. By that is meant that there is allowed only one monument to the lot that will stand above the level of the ground and all graves are then allowed to be marked with a granite marker 1 ft. by 2 ft. surface measurements and set level with the ground and in that way eliminating the stone yard effect that so many graveyards have after they have been in operation for a number of years. The graves too are all level thereby making each section a little park auto itself.

The development company practically completed the development of 12 sections of which one section has been reserved for the purpose of erecting a large Unit-Community Mausoleum and Chapel to be named the Tower of Memories.

The director of the grounds explained the perpetual care system employed by this company and it is a service not generally offered in this way. Under their plan twelve and one-half per cent of the purchase price of each lot is deposited in the perpetual care fund and only the interest from this fund may ever be used for the upkeep of the park, the principle being kept always intact and invested only in government bonds and first mortgage real estate.

The public is invited to drive through the park and also to ask for the director who will be glad to show you over the grounds and explain the different features in detail.

EXPERIENCE TEST OF QUALIFICATION

Experience is the test of qualification for a position such as the presiding judgeship of the Columbus municipal court, in the opinion of Phil S. Bradford, former United States commissioner and prominent Columbus attorney. Mr. Bradford is campaign manager for Judge Fred J. Miller, candidate for the Republican nomination to succeed himself as the chief of the local municipal bench.

"And if experience is the principal factor in choosing the proper man for the post, Judge Miller, possesses every qualification," Mr. Bradford said.

He pointed out that Judge Miller has served five years as a judge of the local municipal court. In November, 1922, he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Municipal Judge Frank E. Ruth. In 1925, after serving three years as associate justice, he was elected to fill the unexpired term of Presiding Judge John F. Seidel, which position he is now occupying.

Judge Miller is a graduate of Ohio State university, of the class of 1917. He received his B. A and L. L. B. degrees at the local university, and prior to his appointment as associate justice he practiced law with his brother, Willard Miller, in the firm of Miller, Miller and Snider, 903 Yuster Building. His brother Willard Miller is also president of the Willard Realty company. Another brother, Dr. W. H. Miller, X-ray specialist has offices at 328 East State street, and his father Frank Miller operates drug stores at Tenth and High streets and High street and Eleventh avenue.

Judge Miller received his primary education in the common schools of Columbus. He was born on a farm, but is a graduate of North High school. After his graduation from Ohio State he enlisted in the United States army in 1917 and served until the end of the war, being discharged in January 1919. He is the only ex-service man on the Columbus municipal bench.

Judge Miller is a member of York Lodge, F. & A. M., the Shrine, Columbus Lodge of Elks, the American Legion, 40 and 8, Junia Lodge of Odd Fellows, the Eagles, Loyal Order of Moose, Columbus Athletic club, Woodmen of the World, League of Ohio Sportsmen, and the Columbus Chamber of Commerce. He also enjoys the unique distinction of being national president of the Daddy Long Legs club, founded in Columbus. He is a member of the board of trustees of the University club, the Buckeye Republican club and Knights of Malta.

When he is not on the bench he seeks recreation on the golf course, being an ardent golf fan and a member of the golf club of the Elks Country club.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

THE MEASURING WORM

If you are sitting on the piazza of a farmhouse and see one of those little creatures known as the measuring worm looping its way over your clothing, brush it off right away. If you don't you are likely to die before your time—as any country-bred person can tell you. They will probably laugh at the superstition as they recount it, but, nevertheless, watch how quickly they brush off a measuring worm if one gets on them.

This old superstition arises from that association of ideas with things, so common with our prehistoric ancestors and so natural to the human mind in all ages—not by any means excepting this age.

The little larva of the geometric moth has feet only at bow and stern, so when he moves he draws up his hind feet, places them close to his front feet and then sends his front feet on ahead for a fresh foothold; apparently measuring off the person upon whom he crawls in slow and solemn manner.

Why is he making this peculiar motion, so different from the method of locomotion with other worms? The submerged, primitive mind arises from the "unconscious" and answers, "He is measuring out the life of man"; "He is measuring for a shroud." It is useless to argue that he may be measuring you for a new suit of clothes; for the primitive mind's natural tendency is to look on the dark side of things and regard the unusual as the threatening. The writer has heard children cry with awe: "Brush off that measuring worm! If you don't, when he takes his last measure you die."

Don't Suffer from Paving Hindsight

YOU'D say it was mighty poor business if a friend of yours was still paying installments on an automobile or a suit of clothes or a piece of furniture that had already worn out and was on the scrap heap.

Don't let your community do the same thing on its pavements. Be sure it buys pavements which will outlast the bonds that pay for them.

Official public records prove that that means vitrified Brick.

Petal Flounces and Flowing Sleeves Beautify Sheer Frocks

In the fluttery, flowery chiffon dresses which glorify this summer's mode and which are so flattering to the modern woman, Dame Fashion fulfills her promise of recapturing the for-a-time lost art of an alluringly feminine styling. It would seem as if these lovely frocks had filled the cup of beauty to the brim and overflowing—yet their program of enchantment continues.

One of the fascinations lately thrown upon the screen of fashion is the dainty gown of diaphanous print which has a skirt adorned with tiers of hemstitched petals, and sleeves flowing open from the elbow with untold grace, just as you see in this picture.

It is astonishing how many tiers, drapes, jabots, floating panels, flounces and the like can be lavished on one chiffon frock without overdoing the matter. However, such is the scheme of design for these sheer frocks now so popular, they must achieve a soft elusive silhouette through intriguing manipulation of the fabric, independent of any applied trimming.

Another item of interest in regard to the adorable gown as illustrated is that it is made of white chiffon trimmed with the flowers rather than being entirely of the print. A word should be said concerning the large rose patternings, such as this model reveals. These single immense florals either on dark or light grounds are the top o' the mode for dressy wear. To be sure, the prevailing style trend is toward tiny figures, but the enormous rose motif is one of the many exceptions to the rule.

It is also part of the "elegance in dress movement" that the sheer summer frock be accompanied with a picture chapeau, especially favoring transparent capelines in entrancing pastel colorings tuned to the frock. The last word in midsummer millinery is the exquisitely colorful flat feather skull cap.

Dainty footwear, too, harmonized to the general color scheme is an essential to the ensemble. Satin slippers in colors are in excellent style for formal wear.

Square Deal to All

My Republican Friend:

I am a candidate for Presiding Judge of the Municipal Court, City of Columbus, Ohio, subject to the Republican Primaries, August 9th, 1927. It is impossible for me to see all of the Republican voters; hence, this letter.

I live at 3099 North High Street. My entire life has been lived in Columbus. I was educated in the Public Schools of Columbus and at the Ohio State University. I was admitted to the Bar in 1904, and have practiced law in Columbus ever since. I belong to the Church of Christ on East Seventh Avenue, near High street. I am a member of the Buckeye Republican club, the Athletic club, the York Lodge of Masons, and the Elks.

As to my qualifications as a lawyer, I refer you to any Judge of any of our Courts. As to my qualifications as a man, you are welcome to ask anyone who personally knows me.

I believe it to be a Judge's duty to enforce the law impartially. By that I mean the rich should not be either punished or favored because they are rich, and the poor should neither be punished or favored because they are unable to hire high priced lawyers to present the merits of their case. The circumstances of the case and the defendant should be given consideration in every criminal case. I believe it is the Judge's duty to enforce the law as he finds it, whether he personally approve of the law or not, and that it is the Legislature's and the City Council's function to amend or repeal laws or ordinances, and not the Judge's duty or right.

I ask your consideration, and would appreciate your support at the polls.

Yours Truly,
JOY H. HUNT.

STEAM PRESSURE BEST FOR BEANS

Must Be Processed at Temperature Over 212 F.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

String beans may be canned successfully at home if you use a steam-pressure canner. Like nonacid vegetables, string beans must be processed at a temperature higher than 212 degrees F., and this is only obtainable under steam pressure. Either glass or tin containers may be used. String beans should always be packed boiling hot. The advantages of what is now known as the "hot pack" are that the material at the center of the can is quickly raised to the temperature required for processing, the "exhaust" step is done away with, and a better product in flavor and texture, is obtainable.

The United States Department of Agriculture gives these directions for canning string beans:

Pick the beans over carefully, string, wash thoroughly, and cut into pieces of the size desired for serving. Add enough boiling water to cover and boil for five minutes in an uncovered vessel. Pack in containers boiling hot, cover with the water in which they were boiled, and add 1 teaspoonful of salt to each quart. Process immediately at 10 pounds pressure, or 240 degrees F.—quart glass jars for 40 minutes, pint glass jars for 35 minutes, and No. 2 and No. 3 tin cans for 30 minutes. Remove the jars from the canner, and invert glass jars, placing them out of drafts. Plunge tin cans in cold water to cool quickly.

String Beans Must Be Processed Under Steam Pressure Whether Canned in Glass or Tin.

Mark all jars and cans for later identification. Keep them at room temperature for at least a week.

Canaries Don't Like Jazz

Those who breed and train canaries for the market say that the feathered songsters will be wrecked for life if they were brought up in a jazz environment. The blare of the saxaphones with their syncopated music not only spoils their voices, but their tempers. Good music on the piano or violin will help and inspire them, but the jazzy stuff is just about fatal to their vocal prospects. If the hot-baby ration does that to the lowly and innocent canary what will it do to the musical nature of a youthful human student?

A DAY WITH SAUCES

If you'd make life worth livin'
Try these big things worth while;
They're three, I'll sum 'em up for ya—
Just love an' work an' smile.

A sauce as an accompaniment to a dish is as essential as the ordinary seasoning is indispensable to make a dish appetising. A very ordinary dish with an appropriate sauce has made many a chef famous and gone down in history as a worth while achievement.

Certain foods are best with certain sauces. The flavor of the sauce enhances the flavor of the dish. A lamb roast with mint sauce is taken out of the ordinary class. Pork roast needs apple sauce to make the pork more tasty and digestible. We like turkey and cranberry, mutton with capers veal with tomato or onion, and so on ad infinitum.

Venison, a choice dish at all times, is greatly improved with a spiced grape jelley; duck with sliced oranges or a tart jelly.

Fish of any kind is always better served with a sauce, usually of some acid variety. Oyster sauce is a great favorite with fish. Bechamel and brown sauces are also good sauces as sauce tartare and tartar sauce.

Wildfowl is especially good with—

Ripe Olive Sauce

Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, add one sliced onion and cook until slightly brown. Add five and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Stir to a smooth paste. Add two cupfuls of brown stock gradually and continue cooking, stirring constantly. Cut the meat from a dozen ripe olives, cover with boiling water and cook seven minutes, then add to the sauce.

Green Pepper Butter

Cut a slice from the stem ends of three or four green peppers, remove the seeds and all the white portion. Cook in boiling water until soft. Drain and chop fine, rub through a sieve; there should be two tablespoonfuls of the pulp. Cream one-half cupful of butter and add the pulp, stirring until evenly mixed. Spread over planked fish, steaks or chops—it will enhance the flavor.

Lemon Butter

Cream one-half cupful of butter, add lemon juice—about two tablespoonfuls, drop by drop—stirring constantly. This is fine for any fish mixture, lobster or crab meat. This is a delicious sauce spread over a broiled fish, planked fish or cooked hot lobster.

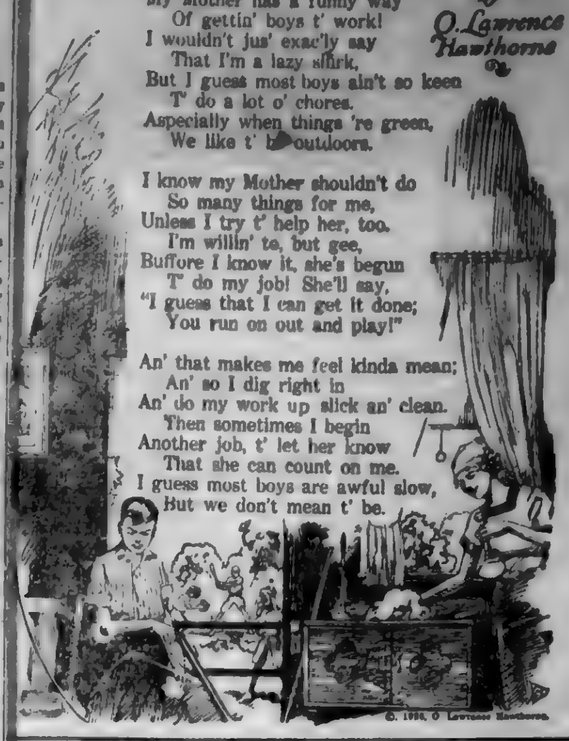
Compass and North Star

The point of the compass needle points to the north magnetic pole which is many hundred miles from the geographical pole. It points north because of magnetic attraction. The north or pole star merely happens to be in the same general direction. It has no direct influence upon the compass.



Helpin' Mother

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

My Mother has a funny way
Of gettin' boys t' work!
I wouldn't jus' exac'ly say
That I'm a lazy shirk,
But I guess most boys ain't so keen
T' do a lot o' chores.
Aspecially when things 're green,
We like t' be outdoors.

I know my Mother shouldn't do
So many things for me,
Unless I try t' help her, too.
I'm willin' te, but gee,
Buffore I know it, she's begun
T' do my job! She'll say,
"I guess that I can get it done;
You run on out and play!"

An' that makes me feel kinda mean;
An' so I dig right in
An' do my work up slick an' clean.
Then sometimes I begin
Another job, t' let her know
That she can count on me.
I guess most boys are awful slow,
But we don't mean t' be.

Stuffed Vegetables Are Substantial

Stuffed Eggplant Is One of Nicest of Stuffed Vegetables.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One way of introducing variety in preparing vegetables is to stuff those that lend themselves in form to this treatment. Stuffing makes the entire dish more substantial and thus sometimes reduces the number of other foods required for a given meal. Eggplant, green peppers, large Spanish onions and cabbage are among those often served in this way. Usually the stuffing is made of other vegetables and some cooked starchy material such as bread crumbs, rice or spaghetti, to give body. A great many combinations are possible in stuffings. One would naturally choose two or three flavors that blend well together however they are cooked and served, just as one combines flavors carefully for a vegetable soup, a stew or a vegetable hash. Some good flavors to use in stuffings, two or three at once, are: Tomato, corn, celery, cabbage, spinach, string beans and carrots. Onion flavor is desirable in almost every combination. Minced meat or chicken is often included, and then the resulting mixture may be sufficiently hearty for an entire lunch or supper.

Combine Various Leftovers.

If you have not quite enough of a given vegetable when it is cooked in the usual way, and if it is suitable for stuffing, you may be able to extend it very nicely by this means. Again, when you have small amounts of two or three cooked vegetables on hand, but not enough of any one to serve for a dinner vegetable, you can combine the various leftovers with bread or rice, add onion flavor and use the mixture as stuffing. Bread crumbs should always be combined with melted butter to make them rich before they are added to other ingredients.

Stuffed Eggplant Recipe

The following recipe for stuffed eggplant is furnished by the bureau of home economics:

One large eggplant, one teaspoonful salt, four tablespoonfuls chopped peanuts, one cupful fine bread crumbs, two cupfuls finely cut raw cabbage, or cooked string beans, two tablespoonfuls butter.

Cut the eggplant in half. Remove as much of the white portion as possible without breaking the shell. Cut in small pieces. Cook the cabbage and the eggplant in a small amount of water about ten minutes. Drain and mix other ingredients with it. Fill the eggplant with the stuffing, place buttered crumbs on top. Pour around each half eggplant a little of the water in which the cabbage and eggplant were cooked. Bake in the oven half an hour, or until golden brown.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

"Has he ever eaten them?"

"Crickey! That's right. He never has. I'll just fix them for him."

Ten minutes later, as Freck prepared to dish up his repast, the door opened and Edwards and Thomas Brent came forth arm in arm. Edwards was tucking some papers in his pockets. Brent stopped and regarded Freck.

"Look here, boy," he asked with a light of joking in his eyes, "is this brother-in-law of yours big enough to handle a half-million-dollar deal?"

"That'd be pie for him," Freck said.

"He certainly has got faith in you," Brent said to Edwards. "Now, you've got that all straight in your head, have you? Go right ahead with it. Don't tell anybody how you happened to get those papers from me. If Scrottles comes back to town, don't let him know what you are doing until you get everything drawn up, and when that is fixed let me know.

"Mrs. Williams," he said, turning to her, "if anyone had told me three weeks ago that I would turn over the handling of my business to a comparative stranger rather than see to it myself, I'd have called for a sanity commission. I sometimes wonder what is getting into me. That's the truth."

"I know what's getting into you," the woman said. "You're learning some sense and finding out there's something else in this world besides money, and the longer you stay out here," she added, "the more you'll find that out."

"Say!" It was the imperative voice of Freck. "If you people don't stop talking these crawdads'll all be cold, and I want Mr. Brent to have them while they're good and hot."

"Crawdads!" Mr. Brent scratched his head with a little chuckle. "I believe that's what got me really started on this thing. If it hadn't been for crawdads and a storm and a few other things like that, I'd— Well, we'd have to go into history to talk it over. Let's eat instead."

Thomas Brent drew up his chair and picked up a glowing crawfish. "How on earth do you get on the inside of these things?" he asked.

CHAPTER VIII
Magnate of Crawdads

It was three days after his conference with young Mr. Edwards that Thomas Brent lay in a shady spot beside Indian creek contemplating a large soiled package and a number of small sticks with strings attached. Freck was in Dodson; he was making daily trips there now on a flea-bitten mare which Mr. Brent had bought from Aunt Margia, and waiting at the telegraph office for any message that might come for Mr. Thomas Brent. He did not return to the cave until evening and Mr. Brent had the whole day to himself.

"It's time I was getting Freck started in some business," he mused; "something where he can live out in the country. I don't believe you could change that boy to a city job." Suddenly he slapped his thigh heartily and pawed for the package of meat. He undid the wrapper, displaying a large beef liver, and then began cutting it in small hunks and tying one to every bit of string. Then, sticking the poles in the bank of the stream about a foot apart, he sank the liver and began to await developments.

Far into the afternoon his activities continued, and then, staggering up the hill to the cave, he carried a gunny sack full to the very brim with live crawfish.

"I don't see why I couldn't develop a money-making proposition for him," he mused as he went back to the stream again. "That boy ought to be a magnate in less than a year."

Whereupon he closed his eyes for he well-earned nap that had become a part of his afternoon life. When he woke it was to find Freck and his flea-bitten mare near by.

"Any luck, boy?" he asked.

"No, sir! there wasn't any news for you at all, Mr. Brent," Freck said. "Maybe it'll come tomorrow."

"Maybe it will. I don't care much when it comes just so it gets here some time. Look here, Freck, do you ever think much about your own future? What you are going to be when you grow up, and so on?"

Freck's face went blank. "Why, I thought I was going to be your confidential agent," he said.

Mr. Brent laughed. "You were, but you gave the job to that brother-in-law of yours. I can't have a whole flock of confidential agents, you know. Look here, Freck, I've got an idea for you. How'd you like to be president of the Consolidated Crawdad company? Of course, there wouldn't be any consolidation to it, but we'd just give it that name for the sake of the sound. How'd you like it?"

"What'd I do?" Freck asked.

"Do? Why, you'd be a crawdad magnate. The first thing you know you'd be getting your picture in all the papers and be owning motor-cars and steam yachts, and I don't know what all."

"I'd like to have an automobile," Freck said sagely.

"I don't see any reason why you shouldn't have it. Why, see here Freck, down in town you can go along at night and find two or three negroes on the street selling these crawfish. They seem to make a pretty good living at it just selling them out of baskets all wrapped up in dirty old newspapers and that sort of thing, so why wouldn't it be a good idea to sell them the way crawfish ought to be sold? Fix up a crawfish cafe, sell them there in salads, crawfish sandwiches, crawfish this way and crawfish that."

"Oh, snakes!" Freck whistled in addition to the exclamation. "You sure ain't like what you was when you first come out here, Mr. Brent."

"I'm not? Why not?" Brent asked surprisedly.

Freck grinned. "It'd take too long to tell you," he answered. "But what would I do? I couldn't run this business."

"Certainly not. You couldn't run this business, but you could hire somebody to do that. Your business is to be the chief crawfish finder. Anybody could run a shop, but it takes a genius to keep it supplied with first-class, fat, healthy crawdads.

"Selling them at twenty-five cents a dozen," Brent went on, "that would be one thousand two hundred and fifty quarters; that would be three hundred and twelve dollars and fifty cents a day! Count out about seventy-five or a hundred for expenses—they won't be more than twenty, though. Why, boy, you'll be rich in a month."

Freck gasped. "There ain't that much money in the world," he said.

"Well, I'll show you there is," Mr. Brent answered. "It'll be a cinch. Why, not half working I got way over a bushel today. I took 'em up to the cave. Come on up. We'll get some and fix 'em for supper."

He led the way to the cave and started to enter. He stopped, shoved his hands in his pockets and whistled. The gunnysack had tipped over, spilling the crawfish out, and they were easily making their escape; but instead of hurrying down the bank toward the stream, they were going in exactly the opposite direction into the deeper darkness of the cave itself.

"Now what do you think of those fools, anyway?" Mr. Brent asked, turning to Freck. "What do you suppose they are going back in that cave for?"

Freck scratched his sandy hair. "That's a funny thing to me," he said. "They must know where they're going, Mr. Brent. You can take crawfish two blocks from water and they'll go right back to it straight as a bee line. There must be water in this cave somewhere."

"Well, there isn't. We were all the way through it the other day, weren't we?"

"There must be water somewhere just the same," Freck answered.

"Well, we'll soon find out if there is. I don't see how we could have missed it. If there had been water in here we'd have found it. Come on. We'll see."

They lighted the candles and began to follow the long streams of crawlads. For thirty feet they went straight back, following the general line of the cave. Then in a rather large, cavernous part of it just before the tunnel was reached, the line of crawling mollusks turned sharply to the left. Freck and Mr. Brent peered into the darkness.

"I believe there's a little opening there that we didn't see," Mr. Brent said. "I believe they're going right into it."

"Guess we better go, too, hadn't we?" Freck asked.

"That we had."

The opening was barely large enough to admit the passage of their bodies. Once inside, pushing crawfish out of their way and incidently getting pinched once or twice by the angry objectors, they crawled through on their hands and knees and then started down a sharp declivity on the other side.

For ten feet the descent was almost precipitous, then it smoothed away to a gentle slope. Again it started downward, again it smoother down, and continued for perhaps a hundred feet, while they went farther and farther down into the earth, the cave still retaining its tunnel-like appearances, the air growing damper and colder as they went along. Water dripped from the stalactites on the roof of the tunnel. The floor was damp and slippery.

"We're going to come to a lake," Freck said. "I bet this was where Jesse James and his gang stayed, 'way down here. I wonder if we'll find any bones."

"Like as not," said Mr. Brent. The eerie appearance of things was having almost as much of an effect on him as it was on the boy.

They went on farther, their candles casting grotesque reflections here and there before them, and bringing out sparkling colors from the stalactites. Now and then a bat flew past them. Brent shivered a bit.

"It's cold down here, Freck."

"Yes, it is— Look!"

Brent Gasped. His Fists Doubled Up. "Scrottles!" He Burst Out.

have known it! So that's the game they've been playing, is it? That is why I have been driven half crazy for the last two years raising salaries and raising salaries and never being able to satisfy the demand.

"That thief!" Thomas Brent broke out as he wheeled about the room, "that burglar! Look here, Edwards, this prospective brother-in-law of yours is about as smart a kid as I have ever struck in my life. He's given you a high recommendation to me. I'm going to take his word for it. Mrs. Williams," he turned to her, "Mr. Edwards and I are going to have a few plans to talk over. Do you mind if we go into the parlor?"

Whereupon Edwards somewhat mollified by the fragmentary explanation which had come to him, stepped forward and the door closed behind them.

Mrs. Williams turned back to her dishwashing, while Freck reached outside the door and dragged in a sack of hard-shelled, dump, struggling objects.

"Land sakes! What you got now?" asked Mrs. Williams

"Crawdads," Freck answered as he dragged them forth one by one and placed them in a large pan. "I thought maybe you'd like some."

"Like 'em? You know, Jimmy Phillips, I just hate them."

"Mr. Brent might like some, though."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

GROWING OLD

Two things the human mind dreads Old Age and Death.

Both of these we battle against and put off as long as possible—one because of the weakness and dependency which it entails, the other because we know not what is beyond.

The result of this is that very few of us grow old gracefully and attractively.

We strive to be young when we should be willing to be old.

We ape the tastes and fashions of youth when we have long been unsuited to them and make ourselves ridiculous when we might at least be interesting.

It is truer, perhaps, of women than of men that the appearance of a gray hair and the permanent establishment of a wrinkle is looked upon as a sort of individual disgrace, an indication that something has been left undone that should have been done or something done which should not have been done.

As a matter of fact, there is nothing more beautiful and nothing more interesting than attractive old age.

Wisdom, which comes only with years, should then reach its highest development.

Judgment which in youth is neither sound nor trustworthy, should then be dependable and worth while consulting.

The time to prepare for old age is before it arrives.

The time to prepare for the harvest is in the seed time, and youth is the seed time of our lives.

If every young man and young woman would keep the future in mind, plan for it, think for it, study for it, old age would lose half its dread and terror and we should look forward to it as the time when we should enjoy the results of a well-arranged preparation.

It is the old age which follows a lack of this preparation that is hollow and sad, the old age which has no memories but regrets, its future gone, its past a failure.

Addison, great poet and essayist, wrote: "He who would pass the declining years of his life with honor and comfort, should when young, become old, AND REMEMBER WHEN HE IS OLD THAT HE HAS ONCE BEEN YOUNG."

We have not yet learned to keep the body from growing old. The fairness of the skin will die. The hair will whiten and the wrinkles come. The knee will crook less willingly to the will and the back may bend with increasing years.

But the heart, the spirit, can be kept young.

The soul never grows old else the hereafter would lose its chiefest glory.

Grow old happily. Grow old gracefully, accepting nature's decrees with a willing compliance to their requirements.

But think, as long as you may, young thoughts. Continue to learn. Continue to progress. There is much in old age that is beautiful. Shut your eyes to what is not.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

OLD MR. MOON

Off in the distance was the moon. It was a very enormous moon, too. Oh, yes, old Mr. Moon was looking his best.

"I'm in the best of health," he seemed to be saying. "Just see how I actually grow with health. In fact, I'm not a pale moon at all but a ruddy moon.

"I've color and they say that when a creature has color it means that that creature has lots of health.

"I almost look sun-burned, too. You see I'm a golden-red moon, which makes me look both sunburned and the owner of a fine color. But I must explain this.

"When I am pale moon it does not mean that I am not well. To be pale is natural to me. Of course I like to say I look so healthy now, and healthy I do look. But I am equally healthy when pale. Some people have to go to the doctor's when they look very pale. But not Mr. Moon.

"In the first place, if I did have to go to a doctor I don't know what I would do, as there is no doctor up in the sky.

"Mr. Sun never needs a doctor. Neither do I. He is like a doctor himself and sometimes he has been called Doctor Sun.

"Yet sometimes when doctors do feel well they go to other doctors. Mr. Sun never feels poorly so he never has to think of another doctor.

"Still it would be a waste of thought, for as I've already said, there is no doctor up in the sky.

"Wouldn't it cause a commotion if some one would come up in the sky and hang out a sign over one of the clouds which would read:

"'Bright Sky, M. D. Office hours from one to five and Sundays by appointment.'

"Yes, it would be absurd and the poor doctor would have no patients.

"We might go to call on him to pass the time of day, or night as it were, but we would not want his sky pills if he had any, nor his sky tonics.

"I must explain why it doesn't mean anything because I am pale most of the time.

"To be pale is the moon's usual way and it doesn't mean anything like a sickness coming on any more than it means that I must add weight when I am only half a moon.

"To Be Pale Is the Moon's Usual Way."

"I will get back to being a full moon in good time without having to eat fattening food. Oh, yes, I'm a healthy moon all right."

Now the little girl spoke to her brother about touching the moon and her brother said that no one could touch the moon even though it seemed to be right on top of the hill, and even though it looked as though if one went to the top of the hill one could touch it. But he was willing to take her to the top of the hill to let her see for herself. And the little girl went with her brother.

"The moon seems to be touching that hill over yonder," she said.

"Oh, dear, how I do wish I could go and touch the moon. I would like to stroke Mr. Moon's face and perhaps if I stroked it with a feather, Mr. Moon would grin and squirm as I do when my face is tickled by a feather. Oh, that would be a good joke."

Up to the top of the hill they climbed and when they got there Mr. Moon did not seem to be touching the hill at all.

In fact he was far off in the sky a-s yet it had not seemed as though they had seen him move.

"I can't tickle Mr. Moon's face," the little girl said, "for you were right, brother. I don't believe anyone can touch the moon."

Mr. Moon grinned to himself as the sky messengers came hurying along to tell him what the little girl had said.

"Touch me," he said. "I should say not! I'm not proud or anything like that, but Mr. Moon is not a creature to be handled by humans. They might forget I was a moon and treat me as though I were an enormous ball or something of the sort.

"At any rate I'm not taking any chances. I'll smile at everyone, but I also say to everyone:

"'Keep your distance! Keep your distance!'

"And I'll see that they do it, too!"

School Courses

The "6-3-3 plan" in schools is a plan or organization consisting of six grades above the kindergarten, constituting the elementary school, followed by a three-year junior high school both the junior and the senior high school being considered in the field of secondary education. Completion of the high school in any one of these plans is marked by the granting of a diploma of graduation.

The Department of War has announced that "the Army Library Service maintains libraries at every post, camp, and station in the continental limits of the United States, the Canal Zone, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippine Islands, China, and on Army transports." The recorded circulation for the current fiscal year was 1,138,633 books. There are 173 main libraries and 47 branch libraries, ranging in size from three hundred to forty thousand volumes, and including general literature, fiction, reference books and textbooks, and books on military science. The average circulation of these libraries is from eight to fifteen books per man per year.

Helpin' Mother

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

My Mother has a funny way
Of gettin' boys t' work!
I wouldn't jus' exac'ly say
That I'm a lazy sh'rk,
But I guess most boys ain't so keen
T' do a lot o' chores,
Aspecially when things 're green,
We like t' be outdoors.

I know my Mother shouldn't do
So many things for me,
Unless I try t' help her, too.
I'm willin' to, but gee,
Buffore I know it, she's begun
T' do my job! She'll say,
"I guess that I can get it done;
You run on out and play!"

An' that makes me feel kinda mean;
An' so I dig right in
An' do my work up slick an' clean.
Then sometimes I begin
Another job, t' let her know
That she can count on me.
I guess most boys are awful slow,
But we don't mean t' be.

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK—PERPETUAL CARE

THE SOFTENING INFLUENCE

The crudity that has surrounded burials in the past in most cases proved painful and trying, has been removed in MEMORIAL PARK. The old-fashioned custom allowing unsightly mounds of earth to lie in plain view of the grave and the practice of permitting workmen to set about their work before mourners have left, has been discarded for a better plan.

Every effort has been made to soften the ordeal. A tent shields the mourners; the walls of the grave are hidden by rich, heavy draperies; a noiseless lowering device is always used; carpets are laid from the roadway to the grave and on the lot around it. Every particle of earth taken from the grave is removed from sight; workmen do not appear until mourners have left and the entire service is under shelter.

ELIMINATION CONTESTS

Tennis and Horseshoe Contests at Glenwood Playground This Week.

Glenwood playground is holding the preliminary elimination tennis matches and horseshoe contests this week. They will continue daily through August 11, after which date the representatives for the city-wide finals will be selected.

The various classifications of players in tennis try-out, according to age, are:

Singles, boys under 16, girls under 16, boys over 16 and girls over 16.

Doubles, boys under 16, girls under 16, boys over 16 and girls over 16.

Mixed Doubles, boys and girls over 16.

Glenwood was a runner-up in several classes last year and it is hoped this year some of her players will cop a championship. All tennis players on the West Side are eligible for these try-outs an should arrange with Mr. Dyer, Miss Moler or Miss Miller, supervisors at Glenwood, for a playing date.

Those interested in horseshoe will find the groupings as follows:

Boys under 15 years of age, boys 15 to 18 years of age, boys over 18 years of age and men over 50 years of age.

Competition among the lovers of barn yard golf promises to be keener than usual this year. The elimination for horseshoe will be on up to August 12.

The City Championship for both tennis and horseshoe will be held during the week of August 15.

Glenwood certainly had a big week for baseball games this past week. The girls' team played McKinley and Weinland, winning both games. The boys' team won over McKinley and Dana, but lost to Sunshine. Then, too, the adults had a game with McKinley and won by a score of 6-0.

To top off our good work for the week our girls played volley ball with Sunshine and won.

These ball games show the true co-operation of all ages on the playground. The supervisors at the grounds appreciate this co-operation and hope that more enter into this spirit as the season goes on.

Miss Armintha Smith, 22 Eldon Ave., and Mrs. Jennie Smith, 2402½ W. Broad St., are enjoying a vacation at Magnetic Springs.

Master Harold Terry, 58 N. Park Ave., who has been spending the past four weeks at Waverly, Ohio, returned to his home Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Terry and children Helen and Margie Anne, 58 N. Park Ave., accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fleming and daughter Carrie, 62 N. Park Ave., were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hickman, Waverly, Ohio.

EMIL C. EBERT
Candidate for City Council

Mr. Ebert is one of the founders and for three years was secretary of the Columbus Council of Civic Associations. Having worked for legislation in that capacity for the interest of the general public, the West Side has benefited through his work by elimination of grade crossings, traffic lights, better street lighting, gas rate and extension controversy, general sewer relief and car extension.

Ebert promises to be an active councilman for the people, if elected.

He is a World war veteran, and a member of Humboldt Lodge of Masons and the Shrine.

We think news and events travel far and fast today but over two months ago there was an earthquake in China in which 200,000 were killed and injured and today the news has just reached those in civilization. There seems to be much room for development in China.

The latest development in the literary world is that Mother Goose is no longer considered fit for children to read. Possibly Elmer Gantry will take the dear old mother's place.

We Must Work Together

Every thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks—more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our community to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers—the stores and banks of our community—and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

SEWING, CREPE PAPER EXHIBIT

Girls of Westgate Playground to Display Work at Grounds August 17.

Wednesday, August 17, is the day chosen by the girls at Westgate Park playgrounds for their sewing and crepe paper exhibit to which they are inviting their mothers. The girls in these classes are especially to be commended for their work as this is their first year for these classes.

The day following their exhibit on the grounds Mrs. Farrar, sewing supervisor for the entire city, is to choose the nicest articles of the display for the West Side exhibit to be held at Seiler's store the week of Aug. 22. The girls are also planning a semi-field meet and other entertainment for the "Mothers" playground day.

On Tuesday morning, Aug. 23, Miss Morris, girls' supervisor, will take the girls for a long hike and breakfast in the woods, where they will gather as many leaves as they are able to identify, which will be mounted in a folding scrap book. The ultimate idea being to found a nature study club for Westgate park. The girls are planning to leave Westgate park about 7:30 a. m.

Westgate playground also boasts of a nine-hole golf course on which the children use indoor baseballs and bats in place of golf clubs and balls. From this variation of the game they derive much pleasure as well as valuable knowledge of a very popular game. Mr. Hamilton, boys' supervisor, hopes to compete the girls and boys in a tournament in the near future.

Because of the admirable arrangement and lovely shade of the park many people are choosing it for large and small picnics. There are picnic tables and benches supplied in one section of the park, removed from the playground proper, which accommodates rather large picnics and affords some privacy. Many of the churches and clubs of the Hilltop have taken advantage of this lovely picnic park

SCHOOL BEGINS SEPTEMBER 6

Columbus public schools will open on Tuesday, September 6. Only about twenty-five more days remain in which to enjoy the summer weather out of doors.

This year the textbooks will be on sale at the school buildings by several local dealers. This saves time and the trouble of going to town. This method was recently suggested by the Parent-Teachers' association and later acted upon by the board.

Announcement has been made that the meeting of the National Educational association will probably be held here in 1929. Next year's meeting goes to Minneapolis.

Classes at Ohio State university begin Sept. 20.

HILLTOP "GLAD" SHOW THIS WEEK

Entry is open to all and all flowers to be shown should be in place by 10 o'clock Friday at which time the judging will start. There are 37 classes and valuable prizes are offered for each class. The prizes are to be valuable bulbs of the rarer varieties. One of the more valuable prizes is a Gold Eagle bulb, valued at $15 offered for the best spike of Austin origination. Here is a chance for Hilltop flower growers to compete for these prizes and thereby increase their stock.

Flowers will be taken care of by those in charge at the church.

Some of Ohio's largest flower growers will be in charge of this program. It is being sponsored by the Hilltop Glad Gardens, 110 N. Powell Ave.; Buster Bros., Wilmington; Humphrey's Flower Gardens, Pataskala; Bale's Triangle Gardens, Circleville; McNaughten Road Gardens, Reynoldsburg.

A TRUE DREAM

It was Sunday night. The wind arose and carried a storm. As the rain beat against the windows she remembered her washing she had left on the line to dry. Quickly she ran down stairs and out of doors. She removed the clothes pins. As the rain fell hard upon her back she was awakened and found her washing to be her bathing suit which she had dreamed was getting wet. This story is true. It happened to a Hilltop girl last Sunday night. We're not mentioning any names. Moral: It takes a little rain to make dreams come true.

C. W. Ruffing, 132 S. Ogden Ave., a representative from Bakoo Temple, D. O. K. K., left Saturday evening to attend the annual convention of the order, which is being held at Ft. Worth, Tex.

The meeting of Hilltop Branch W. C. T. U. which was to have been held at the home of Mrs. Mayer, 354 S. Terrace St., Aug. 12, has been postponed until Friday, Aug. 19. A pot luck dinner will be served. W. C. T. U. meeting will be held in the morning and Bethany Bible class in the afternoon at 2 p. m.

Enthusiasm Ran High at Glenwood Playground When 65 Model Airplanes Were Exhibited

The accompanying pictures give some idea of the intense enthusiasm that attended the "Lindbergh and Aviation Day" recently at Glenwood playground. A crowd of 350 assembled at the park for the exhibit and ceremonies. Lieutenant Frank McKee and R. O. Harrison, judges, found it very difficult to select the prize winners from the 65 planes exhibited.

Charles Ziroli, 142 S. Warren Ave., won first place and with it a free plane ride at Norton Field. Other winners were: Harold Steguiller, 773 Bellows Ave., and John Stevens, 771 Campbell Ave., second; Thomas Schwan, 2519 W. Broad St., third, and Robert McNabb, 88 Brehl Ave., fourth.

Rev. H. C. Hutchinson reviewed the life of the "Lone Eagle" Colonel Lindbergh and gave an address on the ideals of the famous flier, after which John Latham, 87 Belvidere Ave., was crowned the "Lindbergh of Glenwood."

City Recreation Director Raymond introduced Latham to his Hilltop friends and complimented him on the honor of his selection.

Carl Minderman of the Columbus Citizen gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the series of articles "Building and Flying Model Airplanes" that are appearing daily in the Citizen.

Lieutenant Frank McKee explained the new Junior Aero club organization for boys. He was high in his praise of the Citizen's model airplane contest and said "Boys of Columbus can learn more about the principles of aviation in the building of model planes than they can any other way." He expressed the hope that the boys of the Hilltop will continue the good work already begun.

Applications for the Junior Aero club or information concerning the contest can be secured from Miss Mary Molter, Miss Ruby Miller or Mr. W. C. Dyer, supervisors at Glenwood, who sponsored aviation day.

Watch for "Dad"

Beginning this week the Knickerbocker Dry Cleaners will run a series of ads with sayings of Dad Knickerbocker known as "Tween You and Me." Every week Dad will give people of the Hilltop a little of his philosophy. Watch for him each week in the Record.

After a brief trip to northern Michigan the bride and groom will make their home at Murray City, where Mr. Christman is superintendent of the high schools.

The program committee has arranged an interesting time; races and contests will be held for old and young. first and second prizes will be awarded to the winners of these contests. A good time is assured to all.

Mrs. J. E. Wilson, S. Warren avenue, entertained Tuesday afternoon at the Lazarus tea room, honoring her sister, Miss Isabel Cox of Richmond, Va., who is making a visit of two weeks.

HAUNTZ, GREEN ARE NOMINATED

Lewis Leads Council Race with Largest Vote—Miller Nominated for Judge.

The primaries passed over quietly on Tuesday with a light vote from all sections of the city, but with a Republican victory and the placing of two Hilltop men in the race for two of the four seats to be given on the city council in November. Five Republicans and three Democrats were nominated.

Ray G. Hauntz and Floyd Green, of the Hilltop, were successful in their campaign for city council nomination. They are both Republicans and will be in the race at the November election.

John M. Lewis, Democrat, of Brehl avenue, another West Sider, headed the race with 3008 votes to his credit. He held the lead from the beginning and never lost out. He was the only one of four councilmen elected four years ago who was a candidate to succeed himself.

Others nominated were: Frank Karns and John S. McIntyre, Democrats, and Dr. H. W. Miller, Robert T. Oestreicher and "Pop" Heiser, Republicans.

For presiding judge of the municipal court, Fred J. Miller had a complete walkaway with an early lead. Alblets, Democrat, will oppose him in the November election.

Judge E. V. Mahaffey had no opposition in his nomination for associate judge on the Republican ticket. M. S. Andrix was nominated on the Democratic ticket.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Gilbert and daughter Mildred Louise and son Jack are enjoying a 10-day trip to Niagara Falls, Hamilton and Toronto, Canada, and Georgian Bay.

Sing at Lancaster

Sunday was "Columbus" day at the Lancaster camp grounds. The Hilltop was represented by the choir of the Glenwood M. E. church. They sang at both the morning and afternoon services before an audience of approximately 5000.

On last Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. George W. Drake entertained a party of friends at their new home, 2634 Elliott Ave. At 7 o'clock a delightful picnic supper was spread, after which the evening was spent in music, social conversation and games. Those were present: Mr. and Mrs. George Kohl and son Frederick, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Zerby and daughter Gladys, Mrs. Freda Bennett, son Jack and daughter Rene, Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Dollings and son Laverne and Mrs. N. A. Drake and son Glenn.

Miss Ella May Paul, 186 Binns Boulevard left Monday morning with a party of Glenwood Epworth Leaguers to spend a week at Lake Side. After a week there she will go to Altoona, Pa., to spend a week with Mrs. Paul's brother, W. E. DeMuth.

Playground Contests

Director of Recreation Raymond announced at the playground supervisors' meeting this week that special playground contests will be held at the state fair, Aug. 29. They will be held in the coliseum and the prizes for winners will be sponsored by the luncheon clubs of Columbus.

Mrs. Joseph Maurer, Marinette, Wis., is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. C. Haly, 135 N. Powell Ave.

Mrs. J. E. Dort, White Bear Lake, Minn., returned to her home Monday after visiting several weeks with friends and relatives in Ohio. Among her Columbus relatives are Mrs. Laura McElrath, 2239 W. Broad St. and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Knox, 128 Eldon Ave.

METHODISTS TAKE ANOTHER GAME

The Glenwood M. E. baseball nine took the team from the Hilltop Church of Christ into the woods last Friday evening at McKinley park with a score of 10 8.

The game was not as fast and spirited as usual but disregarding the errors of both teams the game was very interesting. Coburn of the Hilltop Church of Christ was probably the star slow of his team. Dr. T. S. Fox played a very good game for the Glenwoodens. The Glenwood team was without the services of their regular pitcher, Carder and Major was also missing from the ranks.

This Friday Glenwood meets Avondale U. B. at McKinley at 6:30 p. m.

OX ROAST AT PICNIC

All Plans Nearly Completed; Much Interest Shown in Baby Contest.

As the day for the Hilltop picnic and ox roast draws nearer the plans for his big event take a more definite form. Fred L. Sahlberger, general chairman of the picnic committee of the Hilltop Business Men's association says everything looks fine and the only thing to prevent a bigger and better picnic than ever before will be bad weather which every Hilltopper is hoping will be postponed.

The ox roast is to be one of the biggest features of the day. Cap Fagley of the city fire department aided by some of his associates will have charge of the barbecuing. Those who ate barbecue sandwiches at the picnic last year will back the statement that Cap cannot be matched when it comes to roasting meat this style.

A report from those in charge of the baby contest shows 86 babies to be entered in the show at the present time. Those who were late in registering their babies will have an opportunity to do so the day of the picnic at the grounds.

Entertainment of all kinds will be in abundance. Announcement of the prizes and entries will be made in next week's Record.

The fourth quarterly conference of Glenwood Methodist Episcopal church will be held Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. W. C. Hartinger, superintendent of the Columbus district, will be in charge. All members of the church are invited and officials are especially urged to come.

Everybody sees the Hilltop—they just can't help it.

Now is the heighth of the tourist ramblings and to stand on any corner of West Broad street and notice the passing motorists is a sight to compare with any of your old time covered wagon scenes. The only way to make the whole thing seem strange to us today would be to let one of the covered wagons make its appearance now.

Cars from every state in the union and other foreign licenses pass by us every day. Being located as we are here on the National Highway it is an interesting sight to watch the many cars go by and try to determine their native states. How many have you seen? Just try it once as you take your evening walk.

—The Spectator.

10 MORE HILLTOP HOMES LOOTED

"Eel" Collects Money and Jewelry Valued at $381; Shows No Discretion.

A total of 18 robberies is the record for the Hilltop in the past 10 days. After eight houses were entered and several unsuccessful shots fired in a week of the so-called "eel," he evaded the hands of the law and went prowling again on Sunday adding ten more entries to his record and $381 in money and jewelry added to his wealth.

His latest campaign began when he entered the home of G. A. Page, 193 N. Eureka Ave., and left his ladder standing after an unsuccessful ransacking of the house.

This same Sunday morning a rear window of the home of L. J. Schultz, 109 N. Eureka Ave., was forced open and the "eel" departed with $97 which he had found.

Then on a visit to the home of R. E. Lewis, 157 N. Eureka Ave., he took two rings valued at $175.

Then the ladder was resorted to again and left standing at the home of F. E. Wilson, 145 N. Eureka, but nothing was missing.

At 243 N. Park Ave., the thief stole $62 and a watch belonging to Robert E. Emmett.

Firearms again blazed after him at 281 N. Park Ave., when Joseph B. Trout fired on a man entering a window in his bedroom. Evidently the shots failed to find their mark.

Homer Scoles, 165 N. Park Ave., reports that he chased a man from his window while attempting to pry it open.

Probably the worst injury done by the burglar was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. McIntosh, 227 N. Oakley. Mrs. McIntosh explained that the thief took the only cash they had which amounted to $33 in bills and a little change. With sorrowful words she said it was the money they had been saving to buy their winter's coal and were planning to order it the next day.

At the McIntosh home he cut the screen from a window and entered, but was very careful to have both front door and screen open so as to make a quick getaway. Mr. McIntosh is hard of hearing and the thief removed the money from the pants pocket under the owner's pillow as the man slept on. Then on visiting Mrs. McIntosh's room the "eel" had his face close down to her head as if to find if she was asleep. She awoke and screamed and the man ran out of the house. This happened about 4:30 a. m. Monday.

At the home of A. W. McCune, 257 N. Oakley, the thief got $1 after using a ladder again. Another screen was cut at the home of George H. Hott, 283 N. Oakley, but nothing was taken, and again at the home of Lucille Fisher, 201 N. Oakley, he gained entrance by means of a ladder and carried out $15.

The thief is described as being about 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighing about 125 pounds. He was wearing a cap when last seen. He wears a heavy shoe judged to be about a size 9.

Mrs. Bell Bazler suffered a broken left hand Wednesday as a result of a fall down stairs.

The Philathea class of Glenwood church will picnic at the home of Mrs. M. L. Stevenson, Fairview Farm, Canal Winchester, Thursday, Aug. 18, rain or shine. Scioto Valley traction car leave Rich and Third streets at 10:30 a. m. Each member is requested to take table service, a covered dish and sandwiches.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Cruea, 206 N. Ogden Ave., announce the birth of a daughter, Martha Ann July 28.

AMATEUR GLADIOLUS GROWING

By J. B. Humphrey

To those who are interested and new at growing the Gladiolus, I would say go a little slow at first in buying your bulbs, using the more inexpensive ones, and trying them out for a year or two before buying the newer and more costly varieties. In that way you will learn how to grow them properly and care for them in storage through the winter; also you will be getting acquainted with names and descriptions of the best varities and their prices.

There is another inexpensive way of getting a great deal of pleasure out of Glads and that is to grow some from seed. It will take two years before they bloom, unless you are very fortunate to get a good mixed bulb the first year. Some of them will bloom the second season. Think of the thrills you would get in seeing your new seedlings opening out, of getting up with the birds and seeing them while they are fresh and crisp, and with the dew on them—every one different, some red, some white or yellow or blue. Try it!

In buying bulbs do not make the mistake of getting a mixture, but buy named varieties. In that way you will be better able to select the colors you want or better still, visit someone who grows them and make your selections in the field while blooming. There are many of the same color and some varieties are plain petaled while others are ruffled or crinkled.

If you try growing from seed, plant as early in the spring as possible. Just barely cover with a little sand and place an old carpet or other heavy cloth on the bed, and in about a week or ten days examine every morning until you see the little plants beginning to come through, then take the cover off at night or on a cloudy day and leave it off.

If you follow the directions given you will not be disappointed, and you will have the satisfaction of growing just as fine flowers as your neighbors.

The writer of this article, Mr. J. B. Humphrey, of Pataskala, Ohio, (garden located fourteen miles east on Broad street) started growing Gladiolus as a hobby twenty-five years ago, and in late years has made it his business as well as his hobby. He will be glad to have you visit his gardens at any time and give you any information you may want in regard to the growing and care of bulbs.

RELIEVING PAIN WITH A READING LAMP

A small reading lamp has great possibilities in its light rays, as a reliever of pain. The rays of light seem as powerless to cure pain as the air to carry the radio message until one has actually tried them, as they are now being resorted to in hospitals, in sanitariums, and in the tuberculosis camps for the cure of disease.

While large wattage lamps are necessary for deep therapy, to produce general bodily reaction, a small nitrogen reading lamp will relieve the local rheumatic pain, or the twinge of neuritis, especially if the rays be brought down within ten or twelve inches of the area, and a cloth covers the lamp to concentrate the rays on the aching spot.

The earache, toothache, the pain in the foot or hand, knee joint, elbow or shoulder can be successfully treated at home in this manner. Many masseurs and physicians order light rays for twenty minutes, alternated with a dash of ice, which keeps up a constant stimulation of the blood in the painful area, and it is by this curative action of the blood that the pain, abscess, or inflammation is removed.

Vegetable Combinations Always Good

Corn Fritters, Cole Slaw, Carrots and Baked Apple Make a Good Vegetable Plate.

In order to serve a "vegetable plate" at home you don't need the special kind of plates used by restaurants for the purpose. If your combination is pleasing the family will be satisfied to have the vegetables served as at any ordinary meal. From three to five vegetables are usually selected for a vegetable dinner. Innumerable good combinations may be planned as the vegetables come on the market.

Here is a good in-between-seasons menu: Corn fritters, cole slaw, buttered carrots and baked apples. This combination fulfills the requirement that there should be something hearty—the corn fritters, made with egg and milk, and rich because they are fried; something mild-flavored—the carrots; something acid—the apple. The pungency of the cabbage gives the necessary pronounced flavor that lends character to the whole plate. The illustration was made by the United States Department of Agriculture, which further suggests that some thought be given to the color and appearance of a vegetable plate, since appetite is so often stimulated through the eye.

SUMMERY GOOD THINGS

During the warm weather we like to think of juicy fruits, chilled dishes and desserts that are refreshing without being too much work. With a small freezer one may prepare the most delicious desserts and have such variety that the family will always look forward to the dessert with anticipation.

If you wish to start off your dinner with something especially cooling and unusual, serve the honey dew or cantaloupe melons topped off with a tart sherbet or ice.

Lemon Ice.

Take one and one-third cupfuls of sugar, three cupfuls of water and one and one-half cupfuls of lemon juice. Boil the sugar and water five minutes, add the lemon juice and cool. Freeze as usual. This will make one quart of ice.

When fine firm heads of lettuce can be secured, no other vegetable or fruit is needed to make a tempting salad. With the following "dressy" dressing, it will be fit for the most honored guest:

Thousand Island Dressing

Take one-half cupful of olive oil, the juice of half a lemon, the juice of half an orange, one tablespoonful of grated onion, three tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard, six olives chopped or sliced, one teaspoonful of worcestershire sauce, one-half cupful of mayonnaise and one-fourth teaspoonful each of salt and paprika. Put all the ingredients into a jar, after having mixed the dry ingredients and dissolved them in the fruit juice. Put on a rubber and seal. Shake until the mixture is smooth. Set into the icebox to chill and shake again when ready to serve. Finely chopped hard-cooked egg, green pepper and various other vegetables may be added for variety.

Figaro Figs.

Steam pulled figs until plump and soft. Slit one side and insert half a marshmallow and a few nuts. Roll in sugar and serve on a paper doily-lined plate.

With the Clock Turned Back

By Courtney Ryley Cooper

Before them the tunnel had opened into a great cavern and there showed a glassy surface of black water.

"It's an underground lake," shouted Freck. "I knew it! I knew it!"

"Lake nothing—it's a river. The water's moving. 'See?" Brent stepped forward to look closer.

An exclamation came from him. His foot had slipped. Scrambling back, he reached out for something to hold to and grasped at the wall. His hand closed upon a protuberance. It broke from its fastening and he went down heavily, carrying the protuberance with him.

"Oooh! This rock's rotten," he gasped. "I'm glad I didn't go into that river. Goodness knows how deep it is. Freck, give me a light. My candle's gone out."

Freck handed him the candle, and Thomas Brent stopped to look at the bit of stone in his hands before he threw it away. Something about it caught his eye. He looked closely, then closer. He held it and the candle close to his eyes. He gasped a bit and stuck the piece of stone in his pocket. Then he rose hurriedly and passed the candle along the sides of the wall.

"Freck," he asked quickly, "who owns this land around here?"

"I'm not sure," Freck said, "but I think a man named Ridge in Kansas City owns it."

"Well, I don't think he is going to own it very long," Mr. Brent answered. "By the way, Freck, you've got a good head on you. Now let's see how tight you can keep it shut. We'll save the crowded business until another time. In the meantime I've got several things to transact in Kansas City. Let's go down to Aunt Margie's and borrow another horse: I want you to show me the way to the railroad station."

CHAPTER IX

Outside of the Door

Five men were gathered around a table in the director's room of the Amalgamated Foundry company. Three of them represented interests in St. Louis and Denver. The two others were John Brady and Phillip Scrottles.

Mr. Tempest of St. Louis rose. "I fail to see, Mr. Scrottles," he said "how, without any word from your employer, you can be sure of throwing this plant of Mr. Brent's into this affair. I don't see why the Kelly-Griggs company should be given the balance of power in this thing. Of course, I am only the representative of my plant, but if this is to be a merger, I want them to have as much representation as anyone.

"You say and Mr. Brady says," Mr. Tempest continued, "that the Kelly-Griggs company is going to take over the Amalgamated Foundry company, causing them to come into the merger with an amount of capital that would far overbalance what capital we smaller fry have, and throwing the running of affairs into the hands of the larger holders of capital. In other words, we would simply be coming into this affair to be fleeced."

"Not at all! Not at all!" Mr. Scrottles said. "Of course, if you don't care to draw up the agreement for the merger, we can leave the companies separate, but I give you my word of honor the Amalgamated is to be bought by Mr. Brady. Before Mr. Brent left he advised me to make such plans as I saw fit and then hold them pending his return. I have found a good proposition and I'm going ahead with it. Mr. Brent, I believe, is at present in Cincinnati. I heard that he was there and went attempting to find him, but could not do so. I feel sure that we will hear from him within a week, and to the end that everything will be all right. Therefore, gentlemen, I feel that we can draw up the contract now."

"Why not wait until we hear from Mr. Brent? There's no special hurry about this thing," Tempest said.

"But there is a hurry," Brady broke in. "I've been planning to take my wife and daughter to Europe for the last two months, and I don't like to wait any longer. Let's get it out of the way. You fellows are going to have your representation in this thing. You wouldn't be coming into it if you weren't. It's a good thing for you. It's the only way we can get ahead of the American syndicate.

"As it is we have a monopoly of prices now," Brady went on. "We can hold goods on contracts just as high as we want to, but this isn't going to continue very long unless we stay banded together and keep the American syndicate from buying in this territory. As long as they feel they would have to start shops and plants of their own they are going to stay away from here. But give them an opening and we'll have a cutthroat gang that will cut our profits down to less than nothing. Now, gentlemen"—he slammed his hand on the table—"why can't we get together on this thing. Come on, let's sign up."

He reached for some of the papers, but stopped at a knock on the door.

"See who that is, Scrottles."

Scrottles opened the door to find Mr. Edwards standing there.

"Well?" he asked.

"I came to be present at the meeting," the young man answered.

"In whose interest?" Scrottles had not seen Edwards since the day he had left the employ of the Amalgamated.

Edwards smiled. He took a paper from his pocket and prepared to hand it to the waiting Scrottles. "I think that will tell you."

Scrottles looked at the top line and his face went blank. "I don't see how," he said. "This seems to be a warrant for arrest."

Edwards laughed. "I gave you the wrong paper. You'll find out about that after a while. This is the one I intended to give you. It comes from Mr. Brent." He handed him a paper. "I am acting as his representative. You are discharged."

"Discharged?"

Five men came to their feet.

"Yes. We'll talk about that later on. Right now I have something to say affecting this merger. Mr. Brady as far as you are concerned, I don't care what you do. But for Mr. Tempest and his associates I am holding forth a proposition to you to ally yourselves with the American syndicate, and thereby save yourselves much undesirable competition. The American syndicate is now in a position to do about as it pleases in this field, inasmuch as it came into possession this morning of the Amalgamated Foundry company."

There was a moment of silence. Not one of the men in the room, Phillip Scrottles and John Brady least of all, could find words to speak. Scrottles merely stood by the table and gasped. He opened his mouth once or twice, then closed it wordlessly. Edwards stood by the door, still smiling. Presently he stepped to one side as the knob turned and there entered a sun-browned man whose eyes bore a twinkle and whose hands were rough and darkened from life in the open.

"Good morning, gentlemen," he said cheerily.

It was Mr. Thomas Brent.

Scrottles started forward. "Mr. Brent," he said, "this young upstart, this—"

"Hello, Scrottles!" Brent beamed. "By the way, how much was this young upstart getting when he was head of the checking department?"

"Why—why—" Scrottles was stammering.

"Tell the truth," Edwards said.

"Yes,' broke in Mr. Brent, 'be a good thing for you to tell the truth once."

Scrottles went red, then white. "Sixty dollars a month," he said at last.

"I thought so," said Mr. Brent. "By the way, Scrottles, step outside the door there. There's somebody waiting for you. A large man with a red face and big hands and a shining decoration on his coat. He has already taken the cashier for a little walk, and now he wants you to keep the other company."

Scrottles seemed to stagger. "Mr. Brent," he began, "I—I—"

"That'll be all from you, Scrottles," came the voice of the employer, and this time it was stern. "Your friend outside is getting impatient. Come on." He opened the door and gave the other man a little push. A second later and Scrottles was gone. Brent turned to the remaining men.

"Gentlemen," he said to Tempest and the others, meanwhile watching Brady out of the corner of his eyes. "I learned about three weeks ago that the Kelly-Griggs company was trying to make a sort of trust out of this thing instead of a legitimate merger. They didn't even want to do that in an honest way, and so," he said with a little smile, "I got bull-headed. With Mr. Edwards to help me, since I didn't care about appearing in town just then, I sold out to the American syndicate. This of course, gives them the power to go ahead and do just about as they please in this territory. One of the terms of my agreement was that under no conditions could the Kelly-Griggs company come into it. As for the rest of you, I understand you are invited to do as you please. As for myself, I'm out of business. I like the simple life so well I'm going to stay with it, I think. I guess that's about all," he said, spreading his feet and shoving his hands in his pockets. "I guess this about breaks up the little merger meeting."

Fifteen minutes later young Edwards and Thomas Brent were in Mr. Brent's old office of the Amalgamated Foundry company. The older man was cleaning out his desk and throwing away letters, sticking a little keepsake into his pocket now and then, and laughing to himself with great frequency.

"Well, Edwards, I never thought you could get that much for it,' he said. "I had hoped that you might get an even half million, but seven hundred thousand was more than I even dreamed of."

"I had a little tip," Edwards returned, smiling back. "You see, I've been working for the American syndicate branch office here—the one they just established, you know—and I handled the stenographic notes on a couple of board meetings. So when I put our proposition up to them, I knew exactly what they'd pay, and I kept at it until they agreed."

"Well, three days to handle the sale of more than a half-million business is a pretty fair little job, Edwards. Of course, you'll get your commission. Ten per cent of seven hundred thousand ought to keep the wolf from your door for a while, oughtn't it?"

Edwards smiled almost sheepishly. "That's more than my wildest dreams," he answered. "Why, with that Jennie and I can have a farm and horses and cows and automobile and—"

"Wait a minute," said Mr. Brent as he reached into a pocket. "You've got something more coming to you; all of us have—Freck, his mother, Aunt Margie, Jennie, you and myself. And we're all going to form a lovely little community where we'll have about everything we need and a little bit more. I did a little buying when I came into town three days ago. I own Indian creek now from Aunt Margie's house two miles on each side. Here's the reason." He reached in his pocket and handed Edwards a black something. "Know what that is?" he asked.

"Looks like lead ore," Edwards answered.

"That's exactly what it is. There's a hill full of it out there, or rather a cave full, and we're all shareholders in the mine."

"All of us?" Edwards asked, gasping. "Why, Mr. Brent, this isn't right. We haven't done anything to deserve this. "Why—why—"

"Never mind the why," broke in Mr. Brent. "Come, let's go out to dinner and then catch the first train for Aunt Margie's. By the way, Edwards," he asked as they paused by the door, "do you suppose Aunt Margie would ever think of getting married again?"

"Oh, I don't know," answered Edwards. "She might—to just the right man."

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

HOW IS IT WITH YOU?

The wild emotional storms that sweep the quick-tempered from their feet, quite often serve as warnings to observant youths inclined to hold their tongues and apply their hearts to wisdom.

But alas! this does not apply to youth as a whole. Many there are who flounder and pant through such disturbances without giving a thought to their meaning. They look upon the torrential outburst with dull indifference.

Although the bridges have been swept away, and the danger signals flash ahead, they plunge into the ruts and splash through the mud and muck heedless of their peril.

Indeed, the greater number continue to yield to hot-headed impulses, shaken up a bit, perhaps, if the truth were told, but still inclined to follow their rash bent.

These hare-brained youths are going to have their fling.

They are going to show their apprehensive fathers and mothers how things are done in this new age: how to "sport" automobiles and flashy clothes. Among their associates of that ilk, they let it be known that they are not counseling counsel from their elders.

There must be no base capitulation to these ancient apostles of precept and principle.

They will flirt out trouble-making words whenever and wherever they please. What do they care for frequent storms that ruffle the serenity between them and their employers?

The world is an open shop filled with good things especially for the young, and all they have to do is to put out their hand and grab what suits them, just as they would grab an apple from their neighbor's orchard when the dog is left looking.

Out of every hundred of these self-willed youngsters, statistics will show you that ninety are hunting for the rugged days of failure.

Each year they drop a little lower, strutting in tainted society and put at their wit's end to keep up appearance; still storming as in their earlier days, but with a voice less defiant.

In their calmer mood, in the still of night when alone with their troubled souls, they wonder where the next wind will blow them.

On their foreheads and in their shiftless eyes is written the momentous word FAILURE! and they know that everybody can read it.

What is Time writing on your countenance?

"The Art of Living" is the title of a course offered by the department of home economics of the Connecticut College, in New London, Connecticut. Twelve instructors, the president of the college, a lawyer, and a physician from outside, all co-operate in trying to emphasize the unity of life, trying also to present the relation of various fields of learning to everyday leisure and vocational activities.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

WITCH-HAZEL FLOWERS

"In the fall of the year," said the Sandman, "there are yellow flowers to be seen on bushes which have large and thick leaves.

"These flowers are alongside of the twigs of these bushes and they are known as the Witch-Hazel flowers.

"There are some that flower in the spring but the ones of which I'm speaking flower in the fall.

"Miss Witch Hazel Bush was dressed up in her very best, and very, very proud was she.

"'I'm going to have an exciting time next summer,' she said.

"'Instead of wearing a flower dress I shall think only of fruit and I will shoot forth seeds as my fruit pods burst and in this way more witch-hazel shrubs will be able to grow up.

"'I really live for that wonderful time when I can shoot forth these seeds. I shoot them some distance. It is most exciting.

"'I hope you will always be able to recognize me—which means that I hope you will always be able to know who I am when my leaves are falling.

"'My leaves are broad and have straight veins. My leaves and bark go to make up my namesake in the medicine chest.

"'Yes, you've all heard of witch-hazel. Well, witch-hazel got its name from our family, for we make witch-hazel.

"'We're not the kind either that creatures turn up their noses at as they do at old castor oil and some of those disagreeable things.

"Yes, You've All Heard of Witch-Hazel."

"'We're not to be swallowed. No indeed. That's where we are so nice.

"'We don't go about with that manner which castor oil has as though to say:

"'"You'll be sick if you don't take us. Maybe we'll make you sick for a while, but in the end we will make you well."

"'We don't make anyone sick first. No, we're not like that. As I said, we don't want to be swallowed—I mean my Medicine Closet relative doesn't want to be swallowed.

"'Witch-hazel was never supposed to be swallowed. No, it can be used for burns and sprains and all kinds of sore places. But it is never to be swallowed. Never, never.

"'We help gentlemen after shaving—they can put our Medicine Closet Cousin over their faces and so keep their faces from feeling rough.

"'Oh, we're very useful, Homes, in my opinion, aren't homes without us.

"'We help headaches. We don't do people any harm either the way some horrid medicines will do.

"'No, we're cool and pleasant when some of the drops of the Witch-Hazel family are put upon a big handkerchief and then put upon the aching head.

"'No horrible swallowing of us! We're to be used outside and not taken inside!'

"So," said the Sandman, "you may see Witch-Hazel shrubs some day and you will know that it is from the witch-hazel plants that witch-hazel comes and that Miss Witch-Hazel is going to shoot forth seeds from her fruit pods this summer. And, too, that she is already looking forward to that day!"

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

Real deep-water sailors who go down to the sea in "wind-jammers" are as uneasy today and as confidently expect trouble when a dead body is on board as they did in the days when Shakespeare's sailor in "Pericles" insists that the body of the queen be thrown overboard as "the sea works high, the wind is loud and will not lie till the ship be cleared of the dead." And long before the age of Shakespeare or the "Prince of Tyre" the superstition existed.

Old Fuller says of the transportation of the body of St. Louis: "His body was carried back to France, there to be buried, and was most miserably tossed, it being observed that the sea cannot digest the crudity of a dead corpse, being a due debt to be interred where it dieth, and a ship cannot abide to be made a bier of."

Then there is the story of the attempt to carry the body of St. Cuthbert into Ireland, when the "sea worked high" and drove back the ship upon the English shore. And there are any number of ancient stories of the same sort. Should new and modern ones to like effect be required they can be picked up along the waterfront of any great seaport.

This superstition had its origin in the association of ideas, and Capt. Basil Hall, in his book of "Travels" in the early part of the last century, gives an excellent explanation of its genesis. He says: "This superstition is easily accounted for among men whose entire lives are passed, as it were, on the very verge of the grave, and who have quite enough, as they suppose, to remind them of their mortality without the actual presence of its effects." The knowledge of the silent passenger down below gets on the sailor's nerves, makes him apprehensive; and if a storm does come, what more natural than to ascribe it to the presence of the corpse?

ADDITIONS TO Y EQUIPMENT

Students Permitted to Make Own Choice of Extra Surricular Activities.

Extensive additions to the equipment used for teaching manual arts being made at the Columbus Y. M. C. A. Day school for boys and will be ready for use when the regular school term opens in September.

Included among the students in this school last year was Howard Graham, 257 N. Ogden Ave.

Besides manual arts, the boys had their choice of a number of other extra curricular activities including dramatics, sports, debating, choral and orchestral work, mechanical drawings, fundamentals of auto mechanics and free hand drawing. Three units of credit in one or more of these activities are taken in addition to regular, cultural or vocational subjects.

Athletics and journalism will doubtless be continued as major interests next year.

One of the most attractive and intricate creations developed in the manual arts last year was a diminutive ship model fashioned by Ted Berkheimer, 240 Mithoff St.

Students in this Y. M. C. A. Day school are permitted to make their own selection of extra curricular activities, but are required to be engaged actively in at least one of them for the entire term.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"AS HANDSOME AS AN ADONIS"

This phrase used to describe manly beauty or the similar expression, "He's a veritable Adonis," are quite familiar in everyday speech. We have them from the pages of mythological lore, where we find the story of Venus and Adonis.

Adonis was a mortal so fine and handsome that Venus herself was captivated by his manly charms. Leaving her Olympic heights to hear him company, she roamed the woods with him, and together they hunted animals. Always, however, Venus charged Adonis to beware of the wolf and the boar and the bear.

"Be brave toward the timid," she told him; "courage against the courageous is not safe. Beware how you expose yourself and put my happiness at stake. Attack not the beauty that nature has armed with weapons. Your youth and the beauty that charms Venus will not touch the hearts of lions and bristly boars!"

Adonis, however, was too brave and noble to heed this advice. At the first opportunity he wounded with his spear a wild boar, and the animal, thrusting out the weapon, leaped upon him and buried its tusks in his side, taking his life. Venus, aloft in her chariot, heard the groans of her beloved and hurried to the earth. Seeing his lifeless form bathed in blood she was beside herself with grief, and there made this vow:

"The spectacle of your death, my Adonis, and of my lamentation, shall be annually renewed. Your blood shall be changed into a flower."

And so saying she sprinkled nectar on his blood, from which within an hour there sprang up a flower, bloody in hue, which is said by the Europeans to be their red and purple anemone!

All throughout literature we find references to the handsome Adonis, and the manner in which he met his death. One of the most familiar is the following verse from Milton's "Comus":

Beds of hyacinth and roses
Where young Adonis oft reposes,
Waxing well of his deep wound
In slumber soft, and on the ground
Sadly sits th' Assyrian Queen.

(Copyright.)

Dr. D. K. Absolon, of Prague University, while investigating the contents of some ancient deposits in Czecho-Slovakia, uncovered the bones of several prehistoric cave bears. These animals were very large, some of them measuring twelve feet in height, and are said to have been more ferocious than the American grizzly bear. They are thought to have lived during the ice age.

A new world's record of three thousand consecutive bull's-eyes have been established by L. Samuel Moore, of Newton, Massachusetts. The record was made while firing from the prone position on a fifty- foot range, in the cellar of his home. He fired from eight in the morning until five o'clock in the afternoon, with a brief rest between every five-hundred shots and time out for lunch. The gun used was a .22-caliber rifle.

The camphor industry has been controlled for many years by the Japanese, because of their monopoly of the natural product. In the last few years, however, the process of making synthetic camphor from turpentine has been developed in England to such an extent that it is the price of synthetic camphor, rather than that of the natural product, which governs the market price. The production of synthetic camphor has been estimated at from one to three tons a day.

Professional trainers in England are advocating the banana as good food for athletes who wish to keep in trim. The banana is favored because it is easily digested and contains a higher percentage of calories than almost any other kind of fruit. It also carries the assurance of being absolutely germ-proof until the skin is removed.

The conditioning of air by electricity should offer a good opportunity to the electrical industry, says The Electrical World (New York). There are equipments and automatic controls to keep the air at any desired temperature, to keep it clean, to fix the humidity at any desired point, and to distribute the air in any amount and with any velocity. "In industries such as food products, textiles, chemicals, and building materials, air-conditioning and control equipment have been found a great asset in production."

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK—PERPETUAL CARE

THE SOFTENING INFLUENCE

The crudity that has surrounded burials in the past in most cases proved painful and trying, has been removed in MEMORIAL PARK. The old-fashioned custom allowing unsightly mounds of earth to lie in plain view of the grave and the practice of permitting workmen to set about their work before mourners have left, has been discarded for a better plan.

Every effort has been made to soften the ordeal. A tent shields the mourners; the walls of the grave are hidden by rich, heavy draperies; a noiseless lowering device is always used; carpets are laid from the roadway to the grave and on the lot around it. Every particle of earth taken from the grave is removed from sight; workmen do not appear until mourners have left and the entire service is under shelter.

CIVIL WAR VETS MEET AT ROME

95th Regiment to Meet for Seventh Time at Rome Today.

The meeting is open to all ex-soldiers and their friends. It will last all day. The morning will be devoted to a business session and in the afternoon Attorney General Edward C. Turner and Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson will address the meeting. There will be fireworks and a lawn fete in the evening.

Dr. T. S. Fox, local dentist, and family spent the week-end at Buckeye lake.

SPEEDY GROCERS

Business men just will tell jokes on one another and this one comes to us this week in connection with the Hilltop picnic. G. M. Painter, Ray Hauntz and M. L. Millikin, all Hilltop grocers, with Cap. Fagley of the fire department were returning from the country last week after buying the ox for the picnic barbecue when Mr. Painter was speeding his car at fifty miles per hour in order to pass a car and these words are reported to have come from Mr. Millikin as he clutched his seat, "If I could get a soft place to land I would get out of here." Evidently all grocerymen do not travel the same rate of speed.

Miss Mildred Perry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Perry, 90 S. Terrace St., and Mr. Thomas P. Wolfendale, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tomas Wolfendale, 1586 Manchester Ave., were united in marriage, Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 10, at 2 o'clock at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. R. E. Golladay, pastor of Grace Lutheran church. A reception for 45 guests followed. Miss Ruth Perry, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and Mr. Lewis Wolfendale, the bridegroom's brother, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Wolfendale left for a motoring trip of 10 days around the Great Lakes and Canada. They will reside at 90 S. Terrace St.

HILLTOP TEAM IS VICTORIOUS

The recreation ball team of Hilltop Lodge I. O. O. F. won the title last week by defeating National Lodge in the championship series. Under the guidance of Captain Reed and supported by a number of loyal and enthusiastic fans, the Hilltop team by consistent playing, defeated other I. O. O. F. teams of the city winning the cup. This team will be entered in the City Recreation Department's championship series to decide the best recreation ball team in the city.

Velma G. Currier, 45 Eldon Ave., left Sunday with friends for a two week's vacation at Wilsboro N. Y.

Grocery Leased

G. M. Painter, grocer at 2228 W. Broad St., has leased his business for a five month period to Neuenschwander & Cassel, grocers from Indianapolis. The new managers will follow the same policies as Mr. Painter did. Mr. Painter will be at the store until August 25, when he will leave for a vacation trip through the east.

BABY CONTEST BIG FEATURE

Three Silver Cups and Prizes to Be Given; Delinquents May Enter at Grounds.

Dr. J. T. Craddock announced Wednesday that all arrangements for the baby contest to be held at the Hilltop picnic next Wednesday, Aug. 24, are completed and that the outlook is good for a better contest than that of last year.

There will be no misunderstandings in any way as to unfair judging and every baby will be given the same inspections and physical examinations. The several judges will all be in line and the babies will be examined by each judge. Score cards will be taken down the line with each baby and when they have reached the end of the line it will take but a few minutes to figure the percentages and announce the winners in a short time. Many passed compliments upon the way the show was taken care of last year by saying it was more orderly than the one at the State Fair. Dr. Craddock says this year's contest will be taken care of much more easily than last.

Judging will probably start at 2:30 and the babies will be taken in as near the order given below as can be followed.

There will be a special registration at the picnic grounds the day of the picnic and all those late in registering their babies will have a chance to enter them at that time. Age limits are from 6 to 18 months inclusive.

Three beautiful silver cups have been ordered and other prizes will be given for second places. One cup will be given to the first prize baby girl, one to the first prize baby boy and the third to the mother having the best decorated baby carriage float in the baby parade to be held at the grounds that afternoon. Every mother is urged to have her baby carriage out in gala decorations. Children from 6 months to 3 years may enter the parade.

Those in charge of this part of the picnic are: Drs. Craddock, Cratt, Grace Jordan, Strausbaugh, E. P. Shepard, L. B. Turner, C. V. Wolfe.

The following babies have been registered in the two days set aside last week:

1. Jo Ann Minshall	11 mo.
2. Shirley Anne Deems	12 mo.
3. Viginia Faye Andrews	6 mo.
4. Marjorie Jean Zerbe	17 mo.

Miss Idella Reed, 681 S. Ogden Ave., spent the week-end in Marion, Ohio.

Announcement was made last week of the marriage of Miss Ruth Williams, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Williams of Mt. Sterling, Ohio, to Mr. Paul O. Linder, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Linder, 325 S. Hague Ave., which took place Saturday evening, May 28, at 8 o'clock in St. Aloysius rectory, Rev. Father R. E. Schwars officiating. Mr. and Mrs. Linder will reside in Columbus.

Moving Barber Shop

Mitchell's Barber shop, now located at 10 S. Park Ave., rear of Hilltop Bank will move across the street to 7 S. Park Ave., rear of Mykrantz Drug store.

Joan Elinor Primmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Primmer, 390 Turendon Ave., gave a lawn party Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 9 at her parents' home in compliment to her cousin, Dorothy James of Nelsonville. Other guests were: Betty and Nedra Morley, Margene Collins, Elmer and Danny Morley, Ralph and Bobby Rinehart, Richard Harlan Primmer, Billy James and Wayne Morgan. The tea was served by Miss Virginia McDarity, Miss Gladys Rinehart and Jessie Primmer.

MUSIC—AN ESSENTIAL FACTOR IN THE BEST DEVELOPMENT OF THE COMMUNITY.

Columbus Develops a Higher Citizenship Thru the Efforts of Progressive Firms Like Heaton's Music Store, 33 E. Long St.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

People are beginning to realize more and more every day that music is not a luxury, but a necessity in the best development of the individual and the community. In bringing the public to a fuller appreciation of this truth Heaton's Music store has ever been an important factor in Columbus. Not only has this firm kept the music lovers of the city informed of the changes that are constantly taking place in the musical world, but has at all times loyally supported all those movements which promised to promote the musical education of the community.

This concern's policy of merchandising, perhaps, more than anything else has helped it in its effort to popularize music. By building its business to large proportions it has solved the old problem of high selling cost. And its service in every department has been so systematized as to entirely eliminate any burdensome tax on the family income—even in the purchase of the finest piano. Hundreds of homes in this city would still be without music were it not for the successful application of this policy by the management to the business.

Supplying the musical needs for so large a following, it naturally follows that the firm's patronage is of a most cosmopolitan nature. It includes people from not only every locality in this part of the state, but from every station of life. All united by a common bond—the love of music. To handle intelligently such a trade calls for a high order of salesmanship. And this, one realizes, Heaton's Music store provides. Indeed, it is due to this in considerable part that their really notable success has been achieved. The clerk behind the counter, the piano salesman, the assistants who handle the various department activities, are not only experts in their line but have a tact and understanding of human nature that makes the firm's patrons, its friends. Whether you buy a single sheet of music, a talking machine record or a grand piano, you leave the store feeling that your wants have been specially considered, and your custom has been deeply appreciated.

The love of music is a deep-seated instinct in every race in every land. It has for ever been associated with the progress of mankind. Wars have been won to its martial strains. It has always exercised great influence upon the destinies of nations, and invariably has become interwoven with their national life. It is a fundamental need of childhood else there would be no cradle lullaby. It has been called the international language.

Recognizing the universal need of music and its ennobling influence Heaton's Music store has always maintained that every home should have in it some instrument thru which the musical emotions of our great artists could be portrayed. To bring about this desirable situation its efforts have been unceasing and they have not gone unrewarded. Throughout this community there are really few homes in which there are no producing or re-producing instruments. That this company was a leading factor in developing this widespread demand for music goes without saying.

Messrs. Otto B. and C. Wert Heaton, the proprietors, have a wide and varied experience in the music lines, and comprise that type of business men that help to make Columbus a good place in which to live.

The city has no firm whose prestige is higher, and no firm whose patrons are more truly its personal friends than Heaton's Music store. Its establishment is more than a music store. It is a civic factor, because the service it renders makes for civic unity.

A demonstration forest, the largest in the United States, has been presented to Syracuse University for the use of the State College of Forestry which is at Syracuse. The forest is in the Lake George section of the Adirondacks and extends for more than two miles on each side of the main highway between New York and Montreal. It will be open to sightseers as a sort of forest museum, where all the operations of forestry may be seen. Trees of all ages will be subject to "scientific forestry management, including reforestation through all its various phases from seed to mature timber, with particular attention to evergreens and soft woods as necessary to our timber supplies in the future," says a bulletin from the College of Forestry. Some of the finest white pines, of virgin growth, that remain in the East are growing in this forest. Mr. Charles Lathrop Park, president of the American Tree Association, has given this forest to the woods by students of forestry." the use and "an area for practical work in

NEW FORD CAR OUT SOON

Official Statement by Edsel Ford Says New Car Is Capable of 65 Miles per Hour.

An official statement was made recently by Edsel Ford, president of the Ford Motor Co., in regard to the new Ford car that is to appear on the market soon. The following is from Mr. Ford: "The new Ford automobile is now an accomplished fact. The engineering problems affecting its design, equipment and manufacture have all been solved.

"We know now exactly what this new car is. We have built a number of them and they have been performing even better than we had expected. Each part of the new car is tested under every condition we have been able to discover."

He further states that the new car can be driven for hours at an average speed of 50 miles per hour without discomfort to driver or passengers or without harm to motor and equipment. In a recent test one of the new Fords was driven 110 miles in two hours. The new car made 58.1 miles during the first hour of the trip. The statement from Ford says that the car has a pickup and getaway not to be surpassed by any car on the market except one.

A wide variety of color schemes and body designs have been decided upon. With the more than twenty years of automobile building for use all over the world this new product of the Ford plant is the best and most moderately priced car they know how to build.

"The building and testing of these first new cars is costing millions of dollars," says the president of the Ford factories. "But it will give us the complete assurance that we are offering the public a car tested and proven as a new car should be."

Exact date of the appearance of the new car has not been made but it is expected to be on the market in the next few weeks.

Percheron Horses

The coming State Fair, according to Charles V. Truax, director of agriculture, have some of the finest exhibits of horses ever seen in Ohio.

Among the many entries already made is one by W. H. Butler, Route 7, Columbus, Ohio, who up to the present time has entered a larger number of thoroughbred Percherons than any one exhibitor. His stable of horses consists of six stallions and five mares.

Franklin county has long been noted for its fine horses and this splendid exhibit of Mr. Butler will undoubtedly sustain the reputation of Columbus and Franklin county. Every visitor at the World's Dairy Exposition should take time to see this fine exhibit of thoroughbred Percherons.

It has always been said that the Europeans were a hard headed bunch and since the president of Liberia hit his head on the bridge under which he was passing up the Thames river and was not injured, we are just about certain of the fact. Now if we hear of that country uprising we will know where the trouble is. It will be that lump just taking effect.

Matching Parasols Now Enter Realm of Smart Accessories

It's the "upkeep" that counts, whether this be said of one's new motor car, one's mansion or bungalow, one's yacht or one's airplane, or one's costume if you please. "Upkeep" as applied to the latter sums up in one word—accessories. A simple matter perhaps, that of purchasing a frock, a coat, or both, but the responsibility does not end there. It is but at its beginning. The real challenge to good taste—and incidentally to one's pocketbook—rests in the matching up of headwear, neckwear, footwear, gloves, handbag, parasol, jewelry, boutonnierre and other items down to the minutest detail. Especially is this so, since fashion has become so arbitrary on the subject, accepting as an evidence of correct dress, nothing less than a perfectly appointed—a unified ensemble.

This demand for harmony in dress has resulted in genuine "get together" spirit among contourier, milliner, bootmaker, jeweler and others who contribute to the costuming of the fair sex. It is quite the proper thing to buy one's silk hose at one's favorite bootery, in order to insure a perfect match to one's slippers, and as likely as not the salesman will insist on showing you a handbag made of the selfsame leathers as the shoes you are considering.

This summer, matching parasols have especially entered into the scheme of things. Maybe it is a sunshade of scenic print silk to match the scarf and hat which milady chooses to perfect her ensemble such as is shown in this picture.

The latest is for handbag and parasol to show some relationship, perhaps in color, perhaps in material. Snakeskin trimmings are finding their way into the realm of woman's fashions most successfully. A new idea is the snakeskin handbag, with an interworking of the snakeskin in an accompaning umbrella. The illustration shows clever parasol and handbag sets, such as would add smartness to the street costume. Often a belt of snakeskin accompanies a parasol and handbag trimmed with the same.

Ribbon plays an important part in relating the hat to the parasol in that the identical kind used to trim the former also borders the latter. Ombre grosgrain ribbon is favored for this.

Playground Girls Entertain

The Glenwood sewing girls entertained their mothers with a tea Friday at the Glenwood playground.

Miss Miller, together with the girls, arranged a special program in which several of the girls took part. Mary Randall took charge and introduced the officers. Special talks were given as follows:

Welcome	Della Means
Why I Like to Sew	Charlene Rea
Joys of Sewing	Inez Buscher

One of the outstanding features was an exhibition of the sewing that the girls have completed this year. The girls have a right to feel proud of their work.

Alice Nutting is president and Myrtle Walter is secretary.

An easy loser takes from the winner two-thirds of the joy of victory.

According to a report by the American Library Association Committee on Library Extension, there are in the United States and Canada 6516 public libraries which serve 63,244,070 people. As all these volumes are censored and approved literature, the public is being helped beyond comprehension by these great institutions.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

CALLING HIM THE "PASTOR"

"Pastor" is a prosaic sounding word, and one in whose story we would look for the severe flavor of early religion rather than the element of poetry. Yet such is the perseverance of language. We rarely find what we expect. And in the origin of this term as it is used today as another name for the minister, we find no "thou shalt nots," theology but a poetic metaphor.

"Pastor" is derived from the Latin "pastor," which comes from "pastum," meaning to pasture or to feed. And who would not find poetry in the term which describes the minister as one who will feed us if we will but go to him? One may presume that it is hardly necessary to explain the metaphorical reference as spiritual feeding of his flock.

Flower Exhibit

Visitors at the Ohio State Fair this year will find no occasion to go to Florida or California to see either professional or amateur displays of flowers in a statement made by Charles V. Truax, director of agriculture at the spacious Fair grounds yesterday.

The entries from Franklin county rank among the finest in the state at the coming State fair, August 28th to September 3rd, 1927, which with the other displays from other counties will be one of the most beautiful and elaborate exhibits ever shown in Ohio.

Frank M. Bukey of Route 1, Station B, Columbus, Ohio, has entered exhibits in floral designs and cut flowers exclusively in the professional class, while Phyllis Bukey and C. H. Bukey, have both entered in the amateur class in cut flower displays.

Those who love the profusion of annual or perennial flowers that grow in the open or the pampered product of the finest greenhouses in Franklin county will fully enjoy the fragrant displays of the amateur and professional exhibitors at the World's Greatest Agricultural Exposition.

The Stuff That Builds Confidence

Selling cars that back up their story has won The Square Deal Auto Company an enviable reputation for reliability and made it an outstanding leader in the used car field.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

Without confidence in the order of things, in our fellow men, in our institutions, chaos would reign everywhere. Confidence is essential to all things worth while. No business could ever attain a lasting success without it. This is particularly true in the used car line. So the mere fact that the Square Deal Auto Company ranks among this city's most successful used car dealers proves it enjoys the confidence of the public. Without this it would have been impossible for it to have gained its present commanding position in the used car field.

Like every other reward, this reputation for reliability has not come to the firm by chance. On the contrary, it is the direct result of honest effort to keep faith with every customer. To conduct every transaction upon the highest plane of fairness and square dealing. Every car sold must be just as represented. Every car must also have in it un-used transportation more than equivalent to its purchased price. In brief, it must sustain the firm's reputation for real values in used cars. Values as records will show, that have made its former car purchasers among the concern's most valuable assets. Hardly a day passes that does not bring to its doors a prospective buyer sent by an old customer. Satisfied themselves, they tell their friends. This would seem to prove that good values do exist in used cars. Not only this, but that their owners still believe them good values after long use.

Today used car prices are, perhaps, the lowest ever known. Unusual values are not the exception. They are more nearly, the rule. Now, more than ever before quality automobiles are within the means of the average man. Those who do not own a car would do well to take advantage of his situation. You little know of the larger life that comes from the possession of an automobile, the freedom from inconvenience, the saving of valued time, the joys of the great out-of-doors. The automobile has become part of our national life, and the man who tries to get along without it, is placing a handicap on his whole field of activities.

In buying a car it is not necessary to pay the full amount at once. Neither is it necessary to buy a new car, or even advisable. There are men, and their number is legion, who always drive fine cars, yet never bought a new automobile in their lives. Observation has taught them that a good used car when bought from a reputable dealer like the Square Deal Auto Company is much the best investment. The first depreciation, the government tax, the delivery cost is always saved. Then too, one pays mighty little for the accessories generally found on a used car.

Excepting the automobiles in the factory and salesroom every car is a used car. That a car has been used and has given satisfaction is in itself a guarantee of value, and one of the conditions which the Square Deal Auto Co. attaches to its cars is that they have a larger potential service left in them than the final buyer will have to pay for in dollars and cents. Every car sold must not only be a good value from the management's viewpoint—the car itself must convince the new owner of its worth by actual performance. If it does not, it will be made right, and in a way 100 per cent satisfactory to the purchaser.

Messrs. F. B. Daniels and F. W. Simons, the proprietors, have a wide and varied experience in the business in which they are engaged, and are listed among this city's most progressive automobile men.

The Square Deal Auto Company is located at 240 East Town street.

MANY USES FOR OLD PHONOGRAPH NEEDLES

Old phonograph needles of the metal style will sing songs of other varieties when they have finished their tasks on the phonographs. There is no tack made which is so soft and so practical for use in framing pictures as is the phonograph needle. It has no rough edges or top to injure the back of the picture or mat, and its smooth, sharp point is easily pushed with the screw driver into the wood frame to hold the picture in place.

Needles placed in a fancy glass or china bowl take the place of the shot which holds the quill pen on the desk.

Both woolen and metal needles may be used for this purpose.

To clean a milk bottle in which the milk has soured and caked on the sides, a handful of steel phonograph needles, shaken up and down in the bottle, will do the work in a few seconds, scraping and cleaning it off. Warm water with a little soap added to the needles, of course, is necessary.

A spark plug held at the top of a test tube in which there is some gasoline and a handful of phonograph needles will be quickly loosened of its stubborn carbon after a few shakings.

(Copyright, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

The Japanese as a nation are famous at story telling, and there are many professional story-tellers, who make a living entertaining with their tales—both historical and fictitious, says the Missionary Review of the World. Miss Evelyn Oltmans tells how some of the Christian women use this gift in their work: "As the teacher tells a Bible story, the children listen spell-bound, with faces expectant and ears and eyes drinking in every smallest detail. Such touches of local color as the foreigner never could put in make the story vivid and real. The Japanese version of 'The Prodigal Son' parable is not, 'Bring out the best robe and kill the fatted calf.' Fatted calves are not generally served on such occasions in this land. So the father's command, 'Bring out the best kimono and heat the bath,' is quite the proper thing to say, and quite understandable. However, what American would think of putting it that way?"

Story-tellers with such a gift can do much to help the work of the missionaries.

Since 1870 the Negro population of the United States has more than doubled. The increase has not been so great as that in the white population, due to the coming of white immigrants, and to the fact that the Negro death rate is higher than that of the whites. However, the Negro death rate is being lowered rapidly. In 1920 the average length of life for the colored race was forty-one years. It is now about forty-six years. One out of every six Negroes dies of tuberculosis, but the rate was formerly even higher than that. Much has been done to help the Negro to "escape disaster in the shape of unnecessary and preventable disease" by improvement in economic and sanitary conditions, and by educating the Negro in regard to the modern public-health movement. Much remains to be done.

"Is Mr. Perkins at home?" inquired the caller.

"Which one, sir? There are three brothers living here," said the maid.

For a moment the caller looked puzzled, then he had an idea.

"The one who has a sister living in St. Louis," he explained.

WHAT IS PERPETUAL CARE?

PERPETUAL CARE is a sound, scientifically fixed method of maintaining each lot and grave in a beautiful condition forever without additional expense to the lot owner.

Cemeteries without PERPETUAL CARE become jungles soon after all lots are sold and often before.

Cemeteries with some lots PERPETUAL CARE and adjoining lots without such care soon become unsightly. Cemeteries of small acreage with promised PERPETUAL CARE dependent on some contingency will be found equally unsatisfactory.

Cemeteries with a PERPETUAL CARE PLAN which guaranteed that as each lot is sold the agreed amount of PERPETUAL CARE is immediately deposited in the Official Depository at which time the fund at once begins to earn and ever thereafter continues to earn the required upkeep is the only safe cemetery in which to inter your loved ones.

Why bury your loved ones in cemeteries with no or partial PERPETUAL CARE? Why not avail yourself of MEMORIAL PARK'S ASSURRED PERPETUAL CARE?

MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK IS THE LARGEST, EVERY LOT PERPETUAL CARE, BURIAL PARK serving Columbus and Franklin county.

Investigate PERPETUAL CARE METHODS and GUARANTEES in other cemeteries, then compare them with MEMORIAL BURIAL PARK.

HILLTOP CHURCH FOUNDER DIES

Rev. John G. Neff, Founder of Hilltop Church of God, Died Thursday

Rev. John G. Neff, 71, retired pastor of the Hilltop Church of God, died at his home, 86 N. Burgess Ave., last Thursday morning. His death was attributed to dropsy.

Rev. Neff was born and reared in Gahanna. He was for several years an evangelist and traveled in this country and Canada. He was pastor of a church in Colorado for about 15 years.

Surviving him are six sons, five daughters, a sister and 29 grandchildren.

PERMANENT SEWER RELIEF

Committee Charges Negligence in Care of Cleaning and Flushing Sewers.

The Executive Committee of the Hilltop Association for Permanent Sewer Relief met Monday night at the home of E. B. Eyler, 401 Midland Ave., and discussed their future course of action with their attorney. Reports were had relative to a number of investigations which have been made and it is said a number of these investigations show an alarming condition of inefficiency and neglect on the part of officials charged with the care of cleaning and flushing of sewers.

They also show that both storm and sanitary sewers in the Hilltop section are inadequate by reason of being overloaded by the addition of outlying districts not contemplated when the sewers were originally put in Activities looking toward permanent sewer relief and absolute refusal to cut downspouts as previously ordered by council were decided upon. Attorneys for the association advised them that city council is a legislative body and is without authority to order the enforcement of a city ordinance, that the function of council is to pass the ordinance and the enforcement rests entirely with the executive branch of city government.

It is intended to call a mass meeting of the entire Hilltop section and extend invitations to residents of other sections of the city who are similarly afflicted with inadequate sewerage. Additional attorneys are to be retained and a real fight put on if necessary. However, it is hoped that city officials will accede to their demands and grant them permanent sewer relief.

The finance committee has been instructed to push vigorously the solicitation of funds necessary to carry on the program and urges everybody now to give generously to this movement.

Gasoline Causes Fire

While filling the tank of a gasoline stove at her home at 602 S. Warren Ave. about 12:30 Friday afternoon, Mrs. R. H. Price did not notice that the stove was yet warm and the gasoline ignited, leaving the kitchen in a blaze. Mrs. Price was not burned and soon recovered from the shock. Firemen were called and soon extinguished the fire. The damage was confined to the kitchen.

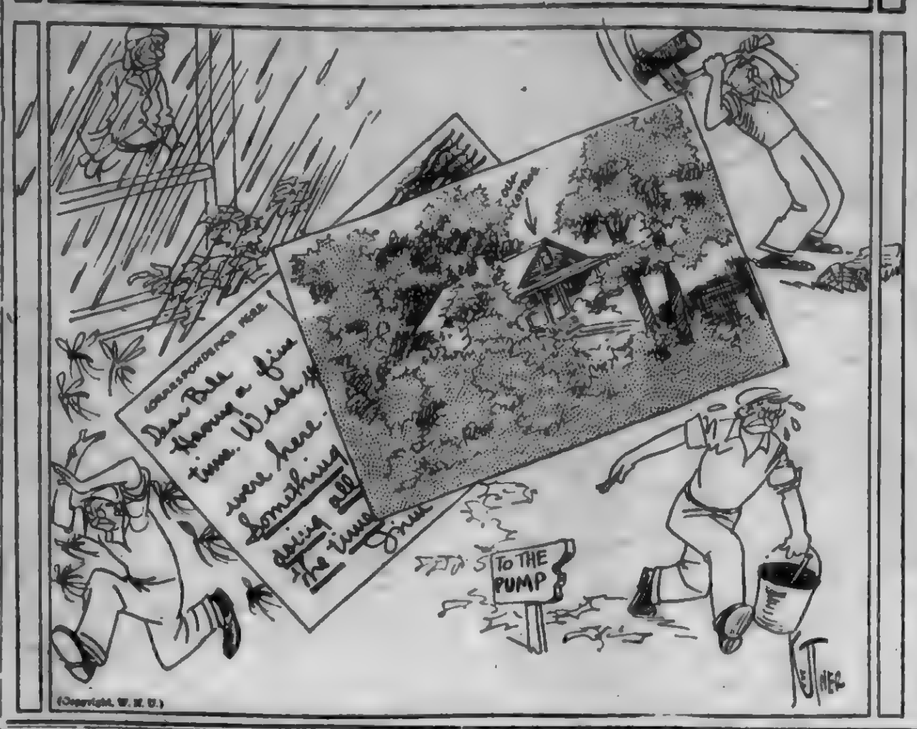
PARALYSIS CASE ON THE HILLTOP

Commissioner Beer Diagnoses Case of Billie Knipfer as As Infantile Paralysis.

One case of infantile paralysis has been reported in Columbus since the state epidemic developed, according to Dr. J. A. Beer, city health commissioner, but the case has not approached a serious stage.

The diagnosis was given by Commissioner Beer in the case of Billie Knipfer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul A. Knipfer, 32 N. Powell Ave.

Billie, who will be 3 years old Aug. 30, has been ill a week, with symptoms of paralysis in his legs, but otherwise he appears to be normal, his mother stated Tuesday.



Since he became so afflicted, the boy has developed no temperature, and he has eaten and slept normally, showing scarcely any of the symptoms of a sick child, according to Mrs. Knipfer.

The Knipfer home is quarantined. Dr. Beer said. The only other thing that can be done, if other similar cases appear, he said, is to isolate them and warn the public.

The total infantile paralysis cases reported to the state health department since Aug. 1 reached 137 as result of 41 additional ones coming to the the department Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Houdasheit and son, Kenneth, are spending the week with relatives on the Hilltop.

CHILDREN MAY SEE FAIR FREE

Playground Carnival to Be Staged Aug. 29—Mothers and Children Free.

The sixth annual playground carnival is to be staged at the Ohio State fair next Monday, Aug. 29. All children and mothers will be admitted free at the fair ground street car gate on Eleventh avenue.

All children are to report at their playgrounds at 8:30 a. m., at which time they will leave for the fair grounds. There will be special rates at 25c each for mothers and children who wish to see the rodeo that morning.

At 12:30 all children will assemble in the coliseum and the carnival will begin at once. All children are urged to attend this event. There will be events for both boys and girls. Further information may be had by seeing the playground instructors.

This will probably be the only opportunity for children to see the rodeo and mothers are urged to take advantage of this special children's day.

Miss Helen Steward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Steward, 147 N. Park Ave., was united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p. m. to Mr. Roy A. Calendine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin L. Calendine, 595 S. Warren Ave. The ceremony was performed at the home of Rev. George F. Barber, 74 Highland Ave., who officiated. The only attendants were, Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Binns, a bride and groom of July 2nd. Mr. and Mrs. Calendine are at home to their many friends at 147 N. Park Ave.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kettler, 132 N. Burgess Ave., have returned home after spending two weeks at Cleveland, Ohio.

A Big Turnout

Hilltop had an exciting time last Friday. A passerby may have thought this was the home of the Ohio state fair or a reunion of all the Smiths in America. It was neither. It happened to be a day when the Hilltop children were lined up for another free show and about two hours later four fire wagons made their way to the Hilltop, calling out several hundred more people all along the way from Wheatland avenue to Hague avenue. It takes a free show for the kiddies and a fire for both grownups and children to really make possible an attempt at sizing up our part of the population of Columbus.

Miss Dorothy Jacques and Mr. King Sutton, son of Mrs. Robert G. Otto, 389 S. Richardson Ave., will be united in marriage at 8 p. m., Thursday at the residence of the parents of the bride-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Dorrel Jacques, 74 S. Terrace St., with Rev. W. C. Hickey officiating. Attending the couple will be Mr. and Mrs. Carl Taylor, Miss Marylove Jacques, sister of the bride-elect, and Mr. E. F. Pritchard. The couple will reside at 295 Marshall Ave.

Messrs Samuel Pool, C. E. Wilson and Lee Roth, managers of Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., are attending the territorial meeting in West Baden, Ind. They will return home Sunday.

Hilltop Movie Girl in Show at Rivoli

Barbara Worth, former Hilltop girl, comes to the Rivoli theater Saturday in the picture "The Prairie King," with Hoot Gibson.

While living on the Hilltop about four years ago she was Miss Verna Dooley, but when she entered moving pictures at Hollywood she began her career under the name of Barbara Worth. She lived on Richardson avenue when last in Columbus.

Miss Anna Rudy, 256 Eldon Ave., accompanied by the following girls, Miss Ruth Miller, Edna Tucker and Pearl Rhodes of Longview avenue, and Miss Rhodes' guest, Miss Florence Darling of Grand Rapids, Mich., returned home Tuesday after spending two weeks at Fenton, Long Lake, Ann Arbor, Detroit, Mich., and Toledo, O.

TO HOLD FAIR AT HILLIARDS

Fourteenth Annual Franklin Co. Fair Is Scheduled for Sept. 15, 16 and 17.

Franklin County Agriculture Society will hold its fourteenth annual fair on the grounds of the society at Hilliards on Sept. 15, 16 and 17. There will be both day and night programs.

Arch A. Alder, secretary of the fair association, announces that the fair this year promises to be the biggest one yet held at Hilliards. The races for this year are to be better than any held on that track in the past years.

There will be agricultural exhibits of every variety and a large display of dairy products and a livestock exhibit. All the latest in farm machinery and implements will be on display.

One of the big features will be the horseshoe pitching contest in which a purse of $75 will be given the winner. Regulation shoes will be used and amateurs only may enter.

Mrs. Ditrick, 125 N. Park Ave., entertained the Amity Embroidery club at her home, Thursday afternoon, Aug. 11. The following members were present: Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Shields, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Park and the hostess. Mrs. Homer Richter and Mrs. C. F. Ditrick were guests of the club. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Shields, 480 Catherine St.

Large Crowd Sees Buster and Tige

Nearly 1400 tickets were given out for the free show at the Rivoli theater last Friday sponsored by Donehue's Brownbilt Shoe store. The house was filled to capacity and most seats even held two while it is estimated that some 300 other children were unfortunate and did not get inside the doors.

It was the occasion when Buster Brown and his dog Tige, nationally known for their tricks and fun making, made their appearance on the Hilltop through the efforts of Mr. Donehue. In addition to having Buster and Tige in person two reels of comedy were also flashed on the screen. A nice pair of Buster Brown shoes were given to the holder of the lucky ticket.

This is the only stop Buster and Tige will make in Ohio this year. They went from here to New York.

MAN KILLED BY TRACTION

Suicide Is Apparent When John Davies Dives in Front of Traction Car.

It is believed that because he was out of work and in ill health are the reasons why John H. Davies, 32, 411 Midland Ave., threw himself in front of a fast moving east bound I., C. & E. traction car near 2940 West Broad St. Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 17.

He ran from the sidewalk directly in front of the car and was dead when the car crew reached him. Mrs. Fred Farley, 2505 Sullivant Ave., was driving by when the accident happened. She says the man ran in front of her car and held his hands above his head as if diving and went directly into the path of the traction car. The wheels of the car did not run over him.

Davies had visited his uncle, John Evans, on West Broad street, several blocks west of Hague avenue, and was probably on his way home.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Davies; a brother, Thomas Davies, and a sister, Mrs. Nellie Randall, all of 411 Midland Ave.

Mrs. Carl N. Wisker, 240 S. Warren Ave., entertained with a tea Friday afternoon, Aug. 19, in honor of her niece, Mrs. Clara Harnish of Dayton, Ohio, who was visiting her sister, Mrs. Ira Miller, 325 Nashoba Ave. Miss Harnish spent the first part of the week in Detroit and Chicago and returned to Dayton Sunday. Guests at the tea were: Mrs. Adam Fisher, Mrs. Dyke O'Day, Mrs. Bert Delig, Mrs. Donlad Lear, Mrs. Carlos Shaffer, Mrs. Ivan Sebring and Mrs. Ira Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Guyer, of Toledo, made a short visit with his brothers, F. J. Guyer, 222 N. Terrace St., and B. A. Guyer, 2435 Steele Ave.

Philathea Picnic

The Philathea class of Glenwood M. E. church held their annual picnic last Thursday at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Stevenson near Canal Winchester. For those who were there, no words need be said as to the genuineness of the event. But for those who were absent we can only say we are sorry, for it is difficult to relate the details with the enthusiasm we feel.

Most folks arrived at 11:30 and dinner was served at 12:30. The table fairly groaned under the weight of its innumerable goodies. Following dinner, games were played and a very youthful spirit of competition prevailed. Prizes were awarded winners and everyone enjoyed the candy treat.

The committee worked most efficiently and deserve real thanks for their efforts.

Election of officers will be held at the September meeting, so during a very brief business session the nominating committee was appointed as follows: Mrs. Sandusky, chairman; Mrs. Glick and Mrs. Herbert.

Fifty-two enjoyed the day spent with the Stevensons and it was with sincerest appreciation of their hospitality that the folks deported.

Mr. and Mrs. Grenoble, 94 N. Eureka Ave., returned from a week's trip to Lorain and Cleveland, where they were visiting Mrs. Grenoble's nephews and nieces.

Postpone Baby Contest

Officials in charge of the baby contest to have been held at the Hilltop picnic yesterday decided at the last minute to postpone the event until further notice on account of health conditions. Further notice will be given as to the time of the contest.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sherman and son Dick, of Delaware, Ohio, attended the funeral of Mrs. Sherman's father, J. G. Neff, of 86 N. Burgess, which was held last Sunday at the Hilltop Church of God.

BUSINESS MEN HOLD BANQUET

Chief of Police French Speaks Before Hilltop Men and Women—Many Present.

About two hundred were present at the banquet of the Hilltop Business Men's Association last Wednesday evening at the Westgate restaurant. This special meeting was given in honor of the wives of the business men.

Following the dinner, W. L. Millikin, toastmaster, instroduced Chief of Police French, who spoke on the problems of the police department. Mr. French says the police department of Columbus is not adequate for a city of this size but that he is very well satisfied with the work and believes we have a personell that may compare with any in the country. He paid a high tribute to the policeman.

Chief French, in talking of the crime problems of the country, said he believed it more logical to have an expenditure of money to prevent people from becoming criminals than to spend the money in getting the man after the crime has been committed. "The majority of the criminals are victims of economic or social maladjustment. For this reason we must bring attention of the people as to how the other half lives." He states that the majority of the delinquents of the juvenile court are from broken homes caused by divorce. Chief French says the Hilltop burglar will be caught and that more protection is now offered to this section. On the night of the first robberies a few weeks ago, there was but one policeman on duty west of the river. This is the reason he is interested in increasing the force

Acting Mayor Scott Wehe also expressed his desire to always be able to discuss civic matters with the organizations and the individuals and extended an invitation to all to visit the meetings of the city council.

Red roses were presented to all the ladies by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Yost.

Lifts $2

C. E. Heimbrecht of the Hilltop Furniture Co. reports that a negro woman with the pretense of buying entered his store Wednesday and took $2 from him. He did not miss the money until after she had left.

Mrs. W. B. Smith and children Helen and George, 263 S. Terrace St., have returned from a pleasant motor trip to Lakeside.

ELKS TO GATHER AT CEDAR POINT

Ritualistic Contest Between a Number of Lodges Feature of Program.

The annual reunion of the members of the Ohio Elks' association, together with their families and friends, will be held at Cedar Point from Aug. 20 to Sept. 2. The opening exercises will be held on Tuesday evening with an address by Congressman James T. Begg.

Grand Exalted Ruler John F. Malley of Boston, Mass.; Past Grand Exalted Rulers August Hermann and John G. Price will be present during the week of the convention and a ritualistic contest is to take place between a number of lodges for the John G. Price cup.

On Tuesday a steamer excursion to Canadian waters will be a feature. Wednesday will be ladies' day with trips to points of interest including steamer rides to Put-in-Bay and the islands of Lake Erie. The parade will be held on Thursday morning and there will be a bathing beauty pageant that afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Coliseum at Cedar Point.

Judge Charles L. Justice of the Third District Court of Appeals is president of the Ohio Elk Association and John W. Ranney of Columbus, secretary, and these officials predict the greatest state Elk reunion ever held. Excursion rates will be given on all railroads.

B. M. BOWLERS ORGANIZED

To Have Eight-team League—Officers Elected—Bowling Starts Sept. 8.

An eight-team league will represent the Hilltop Business Men's Association in bowling this year. At a meeting Friday, Aug. 19, at the bowling alleys, the following officers of the bowling league were elected: C. M. Painter, president; Lawrence Persons, secretary, and Frank Morgan, treasurer.

League bowling will start Sept. 8 at 8 p. m. The schedule of the teams and order in which they play has not yet been arranged.

The following teams have been entered in the league: Orebaugh Real Estate, West Side Lumber Co., Painter Grocery, Westgate Electric, Budd's Barbers, B-B Hardware, Millikin Grocery and Hilltop Record.

Plans for a banquet at the end of the season were discussed, but nothing definite was settled upon.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Neff and family of East Canton, Ohio, were called to this city last Friday by the death of Mr. Neff's father, the late Rev. J. G. Neff, of 86 N. Burgess.

FRANKLIN COUNTY AT THE STATE FAIR

The coming Ohio state fair bids fair to exceed all previous fairs in the confident assertion of Charles V. Truax, director of agriculture, who bases his judgment of the increased number of entries as shown by the record of the entry clerks.

Franklin county has a large number of exhibits, many of which are not available at this time, but in addition to those already reported the following is a partial list of the exhibitors:

The Westbrook Farm, Westerville, one short horn; eight large Yorkshires.

Raymond Dillinger, Galloway, one Percheron.

Fred Dillinger, Galloway, nine Poland Chinas.

Alfred Spring and Son, Galloway, five Poland Chinas.

G. W. Koger, Galloway, five Hampshires.

O. S. U., 11 large Yorkshires.

J. S. and F. C. Smith, Groveport, 16 Duroc Jerseys.

Harold Hard, Camp Chase, Eight Poland Chinas.

Dr. W. G. O'Hara, Camp Chase, 3 Jersey cattle.

D. J. Schall, Columbus, one Holstein.

O. S. U., Columbus, nine Holsteins.

Angie Brundige, Worthington, two Holsteins.

C. A. Sherwood, Hilliard, one Guernsey.

Harry Wilkinson, Hilliard, six Poland China hogs.

The state will have many displays, the baby contest, the rodeo, the aeronautic display, the 100-piece band, the art and machinery exhibits and the boys' and girls' club work will all add to the stock exhibits and make the Ohio State fair the world's greatest agricultural exposition.

The Past Officers club of Westwood Pythian Sisters will hold their next meeting on Friday, Aug. 26, at the home of Mrs. Homer DeLong, 210 S. Terrace St.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church will have their regular monthly meeting at 2 p. m., Thursday, Sept. 8, at the church. All ladies of the church are welcome.

The Past Officers club of Westwood Pythian Sisters entertained their husbands and families with a picnic at shelterhouse No. 1 Riverside drive. Contests of all kinds, ball, horseshoe and boat rides were enjoyed. But best of all was the lovely spread which was a sight to behold. Was there plenty to eat? Say boy, why they even had ice cream and cake. If you don't believe me ask the following who enjoyed it: Mr. and Mrs. Ed Dolby, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Baird, Mr. and Mrs. William Mayer, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Finley, Mr. and Mrs. John Bieber, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Tanner, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Botkin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hill, Mr. and Mrs. John Miller, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Crawford, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bieber, Mrs. Herald McClain, Misses Mary, Ruth, Ellen Mae, Grace Crawford, Helen, Corinne Miller, Dorothy, Marsella McClain, Mary Martha Botkin, Kathlene Percy; Messrs. Charles, James Miller, Ralph L. Gordon, Junior Bieber, T. J., Everett Hill. All departed at a late hour to meet next year on the same date, Aug. 14 It is hoped that those who did not get to enjoy this picnic will be sure to come next year.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Bauman, 263 S. Burgess Ave., entertained with a dinner party, Thursday evening, Aug. 18. Those present were: Judge and Mrs. S. Southard, Mrs. Lillian Roberts and Mr. Robert Miles of Bellefontaine; Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Williams and Mrs. Jesse Jenkins of Youngstown; Mrs. N. W. Sexton of Lisbon; Dr. C. H. Keim, and the host and hostess.

GROWING WITH COLUMBUS

As the City Has Grown, So Has the Acme Laundering Company Extended Its Service, Enlarged Its Facilities and Broadened Its Scope of Activities—A Laundering Establishment That Ranks With the Leaders in the Business.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In every line of business in every city, there are always a few firms which, because of fair dealings, progressive ideas, modern equipment and superior service—lead in their particular line, and among such concerns in this city the Acme Laundering Company is a noteworthy example.

This well-known laundry is one of the best equipped industries in Columbus and the general excellence of its work has won for it a large following. Equipped with machinery representing the very latest ideas in the business, and employing only expert help has enabled the firm to render a service that apart from being distinctly satisfactory, has caused its name to become a synonym for cleanliness to housewives throughout this city.

Cotton and linen clothes have been laundered for many centuries. Long before the birth of Christ the women of India and Egypt went down to the banks of the Ganges and the Nile to wash their clothes on a rock, rub them, beat them and then carry them home. This was perhaps the beginning of laundry business, so you see it had a humble beginning like most great industries. Today it is quite different, and at this modern laundry the latest machinery is in operation to wash comfort into your clothes as well as by scientific methods to actually lengthen their "life."

The Acme Laundering Company has a fully equipped family service department, and that the housewife finds its use both economical and satisfactory is best attested by its many patrons. In this department, like the others of the plant, only the most approved methods are used, thus prolonging the life of the linen, and at the same time removing the worry of wash day for its users.

Anyone unfamiliar with up-to-date laundering methods would do well to visit this plant. It will prove not only interesting but highly instructive, and will reveal this fact—that the old-fashioned rubbing, wringing and drying method as employed in the home is very disastrous to clothes as compared with the manner in which clothes are laundered here. This modern process, the result of long investigation, not only reduces wear to a minimum, but in many instances conserves the fabric. Visitors are always welcome at the Acme Laundry and are accorded every courtesy by the management.

This firm is affiliated with the Mellon Institute—an organization which is constantly striving to improve laundering methods. Research of this kind not only benefits the industry that so employs it, but the laundry patrons materially profit through the exposure of fraudulent cloths, and the dissemination of actual facts in laundering methods.

Messrs. E. J. Durham and D. T. Logan, heads of the company have a wide and varied experience in the business in which they are engaged, and are generally to be found taking the first step forward on any project which promises to result in the advancement of the laundry business.

The main offices and plant of the Acme Laundering Company is located at 454 East Main street.

Excelsior!

"My mule is hungry," the old man said;
And low the old negro bent his head.
A furniture store saved the day
By supplying the mule with, instead of hay—
Excelsior!
The lean old mule thinking wood to be hay,
Ate and ate and passed away.
When asked why the old mule died,
With these sad words the darky replied—
Excelsior.

An old darky, poor in worldly goods, recently borrowed a mule, poor physically. Feeling that he could not buy food for the mule, the old man went down to a neighboring furniture store and secured a bountiful supply of excelsior from the waste box behind the building. He then covered the mule's eyes with a pair of home-made green glasses and the mule, undoubtly deceived as to the appearance of the excelsior, munched this singularly appetizing food. Then he was led down to a public watering trough, there to refresh himself, principally because it was free.

But one morning all was not so well, for the mule awoke with a bad case of indigestion, halitosis, and practically every ailment a mule might be subject to from a diet of excelsior. A veterinary pronounced it a case of poisoning from wood alcohol and along toward noon, the mule passed on to where all good mules go, there to find his reward in elysian fields of clover and rivers of nectar.

Moral: Wood is a good building material, but not for building mules.

A Practical Twine Holder

For wrapping the children's lunch and other packages an ever-ready ball of string in a holder is a greater convenience than ordinarily realized, though few housewives go to the expense of purchasing a twine holder. If the funnel is left hanging on the wall with the ball of twine held in it it will serve the double purpose of funnel and holder.

For work around the home garage, under the car, and around the motor, the funnel makes a good electric light reflector, after running the wire through the spout. The wide part prevents the bulb from breakage and also throws the light in the place desired.

Pictures may be hung without a ladder if the hook is placed in the spout of a funnel, and a long pole inserted in the wide end to raise the hook to the molding. After the hook is up the wire can be easily slipped over the hook by the pole alone.

A funnel makes a good protection for a fumigating candle in disinfecting a closetful of clothing which might catch on fire if the open flame were left to burn. Place it over the dish, and only the fumes rise up, leaving the flame safely covered.

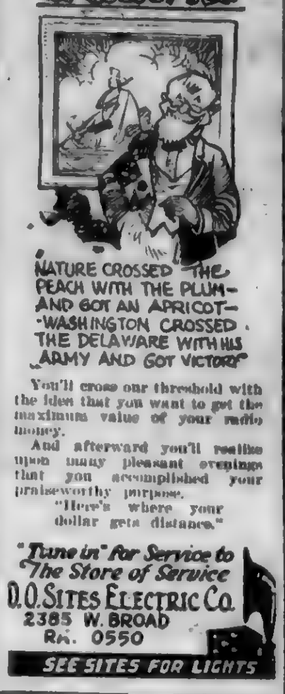
HILLTOP BOYS AT "Y" CAMP

Lake Mac-O-Chee Camp, Near Bellefontaine, Popular Place for Young Men.

Thomas Bailey, 70 Wisconsin Ave.; Walden Dupuis, 183 S. Burgess Ave.; John Michaelis, 37 S. Wheatland Ave.; and John Stevens, 152 S. Burgess Ave., are the Hilltop representatives at Camp Alfred L. Willson, Columbus Y. M. C. A. camp for boys on Lake Mac-O-Chee near Bellefontaine.

Walden Dupuis is also a student at boys, new downtown school inaugu- the Columbus Y. M. C. A. Day school for rated last year at the central Y. M. C. A. as the fifth unit of the Y. M. C. A. schools which had formerly included the preparatory school, law school, commerce school and trades-engineering school. The sixth unit has been added this summer in the form of the new evening junior college to open Sept. 6th.



Two of the outstanding features of the present season at Camp Willson are the securing as one of the leaders, Ralph Allen, fullblooded Pawnee chieftain, of Denubion university; and the establishment of the first camp summer school in the state by the Columbus Y. M. C. A. Day school whose equipment and staff were transferred to the huge new $40,000 club house, Pettigrew hall, dedicated at Camp Willson this June.

The rather unusual idea of correlating studies and sports so that tennis and trigonometry, science and swimming are so interrelated as to make the boys better sportsmen and better students as well, is being worked out in this camp summer school which will conclude Aug. 19th, coincident with the end of the fourth period.

There will be one other period for boys, from Aug. 19 to Sept. 3. After that there will be a period for men.

"If books and art works may be made accessible to the public without charge in libraries and art museums, why should not music enjoy the same democratic advantage?" asks Reylinova. And so they have drafted a bill to present before the Prussian legislature, providing for the erection of a Museum of Music which will be open to anyone, with no admission except on special days, for the sake of making a part of the expenses. They hope to have one concert hall for symphony concerts, another for chamber music, a third for vocal music and in the fourth, lectures on the history of music and criticisms will be held. There will be rooms, too, where the best concerts of the world may be heard over the radio, and perhaps some phonograph records may be available for others.

Gingham Ensemble for Street and Sports Is Fashion's Latest

What a thrill the smart set is getting out of cotton goods these days. Imagine Paris indorsing the gingham ensemble for street and sportswear. Well, that is just what has happened and we in America are quite taken with the idea, too. These two-piece and three-piece ginghams at once struck a note of popularity, for they were just what were needed in the summer ward robe.

All the fashionable world is color struck this season, which is another "reason why" stylists recognize in gingham a medium directly adaptable to current modes. Always cool and fresh looking, never lose color in the tub, never lose color in the sun, no wonder gingham has become a favorite for fashionable midsummer wear.

The gingham ensemble in the picture bespeaks a latest style trend. In this one-piece dress with short jacket milady finds comfort, style and plentiful color. This model has a finished sleeve that can be set in either the coat or the dress in the "twinkling of an eye." Any woman can see the advantage of this. There is quite a rivalry just now between the sleeveless jacket and the sleeveless dress. As pictured, the sleeveless frock wins, the coat being sleeved—which is a thoroughly practical arrangement.

A reversible gingham in a novelty check of orange and blue on a white ground is selected for the making of this gown. Where the check is orange on one side it is blue on the other. There is no right or wrong side. This gives an excellent opportunity for self-trim. In this instance the reverse of the fabric forms a clever trim for the collar, revers, cuffs and other details with the dress made up accenting the blue, while the coat emphasizes the yellow. The whole is finished with a piping in one-tone blue gingham to match the check.

Here's an interesting item to remember when buying gingham for the new ensemble you are planning—for every designed gingham there comes a one-tone weave for trimming.

Substantial Dish Made From Any Kind of Bean

Pea beans are probably the best kind for baking, but a very good, substantial dish may be made from any sort of beans—white, navy, lima, soy and others. Tomato sauce or tomatoes served with any kind of baked beans will greatly enhance their flavor. Beans supply protein as well as a large proportion of starch, but the protein is not so efficient a kind as that of meat, milk, and eggs. It is well, therefore, to serve a milk or egg dish at the same meal with beans. For example, a cream soup, or a custard dessert of some sort. Most of the dried beans are good sources of vitamine B, but as vitamines A and C are also needed these must be furnished by other foods, especially by vegetables, salads, and milk dishes.

A pint of dried beans will make a large potful, and the seasonings we are giving are in proportion to this amount. Soak the beans overnight and then cook gently until they can be pierced but are not mushy. The skins will break easily. Put the beans in the pot with a quarter-pound piece of well-streaked salt pork in the middle, rind side up. The rind should be scored. If you are not using meat, mix about six tablespoonfuls of butter with the beans as you put them in the pot. Add the seasonings, blend with a little hot water. Use a tablespoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of mustard, two tablespoonfuls of molasses or sugar, and a tablespoonful of minced onion, if you like it, or a small onion cut in slices. Bake the beans in a very moderate oven from six to ten hours. Add a little boiling water from time to time but never enough to bring the water beyond the top of the beans. Keep the lid on the beanpot until the last hour, then uncover and allow the top beans to become nicely browned.

CHAPTER I

Brandon Cathewe

Once upon a time there lay at Liverpool a great and seemly ship. A young man, sartorially correct from his tan shoes to the panama on his perfectly modeled head, looked over her rail. Suddenly he became conscious of the odor of violets. It came from behind; so he turned his head.

Supposing your consciousness had been filled for hours with the beauty of a woman's face. Say that you had seen it but once for the duration of a dinner hour, at a table half way across the huge dining-room of the Savoy, and you knew that you would never forget it.

Supposing you had built an airy romance during that hour; an adventure wherein you rescued her from an unknown danger, fell in love with her and married her. Supposing you had been all alone in mighty London that night, with no place to go, with a heart which was heavy with bitterness because fate had dealt you marked cards in the game of life and cheated you abominably. And then, by a mere twist of the head, to see that face again but three spans away from yours!

Some men are fortunate: they know exactly what they want the moment they see it. Instantly this young man knew that one of life's great problems was solved. This was The Girl. Somewhere, somehow, he was going to meet her.

She was lovely. That was the word. He knew that lovely was a universe all by itself; for it embodied beauty and intellect, valor and tenderness youth and purity.

The westering sun was in her eyes; thus, she was unconscious of the amazed scrutiny of the young man in front. She saw only a nebulous shadow. Immediately he called her the girl with the golden eyes.

This, however, was only a flight of poetical fancy. As a matter of fact, her eyes were intensely blue; but shooting out from the pupil to the rim of the iris were fine little threads of gold such as one sees in lapis lazuli.

The young man had no plan regarding his future procedure; he would need an hour or two of solitude for the formation of this. He was going to marry her in the end; that much was definitely settled. That she might have her own views on the subject was of no vital importance.

He hurried off to his first-class cabin, stowed his luggage, changed linen; then, a straw suitcase under his arm, took up his quarters in the steerage.

For he had work to do, serious work. He could have lived like the other first-class passengers, in idleness and luxury; but he was always in earnest, whether he played or worked, as will be seen.

For six days he was determined to live among the steerage passengers. To acquire the material he needed necessitated contact, not casual observation.

That night as he leaned against the rail—a thousand ineffectual plans having been scrutinized and rejected—he permitted a whimsical idea to enter his head. He raised his face toward the summer moon and laughed.

Why not? To approach the affair from a novel and unexpected angle; no winding in and out, no foreground to traverse with hesitant step. To take the plunge without bothering to feel the water with his fingers. The idea appealed to all that was romantic in him.

Her name was Elizabeth Mansfield, and they probably called her Betty. She was also the daughter of Dunleigh Mansfield. That put a double wall around her, millions and social prestige; tremendous obstacles which should have frightened him and chilled his ardor, whereas they but filled him with elation.

This young man was a crusader, with an ideal quite as lofty as that of Peter the Hermit and Walter the Penniless. He did not sally forth joyously with chanting and banners; he would not have gone forth at all but for the white honesty of his soul. He had inherited this obligation; it had been thrust upon him without asking his leave. He was a Crusader by force of circumstance.

As he climbed into his bunk there was but one idea in his head—to carry the outpost, her father, by storm. Two things were possible; either Mansfield would listen or he would call for a deck steward.—Anyhow, to put it to the touch!

* * * * * * * * *

Dunleigh Mansfield might have passed for an elderly bean in a Pinero drama; a fine, courtly figure of a man, with a cold, hawklike countenance, quite handsome, with scarcely a gray hair in his head, though he was fifty.

He was standing alone, that sunny morning, in the corner where the cross-rails joins the port.

"Mr. Mansfield?"

The iron magnet turned. He saw a hatless young man in a white cotton shirt, open at the throat, shiny blue serge trousers that bagged at the knees, and a pair of soiled tennis shoes.

"I am Mr. Mansfield"—coldly.

"I wish the honor of paying court to your daughter."

Mansfield was not quite sure he had heard aright. "I beg your pardon?"

The young man repeated his astounding request.

Stormy words burned the tip of them back because the face he looked into was quite as handsome and hawklike as his own. Human faces were Dunleigh Mansfield's books. He recognized this type; the brow and eye of a dreamer, the nose and jaw of a fighting man.

But Betty?—he asked the honor to pay court to Betty? The infernal impudence! The thing was to get rid of the bounder without creating a scene.

"You don't look insane, young man. Are you offering me a pleasantry?"

"No, Mr. Mansfield.: I was never more serious."

"You have perhaps met me somewhere, and I have forgotten?"

"I have never met you before."

"You have met my daughter, then?"

"I have only seen her twice."

"Ah!" said Mansfield, as if this information cleared the air considerably. This was some kind of a joke, possibly a fool wager. Why not temporize and find out what lay behind this weird encounter?

"You might tell me something about yourself, before we proceed," he suggested.

The young man sensed the irony, the mockery. Two little points of fire appeared in his eyes.

"I am called Brandon Cathewe. By profession I am a writer." He hesitated for a moment. "I have a little money."

"A writer—with a little money. I should say that that was quite fortunate."

Suddenly there leaped into Mansfield's clod brain an idea, savage and ironic. Later, he and Betty would have a hearty laugh over this idea. The impulent bounder!

"Brandon Cathewe," he mused. "That has an Irish lilt. So you wish to pay court to my daughter—object matrimony!"

"With your permission."

"It is needless to ask if you are in love with my daughter."

"Quite needless. I am."

"The result of one meeting?"

"I have a happy faculty of knowing what I want."

"And of getting it?"—mockingly.

"Not always, to be sure, but generally. No doubt it sounds ridiculous to you; but the two times I have seen your daughter convince me that she is the one woman. Her beauty is the least of her."

An odd statement, thought Mansfield. "You have heard of the city of Bannister?"

"Very few people in America have not."

"Very good. I grant you permission to pay court to my daughter—conditionally. I'll wave my right to inquire about your family and your bank accounts. My terms are, Go to Bannister and make good; then come to me. I will introduce you personally to my daughter, provided she is not married by that time. Until you make good, you are not to seek to meet her. She is not to know that such a person as—er—Brandon Cathewe exists. I don't mean just making some money. By making good, I mean that you must become a force in Bannister. On the other hand, I am not going to keep my daughter locked up until you arrive. Those are the conditions," concluded Mansfield, very well pleased with himself.

RAISING AN OLD ART TO A NEW STANDARD OF PERFECTION

By Developing Its Baking to a New High Level The Holsum Baking Company Has Won a Position of Undisputed Leadership in Its Line and a Wide Popularity for Its Products.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In every line of business in every city there are always to be found firms which, because of fair dealing, progressive ideas, modern equipment and superior service lead in their particular line, and among such concerns in Columbus The Holsum Baking Company is a notable example. Not only has this company won for itself a position of undisputed pre-eminence in its line, but has raised one of the oldest arts to an almost unprecedented high level in the baking business; and by so doing, has made its name a mark of sterling in the territory in which its products are sold.

As is well-known, this concern is the home of Holsum Bread. Its flavor, purity and wholesomeness has not alone made it one of the largest selling loaves in this county, but the standard of comparison wherever it is used. Although tests show that this bread is more nutritious than meat, yet it costs less than one-third as much. It is safe to assert that it equals in taste and body building qualities "the bread that mother used to make."

The plant of The Holsum Baking Company is a model of efficiency and up-to-date methods. It is equipped with the very latest and improved machinery, and its many windows fill the place with fresh air and sunlight. In fact, a trip though the plant is both interesting and instructive. To the housewife, especially, it immediately brings the realization that home baking is simply a waste of time, money and energy. Everything in the place is scrupulously clean. No device which would improve its products is lacking. And every sanitary regulation which makes for purity is rigidly enforced. Few baking products, if any, are manufatured more carefully and scientifically than those of The Holsum Baking Company.

Only the best obtainable materials and most wholesome ingredients are used by this concern. A policy which has been followed from the beginning, and one that has helped in a big way to make the name of Holsum Bread a household by-word in so many homes in this community. Another thing that gives this bread a flavor, texture and food value that is unequaled is the fact that only expert bakers prepare and mix the different ingredients, and that it is done under the most sanitary conditions possible. As an additional safeguard to guarantee the public that it will get the finest bread that can be baked, every loaf is examined and tested in every way by a master baker before it leaves the plant.

The officers of the company are Messrs. Harry M. Fregr, president and treasurer; W. E. Long, vice-president and S. L. Neelig, secretary and manager. They have always been allied with all those propositions which promise to advance the quality and elevate the standards of baking, and are often found taking an active part in efforts to bring about this end.

In recent years the baking industry has made rapid strides in methods, in products and in service. It is to The Holsum Baking Company, and other firms of like character, that much credit is due for the progress that has been made.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

SUN CURES

The current superstitions which are survivals of sun-worship may not be more numerous than those derived from other sources, but in most cases they are more obvious as to their origin—they stand out clearer. One does not have to puzzle over their pedigrees and devour long hours in research work to get even an inkling of their parentage: they, as a rule, proclaim themselves as clearly as did the brazen trumpets that announced at Heliopolis the rising god of day. It is an interesting fact that the relics of sun-worship should have come down to us so little changed. They are today practically what they were when the mummied pharaohs were as yet living kings. Here are a few of these superstitions gathered by the American Folk-Lore society:

In rubbing for rheumatism rub from left to right (sunwise). Rub the diseased part of a horse's shoulder with a cornecb sunwise every third morning. Rub a wen, corn, etc., with the sun every day and the sun will draw out the pain. To cure a "curb" in a horse rub it with a bone at sunset. Cure a boil by having it rubbed at daybreak for nine successive days, rubbing sunwise. To cure a burn, rub sunwise with a finger moistened with saliva three times.

These are all purely and entirely survivals of sun-worship as is evident in the rubbing in the "ceremonial circuit," that is, with the apparent course of the sun, as all ceremonies connected with the worship of the sun were performed, and in one case the setting of the time for the appeal to Osiris at sunrise and in another at sunset.

Eighteen per cent of our national wealth is in agriculture; 14 per cent is in manufacturing; 13 per cent is held by the railroads and other public utilities; 12 per cent is held by the federal, state, and local governments; and a large amount is employed in wholesale and retail trade. The Dean here independent states that "probably the largest single share is that composed of town and city dwellings, furniture, and personal effects—wealth possessed and used for personal necessities and enjoyment—which is probably is not less than one fourth of the grand total."

A Lovely Garden

The modern Garden or Park Plan Cemetery came into being some ten years ago and the most beautiful burial grounds in the world have been the results, contrasting sharply with the older plan of development and its congestion of tombs, headstones, fences, copings oftentimes overgrown with weeds and shrubbery.

Nature has given Memorial Park a setting that approaches the ideal, with the lake and the beautiful foreground and the gently rolling ground with excellent natural drainage. Every development is planned to blend with nature and add that quiet dignity and charm sacred to the memory of those who have passed to the great beyond.

The uniform PERPETUAL CARE, moderate price and easy ownership plan of purchase is meeting with widespread public approval.

Human Eyesight Being Conserved More Than Ever

Dr. I. E. White, Well-known Optometrist, Has Done Much to Further the Conservation of Vision Movement in this City.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In the last 20 years the demands on the eyes have greatly increased. Moving pictures, the marked extention of artificial illumination, complicated labor saving machines that save the hands, but add to the strain of the eyes, are only a few of the things that have affected eyesight in varying degrees. In fact, during this period no other organ of the body has had its labors so greatly increased.

Public spirited optometrists the country over have taken cognisance of this condition, and are today fostering a campaign, the purpose of which is to show that the intensity and development of our national life, and its subsequent increased strain on the eye makes it mandatory that the people give their eyes more attention and care.

And among those optometrists in this city who have given this Conservation of Vision movement added impetus and wide publicity there is perhaps none who have taken a more active part, or done more to bring about its successful objectives than Dr. I. E. White, with offices in the Ohio Building & Loan Co. Building, at 22 East Gay street.

Believing, as did the founders of this movement, that the eyes are vital to health, happiness and everybeginning of his practice made every effort to bring the people to a fuller appreciation of their eyes, and the importance of giving them the care, which this priceless faculty merits. It is safe to assert that had his activities in this respect been less capable and less energetic, it is doubtful if this optometric health measure would today be so universally known, or firmly established in this city.

However, being well-posted on intentions an questions pertaining to this profession and taking an active interest in them have not of themselves made Dr. White a leader in optometry circles, and one of the city's best known optometrists. A thorough knowledge of optometry and a wide experience in its practice have also been large factors in his success. And to them as much as anything else may be attributed his wide following and enviable reputation.

The best authorities now concede that the eyes have everything to do with good health. And instances are not rare in Dr. White's practice which proves this belief well-founded. Many people suffering from nervous diseases and severe headache have been entirely relieved after being fitted with glasses. Others accused of inefficiency and carelessness have found imperfect vision directly responsible, and through the use of glasses overcame this condition.

In this age of sight conservation people realize more than ever before that a stitch in time will save and prolong the usefulness of the eye. So visit an optometrist once a year whether their eyes are giving them trouble or not. All this goes to show that the efforts of Dr. White and other optometrists who take their profession seriously, have not gone unrewarded.

The Ladies' Aid society of Hope Memorial Presbyterian church wishes to announce they will be glad to see all their friends at the last stand to the north under the grandstand at the state fair. Meals at all hours.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"DRY" WINE

When in these prohibition days it can hardly be said that alcoholic beverages are taboo as far as conversation is concerned! And so we are all familiar with the reference to certain wines as "dry wines."

Distillers will tell you that in making wines the fermentation is controlled in accordance with the type of juice that is desired. In some wines it is checked at an early stage, and the product is a sweet wine. Wine that is permitted complete fermentation, however, is classified as "dry."

Why the term for a completely fermented or sour wine? Let us turn for a moment to another figurative use of the word "dry," our slang expression "dry wit." Mr. Webster defines it as characterized by a quality that is "severe, hard, sharp," and gives further significance for "dry" as "lacking sweetness!" When we learn, then, that in a dry wine the fermentation has eliminated all but 1 per cent of the sugar the aptness of the term is easily comprehensible!

SAFETY CLUBS TO ORGANIZE

Churches and Schools in County Safety Campaign for Fall.

Schools and churches in Franklin county will be asked this fall to join a campaign for the prevention of accidents on the highways. During the last five years, it was pointed out, 2,447,870 persons were reported injured and 114,879 killed in traffic mishaps. Most of these accidents are declared to have been avoidable.

The annual casualty toll of highway accidents is more than twice as great as America's losses in the World war. Approximately 7000 school children alone are killed on the highways each year.

Investigation has shown that carelessness and incompetency are the chief causes of highway accidents, and that less than five per cent are due to faulty mechanism of vehicles or defects in road construction.

Highway and motor organizations are taking a prominent part in the safety campaign. For several years bus companies have been instructing their operators in safety measures, and some of the lines are now installing warning signs along their routes for the benefit of the drivers of motor cars. Bus operators have found that their chief possibility of danger lies in the inefficiency or carelessness of the drivers of passing vehicles.

In the effort to reduce accidents churches and schools will be asked to form safety clubs and pledge their members to exercise greater care in traveling on and crossing public highways.

The marriage of Mrs. Erma White of Delaware, formerly of Columbus, to Dr. Howard Whitehead took place Wednesday morning, Aug. 24, at 9 o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Bowman, 289 Fifteenth Ave., with Dr. W. C. Hartinger, superintendent of the Columbus district Methodist Episcopal church officiating. The witnesses were Mrs. White's daughter, Miss Dorothy White, and son, Charles. Dr. and Mrs. Whitehead spent several days at the lakes but were called home by the illness of Dr. Whitehead's mother. They are now at home at 2239 W. Broad St.

Playgrounds Closed Wednesday Evening

At a conference late Wednesday afternoon between A. W. Raymond, city recreation director, and Health officials it was decided to close all city playgrounds immediately, consequnetly all city recreation grounds were closed Wednesday evening and will not open again this season.

Earlier in the day announcement had been made by Director Raymond from his home that Glenwood and Halton Playgrounds would be open on part time after school began, but this order has been canceled.

COUNTY FAIR TWO WEEKS OFF

Fair at Hilliards Promises to Be Best Exhibition Ever Held There.

"Nothing has been taken away, but a lot has been added to the fair this year," says Arch A. Alder speaking of the Franklin County fair to be held at Hilliards, Sept. 15, 16 and 17. Mr. Alder is secretary of the fair association. Indications are that this year's fair at Hilliards will be the best ever held there.

There have been many new improvements since the last fair. Ten thousand dollars has been used in improving the grounds and erecting new buildings. All the improvements are up to date. Among the new buildings are listed a new arts hall, chicken building, hog building and horse barn. A new water system has been installed and the fences have been repaired. There are new cinder drives over the grounds also.

Five hundred dollars will be donated by the county as premiums for the Boys' and Girls' club work. Many other valuable prizes will be awarded to the winners in the fair events and winners of the many agricultural exhibits.

One of the big features of the fair this year is the horseshoe pitching contest in which $75 is being awarded the winners.

The fair will be open night and day. Horse racing will be held in the afternoon.

Try punctuating the following little truth.

That that is is that that is not is not is not that it it is."

ECONOMIST TO SPEAK TO BUSINESS MEN SEPT. 6th

Practical means for bettering business on the Hilltop will be presented in an address to be given by L. H. Bulsch, Dayton, Ohio, economist, before the Hilltop Business Men's Association at a dinner meeting at Matsouia Barbecue, Tuesday, Sept. 6, 7 p. m.

As one of the merchandising authorities in the Merchants Service Bureau of the National Cash Register company, Dayton, the speaker is widely known for his interesting and practical discussions of retailing and merchandising subjects.

The talk will deal largely with the actual problems confronting retailers and other business men on the Hilltop. For actual value to merchants, the discussions by Mr. Bulsch are among the most important ever given to the retail trade, many business publications have declared. Mr. Bulsch is recommended by business organizations, Chambers of Commerce, retail merchants' associations and similar bodies in all parts of the country.

Among topics to be discussed by the speaker will be advertising, co-operation between merchants, salesmanship by store staffs, buying, store service, stockturn and general store management. Graphic drawings and charts will be used to make each point clear to the audience.

The speaker who has appeared before scores of important trade conventions recently, has been brought to this city through the co-operation of W. W. Sherrit and C. H. Miller, salesmen for the National Cash Register company in Columbus and on the West Side.

WINS TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Glenwood Players Are Successful in City Tournament.

In the city-wide playground tennis tournament results recently announced by the recreation department, George McCrea, 1923 Floral Ave., and Allan Sweeney, 135 Lechner Ave., were crowned as city champions in the boys' doubles under sixteen years of age.

Jean Scott and Paul Casey also of Glenwood were runners up in the senior boys' doubles and lost the city championship in the very last game with Beatty playground by default when a misunderstanding as to the time of the game gave the laurels to Beatty.

In all justice to the Hilltop boys it is only fair to say that had they maintained their high brand of team work and had actually played Beatty they would have given a good account of themselves and should have brought the city title to the West Side. It is hoped next year that instead of second place position Scott and Casey will attain the leadership of the city.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Glenwood M. E. church will meet in the church parlors Thursday, Sept. 1, at 2 o'clock. Miss Tyler, a missionary from China, will be the speaker. The books close for the year at this meeting and the mite boxes must be in at this time. During the social hour Mrs. Weller's group will take the ladies for a trip around the world.

GLENWOOD WINS BLUE RIBBONS

Take Honors at Playground Carnival at State Fair Grounds.

Columbus playground contests and activities at the Ohio State Fair were run off the smoothest this year and with a greater number of entries than at any previous fair. The events were staged for the first time in the large coliseum where plenty of seating and running spaces were available.

There were seven heats in the sack race and nearly fifty boys entered. The winners were Edward Graham, first and James McGrail, second. Both were given pocket knives as prizes.

One of the contests of much interest to the ladies was the rolling pin contest in which Mrs. Edith Sheward was first and Mrs. Sarah Stetler, second. The prizes were a percolator and an order for $5 worth of dry cleaning.

Forty girls were entered in the cardboard race. Gladys Cochran was first and Dorothy Sites second. The peanut race was won by Gladys and Alma Cochran. ONLY CUSTOM MADE "CLOTHES MAKE THE MAN"

Pleasant & Galbraith, Well-Known Tailors, Have Done Much to Advance the Standards of Fine Tailoring in This City, and at the Same Time Have Won a Position of Leadership in the Business.

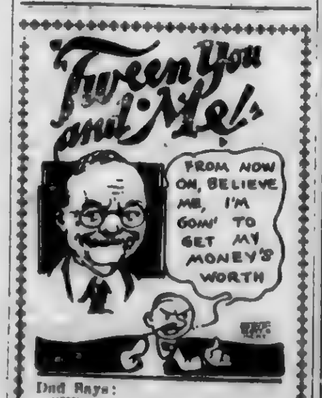
(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

The old saying that "Clothes Make the Man," is truer today than ever before. The world nowadays seldom looks a man up, it simply looks him over and forms its judgment on what it sees. Appearance is not all, of course. Many men look like a million dollars who are not worth ten cents. Even so, there is no denying that the well-dressed man has a long running start over the man who gives little or no heed to his personal appearance. Neither is there any denying that this is the day of custom tailoring. No man can truly expect to give the impression of prosperity dressed in ready-to-wear clothes, which are turned out in thousand lots and duplicated on every street corner. Only custom built clothes invests a man with that air of distinction and individuality, and gives him the feeling that he is ready for any opportunity.

And when it comes to making clothes that not only look better, but wear better, there is no firm in Columbus which takes higher rank than Pleasant & Galbraith in the Brunson Bank Building at 145 North High St. Their reputation in the tailoring line has become so well known to the public that it draws them business from every part of the city. Keeping fully in touch with the progress and trend of the times, and earnestly striving to see that each and every customer is treated fairly and squarely, they have not only won a large following, but the confidence and loyalty of that following. Many of their first customers are still their regular patrons. And hardly a week passes that does not bring to their doors some patron who has been sent by an old customer.

Individuality and excellence are the elements that have made the name of Pleasant & Galbraith outstanding in the realms of custom tailoring. Individuality of a kind that makes the fit, the style, the workmanship of a suit or overcoat noticeable wherever it happens to be. And excellence of a kind that puts in them masterful needlecraft and lasting quality. And as a result, no garment tailored in this establishment ever loses its shape. On the contrary, it has a staying power for shape endurance. The coat collar on a new suit lies snug, and it stays that way throughout the life-time of the garment, for the reason that it is hand manipulated by experts, who know how to put exactitude and staying power wherever they are essential to service and satisfaction. Just so much pains are taken with the shoulders, the pockets, the hang of the trousers. Thus there are no wrinkles in the back, no bulge in the pockets or bags in the trousers. And the same fine workmanship that goes into the suit, goes into the overcoat or any other garment tailored here.

Pleasant & Galbraith's establishment is modern in every respect, and well adapted to the needs of the tailoring business. A comprehensive line of woolens from the best foreign looms is always on display here. And while there are variations in quality, this is one place where there is never any variation from it. In the selection of the fabrics they have shown again that they are master tailors in fact as well as in name. Rich in texture and exclusive in both design and color, they prove that careful buying—not the tape measure—is really the first step taken here in tailoring a suit or overcoat.



Just now they are showing their new fall and winter line. They include all the latest patterns and the cloths offer a wide latitude from which to choose. Already many orders have been placed for suits and overcoats. Men used to wait until within a week or so of Thanksgiving to buy their new winter togs, but not any more.

The best friends of Pleasant Galbraith are to be found among their customers. Nothing could explain the reason of their success better than this simple fact.

An Englishman and an Irishman, riding together, passed a gallows.

"Where would you be," said the Englishman, "if the gallows had its due?"

"Ridin' alone, I guess," said the Irishman.

AN EYE FOR A JOB

It's a business attitude that everyone takes in regard to even the common things.

While witnessing a show at the Ritz theatre recently the pictures of the return of Byrd were flashed on the screen. Much paper and streamers were being showered down upon him as he passed up the canyon of Broadway. The following conversation ensued to my right:

First Small Boy.—There's a job for you.

Second Small Boy.—How's that?

First One.—Go there and get a job cleaning streets after all the heroes come in.

United States manufacturers have now perfected and brought into wide use a product known as "dry ice." This commercial solid carbon dioxide is manufactured by inverting a tank of liquid carbon dioxide under pressure and opening the valves. "The sudden lessening of the pressure causes the liquid as it squirts out to turn part cold solid, part gas." Credit for the perfection of this product is largely due to Pierre E. Haynes, a chemist. Dry ice is slightly more expensive than water too, but it has advantages which more than offset the extra cost. It has been discovered that for shipping purposes a few pounds of dry ice replaces a number of pounds of water ice; thus more space is left for pay freight. Also dry ice is clean and easy to handle.

"It used to be when people spoke about wealth of hair," says Ironical Irene, "they were referring to a girl's loan and not her barber."

COMBINING MODERN PHOTOGRAPHY WITH A STUDY OF HUMAN NATURE

The Enviable Reputation and Wide Following Enjoyed by Charles A. Coleman—Well Known Photographer—Proves This is a Good Policy.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

Every human being is many sided. If you, yourself, have been photographed often, you know that different pictures have caught you in different mental attitudes as well as different physical ones. These mental attitudes are the facets of your many sided personality. Naturally it follows that the making of photographs is not altogether a matter of technical ability. Your photograph, from that standpoint, might win the grand prize, yet if the photographer caught you in a pose or attitude you did not like, or your friends, it would be a failure. So, in addition to technical ability, a successful photographer always possesses a keen understanding of human nature, and Charles A. Coleman, who conducts one of this city's leading studios, is not an exception to this rule. It is his keen desire to know people—their ideals—their ambitions—and to understand them has enabled him to put into their portraits the warm human side of their personality, and thus satisfying the people for whom they were intended.

Those of you who have been photographed by Mr. Coleman, and they are legion, recall that he was rather interested in you and in the things in which you were interested. You may remember, too, how he casually brought in some reference to the theater, or it might have been politics or sports. You at the time, probably thought little of this, or if you did, thought it merely a way of entertaining you while making your portrait, which was partially true. However, his real aim was to find the best that was in you as well as to make you forget you were having your "picture taken," and you were photographed the instant this was accomplished. This will explain why the portraits made here are always characterized by a certain naturalness that is so often lacking in the work of many photographers, and why in them, too, your friends always find something that is friendly and likable.

Excellency in photography, however, is not the only element that proclaims Coleman's studio unmistakably different, for the studio itself furnishes another. Few studios anywhere are better equipped. In its completeness are included every appliance and device necessary to advanced photography, and due to this fact lighting effects, which are ever associated with superior photography, are greatly emphasized in its work. It is attractively appointed and its atmosphere is at once restful and inviting. One cannot help but feel the cordiality of its welcome, and even the most casual observer can readily see that no detail has been disregarded which would add to the comfort and convenience of its patrons.

The art of photography, like other sciences, is constantly progressing. Mr. Coleman, by keeping abreast of the times and by always endeavoring to give his patrons nothing less than his best efforts, has not only won an enviable reputation in this profession, but a wide and growing following.

Coleman's Studio is located at 100½ North High street.

First Day of School Calls for Prettily Made Gingham Frocks

Yet but a few days and the familiar "Oh dear, there goes the school bell" refrain will be ringing through the house. To mother the "call to arms" is also sounded, which means a rush to the sewing rooms, to make up school clothes fast as machine wheel will whirr.

It is at this time that mothers find gingham their best friend. For school the child needs a fabric that will stand frequent tubbings. The beauty of gingham is that it always emerges without losing its original fresh crispness, and best of all it "wears like iron." A child may outgrow a gown of gingham but seldom does she outwear it.

In making up gingham the material should always be shrunk. It may be put through water and dried in the sun without injury to color or fabric.

It adds so to the prestige of gingham this season, the fact that it comes in such lovely one-tone effects as well as in the staple checks and plaids. The little girl in the picture is wearing a plain one-tone gingham in a soft leaf green shade trimmed with darker green and white. The frock is charmingly smocked in green mercerized thread to match the darker tone.

Color schemes, which employ several shades as demonstrated in the instance of this attractive gingham frock, are all the rage—a hint to sewing mothers.

This theory that two colors are better than one, or many degrees of the same color, if you please, is worthy of being put into practice not only for washable gingham and the like but in making up wool crepes, jersey cloths and crepe de chines as well.

The straight-down-from-the-shoulder line is the favorite styling. Considerable fagoting is used, often done with very bright threads. A one-tone with a plaid gingham is often fagoted together.

that to get the full benefit of the omen the pin should be lying with the point toward you—but these are fussy people. This superstition has as its basis a psychological fact. If the mind is so alert and active that the eye perceives so small an object as a dropped pin, it would naturally follow that the man would as a rule, accomplish a successful day's work.

The idea that he should pick up the pin is a survival from the days when pins were objects of considerable value compared to what they are now; and picking up the lost pin showed that the man was saving as well as observing—an additional cause for a successful day. And there is the same connection today, trifling as is now the value of a pin. For a man who picks up a stray pin not only shows that his mind is alert and his observation keen, but also that he is no scorner of trifles. So why should he not—on a day when his mentality is functioning in this manner—meet with that success which men call "luck"?

CHAPTER II
Lord of Polygon Hill.

Across the shining threads of steel—railway yard—a man ran lightly, with the sure foot of the athlete. He wore a blue checkered mackinaw and a woolen cap pulled down over his ears. Behind lay a sinister outline; giant furnace doors opening and closing, blinding rivulets of molten metal. Men, with the aspects of demons, flitting past these luminous backgrounds.

Beyond the runner stood rows of forlorn tenements, evidently his objective. He was in a hurry. At any moment a mile-long freight might cut him off. When at length he leaped across the last rail he was fairly well spent.

At the curb—to be precise, the ditch—in front of one of the tenements, before which ran a crumbling tar walk, stood, a two-seated runabout, rusty and battered, but as faithful as a mongrel dog.

In the city of Bannister this ramshackle vehicle was as familiar to the sight as the police-van and the fire engines. You were quite as likely to see it reposing impudently before some handsome mansion on Polygon hill as here in Poverty row, where, in truth it seemed more at home.

The man in the mackinaw pushed his way into the hall of the tenement, climbed four gloomy flights of stairs and entered a forlorn room. In a window a newspaper served as a pane of glass. The surviving panes were dim with cobwebs.

At the side of a dilapidated iron bed sat a man in a fur-lined overcoat. He was Dr. Maddox, hale and hearty at sixty, white of hair and ruddy of countenance.

On the bed, under a tattered sheet, there was a body, sinisterly rigid in outline.

"Dead?" asked the man in the mackinaw.

"Yes, son. He was dead when I got back from telephoning you."

"I came as fast as I could. How did it happen?"

"He was old and slow, and got in the way of a swinging crane. There wasn't a whole bone in his body."

"Could he talk?"

"He mumbled something about the seventh plank from the west wall, running you. What's your interest in him? He wasn't a Bannister man."

"Human."

The young man walked over to the west wall, counted off six planks in the floor, and pried back the seventh. From the cavity he extracted a bundle of papers. "Doctor, do you know what doubled Mansfield's fortune after the war began?"

"What?"

"Those barb-wire machines. The dead man on the bed there was the inventor. These papers are the documents in the case. Is there nothing sinister in the fact that he lies there dead? Why should he be doing manual labor at three dollars a day, working at a kind of charity job, when he should have had all the comforts of life? Think of him dying in bitterness like that! Eighteen dollars a week, with the music of his own creation in his ears, day after day, and another man taking all the profits!"

"You mean he was cheated and robbed?"

"Legally, no; morally, yes!"

"Brandon, have you anything personally against Dunleigh Mansfield?" asked the doctor.

"I hadn't when I came here to take charge of the Herald," answered Cathewe, as we know the man in the mackinaw. "I came to Bannister upon an almost unbelievable adventure. Some day I may tell you about that. No; at the start I had nothing against Mansfield. But for three years I've done nothing but stumble over cases like this; mean and contemptible, cold-blooded, but always within the law. What's the object in piling up more gold? He can't count his millions. He doesn't need money, and yet he robs a man like this!"

"What are you going to do—print this story?" asked the doctor, indicating the poor, broken thing on the bed.

"Yes!" I've known all along what kind of a man Mansfield was. But I dared not attack him until I'd made the paper go. Now I can start the guns. Before I'm through I promise to render Mansfield impotent for future harm. I have facts, facts! My audience has learned to trust me; and they'll believe the Herald. I am going to protect these poor human beings who don't know how to fight for their rights."

"He will break you. What can you do against his tremendous power, which reaches from here to Washington?"

"I can speak the truth and back it up with incontrovertible facts."

"Mansfield has a daughter who believes him to be a demigod—as mine believes me to be."

"Ah, but you are one! Nancy Maddox has a right to believe that. But Mansfield's daughter! What is she but an inconsequent butterfly?"

"She is young. In judging her you may be a little hasty. Nancy, who is visiting her in Washington, says she is lovely and lovable."

"I was wondering what had become of Nancy. Miss Mansfield will improve. She can't help it, and he with Nancy Maddox."

The doctor's eyes sparkled. If only this odd, clean boy and his Nancy might fall in love with each other!

"Doctor, what would you say if I told you I was a man with three names?" asked Cathewe as they left the house.

"What? Three names?"

"Yes. My own and two others."

"What's the joke, son?"

For a block Cathewe remained silent. "After all, a doctor is like a priest—the repository of secrets. One more don't hurt you. I am going to talk to you as to the family physician."

"It is nothing I ought not to know?"

"I am not a fugitive from justice."

"I beg your pardon son!"

"But I'm a kind of Ishmael. I am pursued by the Furies. I am in the same category as a ship beset by a typhoon—a victim. Three names. I have an assumed one. By that name I make a modest living, honorably. Brandon Cathewe are my given names, the tail of the kite, which is Hallowell. Have you ever by chance heard of Digby Hallowell?"

The doctor repeated the name ruminatingly. "Seems I've heard the name somewhere, but it escapes me at this moment."

"You will recall it with a little digging," said the young man. "And when you do, remember I'm Digby Hallowell's son and my mother is his widow. Here we are. Thanks for the lift. When you pick the Herald off your doorstep tomorrow morning, you'll see some interesting facts relative to Dunleigh Mansfield, 'the Lord of Polygon Hill,' I'll call him! That will make a good catch phrase!"

* * * * * * * * *

When Dunleigh Mansfield greeted his daughter and Nancy Maddox in his Washington home his face was expressive of pleasure and amiability. "I shall have to leave you two after dinner," he said. "I am expecting to wind up a contract. You are not afraid to ride about alone?"

LEADERSHIP---AND STILL GROWING

City-wide Recognition of the Louis Lang Company's Exceptional Cleaning and Dyeing Service Is Proving to be a Great Stimulus to Its Business.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

Of the many and varied concerns that go to make up the commercial life of a city there are few that require as much technical knowledge and actual skill as the operation of a good cleaning and dyeing establishment, since it calls for a fundamental understanding of materials, composition and and applied results, and in a high degree. The Louis Lang Company not only possess this knowledge and skill, but re-enforces this capability with one of the finest plants in the city.

Whether it be a mere cleaning or a complete change of color that is desired—this concern can handle it for you; and in a most satisfactory manner. New shades are super-imposed over old ones in a way that makes the cloth appear fresh from the factory. Their process of cleaning not only removes the spots and stains from the fabrics, but gives new "life" to them as well. The delicate sheen of the most costly materials is preserved and intensified by their scientific methods. Aside from the careful handling of the goods every effort is made by the company to protect them in every way. A policy which has done much to place this firm high in the esteem of its patrons and the public generally.

Regular patrons find their current household bills materially reduced by the constant use of this firms facilities. Apparel in a state that might well doom it to the discard is reclaimed for months more of usefulness. In fact, in the majority of cases it is rendered just as serviceable and beautiful as the new garment that would be purchased to replace it, if the owner did not know about the many-sided cleaning and dyeing services of this progressive concern.

Added to these attributes is another characteristic of the firm, punctuality, and still another, courtesy. Both are unfailing. Goods are called for and delivered in exact compliance with promises made, and employees are taught and encouraged to win and hold the regard of patrons. This aim to render a courteous and efficient service is not confined by this concern to just cleaning and dyeing. A small pressing job receives the same careful attention, and this fact has become so well known to the public that it draws the Louis Lang Company an ever increasing number of friends and patrons.

Messrs. Fred H. and Herbert L. Lang, heads of the company, are well known in cleaning and dyeing circles over Central Ohio, and are generally to be found on the right side of all progressive propositions in their line.

Lang's main offices and plant are located at 54-58 East Town street. As a matter of additional service, branches are maintained at 986 West Broad street and 999 Mt. Vernon avenue.

After all, the Louis Lang Company has won its present position of leadership by simply making an honest effort to advance the best interests of its customers, and not merely its own.

BAD TEETH IS HEALTH'S GREAT ENEMY

School Boards, Public Health Authorities and Public-Spirited Dentists Everywhere Are Making Every Effort to Bring This Truth to the Attention of the Public—By Fostering and Supporting This Educational Health Movement in Columbus Dr. Foster C. Franks Has Won a High Place in the Dental Profession and in the Esteem of the Public.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

Good, clean teeth, properly used to chew food thoroughly, and frequently examined to forestall the 28 varieties of germs that like to hide among them, including those which ferment the lactic acid that causes decay, means health, strength and efficiency.

Bad teeth, on the contrary, mean impaired digestion, imperfect nutrition, deranged nerves and a continual hazard of bodily infection when nature's resistance is weakened, and are the cause in many instances of Bright's disease and rheumatism.

So it is apparent to anyone that their teeth are not alone worth every reasonable care for preservation or betterment, but are absolutely necessary to good health and good looks. And few dentists in Columbus have done more to educate the public to this fact than Dr. Foster C. Franks with offices at 115½ South High Street.

During his long practice he has always made it a point to teach the people that it is much better, as well as less expensive, to keep the teeth as they should be than it is to visit a dentist after the teeth have reached the stage of real decay and began to ache, and as a result of this policy he has not only done much to promote the good health of the people, but has won for himself a host of friends, aside from his excellent professional reputation.

At the offices of his well-known dentist only the latest ideas are in use, and as science has made advances in the treatment of teeth these new methods have been adopted by him as soon as approved by the profession, and as a consequence, he is able to offer those suffering with bad teeth the very best of service, which is one of the things upon which his successful practice has been built.

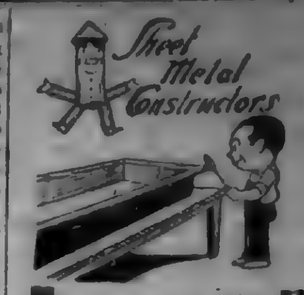
The work of Dr. Franks is of such a satisfactory nature that he has not only increased his practice with each succeeding year, but has held his old patrons, who have been most influential in making it known throughout this city as an ideal place to have dental work done, and no better tribute could be paid to the high character of his work than this interested co-operation on the part of his old patients.

By reason of his large clientele and efficient methods coupled with the fact that he has one of the finest equipped dental offices to be found anywhere, Dr. Franks is able to execute dental work of a superior quality at prices that anyone may enjoy the benefits of good, sound teeth, and he is to be commended upon the standing he has attained in this profession.

Apart from being a worthy member of the profession, Dr. Franks is a worthy citizen, and is generally to be found on the right of all those measures which promise the betterment of the community's health.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING



PINS

See a pin and pick it up, all the day you'll have good luck:
See a pin and let it lay, bad luck you will have all day.

Slightly ungrammatical and a bad rhyme; but this jingle may be the solution, nevertheless, of the mystery, "Where do all the pins go to?" They are picked up by superstitious people. And few there be who, seeing a pin, will not stoop to pick it up "for luck." It is doubtful if there is a more widespread superstition than this among English-speaking peoples. Some say that to get the full benefit of the omen the pin should be lying with the point toward you—but those are fussy people. This superstition has as its basis a psychological fact. If the mind is so alert and active that the eye perceives so small an object as a dropped pin, it would naturally follow that the man would as a rule, accomplish a successful day's work.

The idea that he should pick up the pin is a survival from the days when pins were objects of considerable value compared to what they are now; and picking up the lost pin showed that the man was saving as well as observing—an additional cause for a successful day. And there is the same connection today, trifling as is now the value of a pin. For a man who picks up a stray pin not only shows that his mind is alert and his observation keen, but also that he is no scorner of trifles. So why should he not—on a day when his mentality is functioning in this manner—meet with that success which men call "luck"?

HARRY LAUER, Secretary

Dr. Horace Gray, of the Institute for Juvenile Research of Chicago, has measured one thousand boys of American-born parents, between the ages of six and eighteen, and has compared their heights with those of boys measured fifty years ago by another scientist. His results show that modern American boys are taller by at least two inches than the boys of their grandfathers' day. Dr. Gray attributes the apparent increasing height of succeeding generations in this country "chiefly to the increasing knowledge of facts governing health and control of disease. Infantile diseases, which so frequently damage growth, are more under control than in the past, he pointed out. And scientists are rapidly learning facts about the part that vitamins and sunlight play in growth."

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

THE BUTTERFLIES

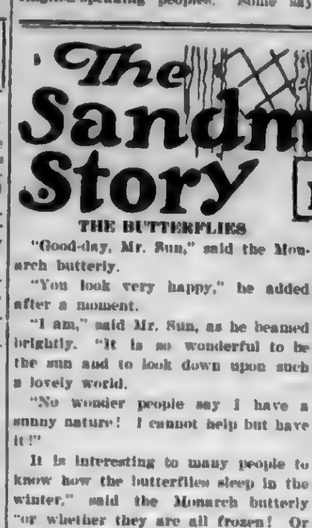
"Good-day, Mr. Sun," said the Monarch butterly.

"You look very happy," he added after a moment.

"I am," said Mr. Sun, as he beamed brightly. "It is so wonderful to be the sun and to look down upon such a lovely world.

"No wonder people say I have a sunny nature! I cannot help but have it!"

It is interesting to many people to know how the butterflies sleep in the winter," said the Monarch butterly "or whether they are all frozen! Or what happens to them! So many people, I've been told, often ask. I wonder, if I told you, Mr. Sun, if you could send around some of your bright rays with the secrets."



Mr. Sun smilingly agreed.

"I'll see that they hear if you tell me what is to be said."

"The Swallowtail Butterflies," said the Monarch, "stay in their chrysalis state in the winter time. They like those beds best.

"And the Angle Wings all change into butterflies sometime before they go to sleep, and so they sleep as butterflies. Little Bronze Copper Butterfly spends the winter as an egg. He has lots of growing and changing to do when the spring comes! I wouldn't care for his way," the Monarch said proudly.

"So many people wonder how we disappear when the cold weather comes. In the summer I've often heard people say:

"'What becomes of all the butterflies in the winter time?'

"If some one will translate for me into their language I'd like to tell them all of this.

"Most of the butterflies eat a good deal more in the fall so they can be strengthened for the cold winter weather and for their sleep, and most of the great butterly family spend the winter bedtime as little caterpillars. The Fritillary families sleep as tiny caterpillars and don't bother to grow their full size until the spring comes when they wake up and continue growing!

"Then there are some families where the grown-ups sleep as butterflies and where the little ones go to bed as caterpillars and don't change into butterflies until the spring comes. The Orange Sulphur and the Clouded Sulphur Butterfly families do this.

"But, oh dear, I must stop talking," the Monarch said, for as he looked about him he found that all the butterflies had disappeared.

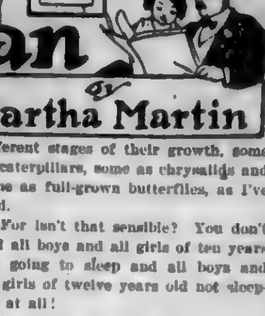
"I've never been so late in starting for the South. I must hurry and follow the birds.

"But the butterflies and caterpillars who're staying up North and who're sleeping through the winter will be quite safe and snug. They know where the rocks and crevices are which will be the right places for them. If they're chrysalids they will know how to attach themselves safely with a fine silken cord to a tree, so the cold wind won't blow them away.

"Yes, the winter time is the butterflies bedtime and there are only a few of me who go away and stay awake! But the butterflies sleep at different stages of their growth, some as caterpillars, some as chrysalids and some as full-grown butterflies, as I've said.

"For isn't that sensible? You don't find all boys and all girls of ten years old going to sleep and all boys and all girls of twelve years old not sleeping at all!

"And as you don't find all boys and girls doing the same just because they're of the same age or the same size—neither do you find butterflies all doing alike!



"But before I fly I must sing the Butterflies' Bedtime Lullaby."

The Monarch looked up at Mr. Sun and smiled. Then he sang this song:

In the winter when it's cold
Do not be so very bold!
Do not freeze your pretty wings,
Do not chill your nose and things!
If you're a caterpillar or a butterfly,
In a warm place you must lie,
Covered up with silken threads,
Or in warm and leafy beds.
And sleep and sleep and sleep some more.
Such are the butterfly ways as of yore.
And ere I go on my wandering way,
I wish the rest of you all a good-day,
And pleasant dreams and a good winter's rest,
So that when the spring comes you may all look your best.

Brick baffles the Tax Bug

VITRIFIED brick pavements armor a community against excessive taxes due to paving expenses.

Scores of brick pavements laid twenty to thirty years ago are in use today—the bonds which built them long ago retired. That's just one of the reasons why vitrified brick makes the most economical pavement a community can select.

Every husband knew what every widow knows concerning the wisdom of the selection of a family burial plot every household in this community would possess a final resting place at this writing.

In the final analysis every thinking man is working for the interest of his home and family—and the consideration of the selection of a family lot in advance of need is merely exercising good business judgement.

Memorial Burial Park offers an unusual opportunity at this time in its development. The uniform Perpetual Care, initial saving and easy ownership plan of purchase are meeting with widespread approval.

PREP SCHOOL AT "Y" CLOSES

Miss Anna Spence Receives Best Grade; Junior College to Open Sept. 12.

To the credit of Miss Anna Spence, a stenographer at the Columbus State hospital, goes the record of best single class grade made at the Y. M. C. A. preparatory school this summer. Miss Spence was working off her entrance requirements for college. She will enter Denison university this fall.

Robert Trott, 2440 Pamela St., was also among the list of fifty students who completed summer preparatory school work successfully.

A majority of students who were taking summer work in the Y. preparatory school will again enter the regular fall session opening Sept. 7. Those who have completed their high school work will enroll in the new junior college whose opening date has been pushed forward one week and is now scheduled for Sept. 12.

Several students enrolled in this summer preparatory work were making up deficiencies in their entrance credits for the Ohio State university. Others were taking advantage of the plan by which students can complete all their high school work in four years by attending summer school sessions as well as regular winter semesters.

SAVE THE OLD UMBRELLA

The old umbrella has many uses. Do not throw it away until some of them have been tried. One of them is its practical use as a clothes basket. In the absence of a clothes basket, one helpful husband found that the umbrella with the curved handle saves stooping and walking. It hangs on the clothes line full of clothes, and can be pushed along on the line as the hanging progresses, doing away with walking back and forth to the clothes basket.

Choice plants and vegetables may be protected from the hot sun during the torrid days of summer by old umbrella from which the bulky handle has been removed so that they can be easily slipped into the ground. Even the umbrella which will not protect against rain will nurse and protect a tender plant which would otherwise die from too much heat.

One young man made an admirable shower bath by taking the frame of an umbrella and sewing rubber into its tips to make a curtain around him while water was spraying from above. His curtain was of course collapsible, so that it could be folded away when not in use.

The Army Medical Department has been awarded the gold medal of the International Committee of the Red Cross for its "wound cards," in a competition held at Geneva in connection with the meeting of the International Standardization Committee. The "wound cards" are the standard forms, known as the "Emergency Medical Tag" and the "Field Medical Record," used by the Army in the field for tagging the sick and wounded for removal and record purposes. Eventually these forms are filed at Washington, D. C. They become valuable, not only in connection with the military record of the patient, but in the adjustment of claims for pension and compensation. They are also of value in the study of medical history.

It is consolation to realize that others have troubles just as perplexing and maddening as our own.

SCHOOLS OPEN SEPTEMBER 19th

Much to the delight of several thousand children it was announced last week that the public schools of Columbus would not open until Sept. 19. This extra vacation comes as a result of the infantile paralysis epidemic.

Dr. Rose of the City Health department has advised parents to keep their children away from crowded places as much as possible.

All other than the public schools started on Tuesday morning. Unless further decisions are made by the board of education, school will begin on Sept. 19.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cave, 2936 Olive St., had as their guests over the week-end, Mrs. Cave's mother, Mrs. Arnold King, Springfield, Ohio, and her uncle Dr. J. R. Ascham of Constantinople, Turkey. Dr. Ascham will sail for France on the 15th of this month to join Mrs. Ascham, who is visiting their daughter in Paris.

Mrs. James A. Hill has returned home after a motor trip with Mr. and Mrs. George Lenhart, 2410 Summit St., through Southern Ohio and West Virginia.

PLAYGROUNDS COMPARE WELL

W. C. Dyer Tells of Visit to Playgrounds of Other Cities of the Country.

W. C. Dyer, head of the Glenwood playground for the past year has just returned from a trip through the eastern states and Canada and reports that after comparing the eastern playgrounds with those of Columbus the people of this city should feel proud of their community parks.

Mr. Dyer says that the only one that compared favorably with the Columbus playgrounds was an unusually large one at Toronto, Canada. This playground was very well equipped but was near a busy auto thoroughfare and a railroad. The grounds at Montreal were not very large but appeared very clean.

In Boston, the home of the playground, there are many recreation centers for the children, most of which are in connection with the schools. Baseball is the leading sport but it differs from Columbus in that their games are played with a hard ball.

Of New York, Mr. Dyer says, "The children of New York hardly know what a playground is. The only play areas used in the congested sections are the streets, sidewalks and fire escapes. The school playgrounds are on the top of the buildings. These are screened at the sides and at the top so that the children cannot fall off or basketballs cannot be thrown over. In the wider areas only swings, slides and such are available for equipment, and baseball is seldom played."

Washington D. C. has many beautiful playgrounds. Mr. Dyer says that in none of the cities visited did he find so many well equipped and well distributed grounds as Columbus has. The grounds here are larger and permit a greater variety of games than most other cities.

Scoles Reunion

The second annual Scole's family reunion was held Sunday, Aug. 28, on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Scoles near Grove City. About ninety people were present.

Mrs. Matilda Scoles, an invalid aunt, aged 77 of 1776 E. Broad St., held the place of honor. R. T. Scoles of Ft. Wayne, Ind., addressed the gathering in the afternoon.

It was decided that the reunion of 1928 should be held in the same place.

The United Evangelical conference closed last Sunday at Venango, Pa., with a splendid Missionary rally. Rev. W. E. Scoboite, former pastor of St. Paul's church, Columbus, gave the closing address. Very little changes were made by the stationing committee. Rev. N. J. Broadway was returned to St. Paul's for the second year. Several young men were licensed by the conference and new work is planned for the coming year.

Grace Donaldson and Hortense Rose, the "Melody Maids" of WSAI of Cincinnati, visited at the home of Miss Nellie M. Taylor of 108 S. Richardson Ave.

The Good-Time club spent the week-end at Lakeview, Ohio. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Melvin and son George; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Biddle and daughter Lois; Mr. and Mrs. John Porter and daughter Mary; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Karnes, Ida Mae and Roscoe Karnes; Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Melvin; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Meyer and son Dick. Most of the entertainment was furnished by Jack Meyer with his mouth organ.

GOOD RACES AT CO. FAIR

All Day Picnic Crowds Urged; Big Exhibits of Farm Products.

The Franklin County Fair is but one week off and all plans for a big fair have been completed. It promises to be one of the best county fairs in the state.

With the new buildings and many added features for this year it is hoped that the crowds will exceed any previous ones at this grounds. Many have registered their horses for the races and better races are expected. The track is in good condition.

The spacious wooded tracts in connection with the fair grounds afford ample space for family picnics and many family get-to-gethers are planned for the week of the fair. An enjoyable time is assured all.

On Thursday, Sept. 15, the races include a mule race, pony race and a half mile race free for all. On Friday there will be a mule race, pony race, pace and trot. The same will be followed on Saturday with the exception of the pony race, for which a free for all pace will be substituted.

Along with the special features for the nights there will be free dancing with a good orchestra present.

TALKS ON STORE MANAGEMENT

L. H. Busick of Dayton Addresses Business Men Tuesday Night.

At the regular meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's Association at the Matsonia, Tuesday night, L. H. Busick, of the National Cash Register Co. of Dayton was the principal speaker and for two hours held his audience with an interesting and instructive talk on store management, using charts to illustrate his talk.

Opening his talk, Mr. Busick stated that nothing was wrong with business, but rather the trouble was with the management of most businesses, pointing out that many merchants do not know what they think they know about their own business, as to the departments that are paying and the departments that do not pay and why they do not show a profit.

Mr. Busick was brought to the Hilltop through the co-operation of Mr. C. H. Miller, local salesman of the National Cash Register Co.

Assistant City Attorney Gessman was also a guest at the meeting and explained the franchise under which the I. C. and E. traction company operates over West Broad street from Hague avenue to the city limits at the Big Four intersection.

The large chorus choir, with Mrs. Mary Riddile Walton, directing, will sing for the first time this season at both morning and evening services. Dr. G. F. Barber will preach in the evening.

This will be annual conference Sunday for Methodism of Ohio and visiting pastors will occupy many of the pulpits of Columbus.

The junior and kindergarten church will not open until later because of the infantile paralysis epidemic. Children, watch for the later announcement.

ASK 3-MILL SCHOOL LEVY

Board of Education Make Request at Special Meeting Wednesday.

The board of education considered an additional three-mill tax levy for Columbus schools at a special meeting Wednesday afternoon. Its present 24-mill levy will expire in 1928 and to meet additional expenses, the board asks for an increase of six-tenths of a mill.

The two-weeks "vacation" which Columbus schools are enjoying will cost approximately $900,0000, Superintendent Collicott estimated Tuesday.

The superintendents and principals are planning to use the nine days during which pupils will not be in attendance, for planning their programs and organizing work of instruction so pupils may be able to make up work lost in the enforced vacation, he said.

The health situation in Columbus is reported as improving. No additional infantile paralysis cases have developed.

Mrs. Jane Graham returned to her home, 90 S. Ogden Ave., Monday, after a four month's visit with relatives and friends in Edinburgh, Scotland.

OHIO METHODISM IN DELAWARE, O.

The three annual conferences of Ohio Methodism are meeting at Delaware, Ohio, this week. This is a very outstanding meeting as there is no other city in American Methodism where three conferences converge. From all indications there will probably be 1500 ministers in attendance at this meeting, along with many Sunday school and Epworth League officials. The Senior and Junior Layman's conferences will be held on next Friday and Saturday.

Many friends of C. W. Finley will be pleased to learn that he is now located at the new filling station of the Central Oil Co., at the corner of Sullivant and Woodbury Aves.

The marriage ceremony of Denman R. Stoner, a prominent young farmer of West Jefferson and Miss Florence R. Poling, whose home is in Galloway, was performed at the home of the officiating minister, Rev. P. W. Drumm, 37 E. Burgess Ave., Wednesday, August 31, at 11 o'clock. They left for a short trip to the lakes and returning will make their home on the Stoner farm near West Jefferson.

COMMITTEE ADOPT PLANS

Resolution Adopted to Resist Disconnecting of Downspouts From Sanitary Sewers.

At a meeting of the Hilltop Association for Permanent Sewer Relief last Friday night at the K. of P. hall a resolution was adopted whereby any attempts on the part of the city to disconnect the rainspouts from the sanitary sewer system will be resisted by the executive committee of the organization unless the expense is paid by the city. Attempts to disconnect a sanitary sewer from any residence will also be resisted.

These resolutions come as the result of the belief on the part of this committee that the disconnecting is not the proper means of handling the situation. After investigating they have concluded that permanent sewer relief can only be brought about by building a new sewer system.

At this meeting it was decided that a sanitary engineer should be employed to make a complete survey along with the committee and the city council.

Should the present system be found inadequate city council will be asked to provide for sewer relief.

Petitions are soon to be circulated asking city council to enlarge the city disposal plant so as to care for the situation for the next ten years.

Mrs. Isabel Burnside and daughter Miss Margaret, 92 N. Powell Ave., and their guests, Edgar Patterson and sister Miss Ella Patterson, of Cleveland, were guests of Mrs. Burnside's daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Churton and family in Huntington, W. Va., last week.

Mrs. Daniel Jorman, 47 Clarendon Ave., who underwent an operation for the removal of her tonsils last Saturday at Radium hospital, is convalescing nicely at her home.

Let George Do It

George M. Painter, having disposed of his store, decided to take a vacation trip to Detroit, Mich.; Davenport, Iowa; Milwaukee, Wis., and probably several other places. All was loaded and the party started early. Painter was constantly warned by his companions, that his car was a Gas Eater and to watch the tank. Ignoring their warnings the Old Bus stopped suddenly two miles out of La Porte, Ind. A walk for Painter. He nearly got on his knees begging a ride. At last a little old rattling Ford gave him a lift. Imagine Painter carrying back his little can of gas for the big Gas Eater. The rest of the trip was quite successful. But from now on he will take advice. Painter got back in Columbus Tuesday.

Mrs. J. P. Cullison of 66 S. Terrace St., left Wednesday for a two weeks' trip to Atlantic City, Philadelphia and New York.

Miss Rhea Tood, of Salem, formerly of the Hilltop, was visiting friends on the Hilltop.

Mrs. Harley Postle, 44 N. Powell Ave., who has been in Mt. Carmel hospital, is convalescing at the home of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Murlette, Galloway, Ohio.

The September meeting of the J. B. B. Sunday school class will be held at the home of Mrs. Chenoweth, 24 S. Warren Ave., Tuesday evening, Sept 13. Very important, every member urged to attend.

MRS. SAYRE IS BADLY INJURED

Former Hilltop Woman Suffers Skull Fracture and Broken Bones in Auto Accident.

Mrs. Howard Sayre, formerly of the Hilltop, was seriously injured last Thursday evening, when the car in which she was riding with her husband collided with another machine near Mansfield.

Mrs. Sayre is at present in the Mansfield hospital suffering from a fractured skull, broken shoulder, jaw and three ribs and several cuts and bruises. Wednesday morning her condition was reported as somewhat improved and hopes were given of her recovery.

Mrs. Sayre was formerly Irene Chrisman, a former Central High school student, and was also formerly employed at the Reese restaurant on the Hilltop. Mr. Sayre formerly was proprietor of the Sayre garage on Highland avenue. He was only slightly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Kystus were the guests over Labor Day of Mrs. J. M. Kirkpatrick, 884 S. Warren Ave.

City Will Give Work to 1000 This Winter

In an effort to keep unemployment in Columbus at a minimum, Council President Scott Wehe has appealed to various city departments asking them to do as much public improvement work as possible during the fall, winter and spring months.

Council last night passed a bond issue for $150,000 sewer work in and near Linden. City Engineer Simpson said approximately $1,000,000 of sewer work would be in progress during the winter and that approximately 1000 men would be employed on this work.

President Wehe has asked Mr. Simpson to make a survey of the possible municipal improvements which may be started at once and report to council.

Mr. James A. Hill, 436 S. Ogden Ave., spent Labor Day and attended the Food show at Cincinnati, Ohio.

WILLIAM R. MEREDITH

William R. Meredith, 78, of 448 S. Oakley Ave., who died Saturday at his residence of senility was held at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday. Burial in Union cemetery. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Sarah F. Meredith.

Our faith should be stronger than our doubts.

Loyalty is a fine trait. Our church, our country, our family, and our friends have a right to it.

If a woman once lets herself get eaten up by an emotion, everything she sees, hears, thinks or feels is only that much more food for it.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

WHAT ARE WE?

A college professor has dug up from the misty past the twenty-five century-old doctrines of Democritus to show us that the "life entity" theories lately announced by Edison are not in the least new or novel.

Edison, as you have read, propounds the idea that life is the result of the association of an innumerable number of invisible, immortal "entities" which while they are in combination continue the existence of whatever thing they compose.

Those combinations may in one case be a plant, in another a human body. In either case when death comes these entities separate and except in the case of mankind resolve themselves into other shapes and forms.

In the human those entities which were characteristic of the person and which constituted his personality, may remain associated and constitute in their contigued existence the after-death life.

An interesting theory, but not a new one.

There have been many guesses, beliefs, theories, suppositions as to what we are, what constitutes personality, and what lives after death.

It is true that 25 centuries ago Democritus, a very learned man, evolved the theory that everything in the universe was constituted of invisible atoms. These atoms he believed to be self-existent; that is, no atom depended upon another for its life and was therefore everlasting.

The varying association of atoms he believed made up the various forms of life which continued only as long as the association was maintained.

Democritus had, for those times, some very original ideas.

He was the son of a very rich family in Thrace, and when he came into his fortune he spent it all traveling and studying, declaring at the end of his journeys that "I of all men have traveled over the greatest extent of country and have listened to the most experienced of men."

He had probably traveled a less distance than you would go in a summer vacation motor tour, but he was held by those who knew him to be "almost divine" in his wisdom.

Democritus was known as "The Laughing Philosopher," although history gives no reason for the mirthful appellation.

Maybe he, in his wisdom, laughed at the impossibility of proving his own theories, as perhaps Edison smiled as he made public his doctrine of "life entities."

"What we are" and "Why we are" have long puzzled mankind.

After centuries and centuries of honest studying, earnest investigation and wisest theorizing we are still as far from an accurate determination of established fact as when we began.

We know we are, and there, as far as absolutely provable fact goes, we stop.

We know that we are conscious of a surrounding universe which one philosophy tells us is real and another tells us is unreal, existing only in thought.

Science tells us that all matter is energy, that the indivisable atom of Democritus is easily divided into its electrons, which are not matter at all, but electricity and that matter is really nonexistent.

What we seem to see, it may be we do not see at all, and what we seem to be, may, after all, be not at all what we are.

The Jefferson Davis highway is the only road the building of which was fostered by women. Just as the Lincoln highway stretches from coast to coast through the Northern states, so the highway built in memory of Jefferson Davis stretches from coast to coast through the Southern states. It was started in 1918 under the auspices of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and now its red-and-white markers bearing the initials, "J. D. H." make a continuous trail from the Potomac River to the Pacific Coast. The highway passes through Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California. Trees and shrubs have been planted along the road by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Soft Crushable Velvet Types Prominent In Fall Millinery

Have you ever felt the urge to own a hat that you could pull on your head in any sort of a way and have it be coming? Well, many of the little new crushable velvet shapes, so smart for early autumn wear, are just that way—the sort one can just slam-bang on the head and feel that it is all right.

And here is just such a hat arrived from the atelier of Madame Agnes, the well-known Parisian creator. North, East, West, South, coming or going, it is all the same to this little hat. It can be worn with debonair smartness and ease, any way you put it. See for yourself, for the picture shows it below in this group worn in three different ways.

Your mood changes, you want a different bonnet; very well, you simply turn it around to please. Being flesh lined half-in-half of Tale and goblin velvet this works out beautifully. By the way, colors are used so often this season in two and more tones of the same. Dark gray with silver, browns of varying degree, and the smartest combination at the moment is beige with black. Beige is immensely popular for fall.

But to continue about this accommodating little hat, if the vagabond spirit gets you, pull one of its cute brimlets down on the side and dent the crown as shown in the lower left corner of this group.

Change your mood—around the hat goes with the wider part of the brim turned up, and you have an exceedingly smart looking cloche with the crown folded slightly down the back, fitting the head snugly, the dark-toned velvet to the face, as shown to the right.

Another mood—you want a different bonnet. Turn it all way round, as per center view. Pull the crown down on one side with the littlest rim in front. Almost forgot to mention that being made of softest silk velvet, this hat will roll up so that you can pack it away in the corner of your week-end case.

The other two hats exploit the idea of self-trim. One uses smocking for decoration, the other employs an application of handmade velvet flowers designed in several colors which blend with the hat itself.

THE IMPORTANT GARNISH

It was a little New York city school girl who raised her hand in the cooking class when the teacher asked, "What is a garnish?" and all the rest of the class looked dumbfounded.

"I know teacher," piped Yetta. "It's parsley."

There are a good many women like Yetta, who think that parsley is all there is to the entire subject of garnishing foods to make them more attractive.

Parsley and lemon are the housewife's stand-bys for garnishes, because they are always obtainable, twelve months out of the twelve. The housewife who has not access to large markets can grow her own parsley in a pot on the kitchen window sill. Of course, lemons are always to be found in every well-stocked kitchen, and there is scarcely a day when it is not needed for something. Fish, whether canned or fresh, is one meat which seems to demand a few drops of lemon juice to bring out its flavor, and for such garnishes the lemon should be cut into sections lengthwise, six sections from one lemon. These long sections are much easier to use than slices are, though slices are decorative.

Cold meats look very tempting when carefully arranged on a large platter garnished not only with parsley, but with other decorative foods as well, such as slices of firm red tomato, each with a slice of olive in its center, disks of carrot or cucumber, rings of sweet green pepper or onion, or tiny disks of sliced sweet gerkins. Tiny red radishes, either plain or cut into buds, and whole olives are always good looking, either on a platter of cold meats or decorating a salad.

In garnishing salads and desserts, nut meats and candied or maraschino cherries are a pretty garnish. Stiff jelly may be cut into tiny cubes with a sharp knife, or scooped into balls with a vegetable scoop. This little tool is very useful, in making balls of apple, banana, watermelon, beet, etc., to rim up various dishes. Capers and tiny pickled onions are also piquant as well as attractive garnishes.

Flavor of Curry Helps Vegetables With Rice

The flavor of curry in sauce need not be limited to lamb or chicken, although many of the East India dishes in which this flavor was introduced to the Western world were made of these meats. A combination of vegetables with rice can be made tasty and unusual if a little curry powder is added to the sauce. The bureau of home economics gives the following directions for making a vegetable curry:

Vegetable Curry

One-half cupful rice, one cupful diced onion, one cupful diced carrots, one cupful fresh or canned peas, one cupful diced celery, four tablespoonfuls butter, one-half teaspoonful salt, or to season, one-quarter teaspoonful curry, two teaspoonfuls worcestershire sauce.

Wash and cook the rice in three pints of boiling salted water. Drain and let it stand over steam until the grains swell and become separate. Cook the vegetables in a small amount of water and just before removing from the stove add one cupful of canned peas, or if fresh peas are available, cook them with the other vegetables. Use the liquid from the vegetables, and add the salt, curry and worcestershire sauce. Make a ring of the cooked rice, placing the vegetables in the center, and pour over them the liquid mixture. Serve very hot.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"SCAPEGOATS"

A very common word, familiar to everybody, to describe a person who is made to suffer or to carry blame for offenses for which others are at least partly responsible, is "scapegoat." The term had its beginning in a practice observed in Jewish antiquity.

The difference between the original scapegoat, however, and its modern counterpart is that the former escaped, whereas by the time today's scapegoat has earned the appellation he has usually been made to pay for the iniquity that has been heaped upon him!

The original "scapegoat" was a real goat, on whose head the ancient Hebrews on their Day of Atonement, symbolically placed their sins. After all had been relieved of their burdens of conscience and the transfer had been made to the goat, the animal would be released and permitted to escape into the wilderness! Hence our "scapegoat!"

ONLY CARS THAT BUILD CONFIDENCE PROVE PROFITABLE TO THE USED CAR DEALER IN THE LONG RUN

This Principle is the Foundation Upon Which the Success of the Dusebury Used Car Sales Company Has Been Built.

The price that is paid for any commodity is only important in relation to the value received. This is particularly true of the used car business, for while there are many hidden values in used cars, there are likewise a host of problems that confront the inexperienced purchaser. The best way to eliminate these problems is to buy of an established and reputable dealer such as the Dusebury Used Car Co. at 1130 East Long street. Like every other firm that has attained success in this line they know that the confidence of their customers is their most valuable asset.

Did you ever stop to think that everybody drives a used car. Take a brand new, shining automobile out of the salesroom, drive it around the street the rest of the day, and there are those who would consider it a used car. Within a few weeks or months its status is permanently established. So much for the arguments of those mistaken persons who think it calls for a concession of their pride to consider anything but a new car right out of the factory.

Confidence in the hands of all business, but in no other field of activity does it mean more than in the used car line. Realizing this fact, Mr. J. W. Dusenbury, head of the concern, sees to it, that no car leaves this establishment unless it will make for the company a permanent friend and customer. This policy is largely responsible for the firm's well-known reputation for fair dealing.

Unquestionably there are dealers who feel a relief when a customer drives off with an automobile. Such men proceed upon the principle that their entire duty lies in making the sale and getting the perchaser into the street under their own motion. From then on they believe the responsibility for the performance of the car rests entirely with the new owner. With the Dusebury Used Car Sales such destructive ideas find no place in any phase of the business. Every car must be right, if not, it is made right. Any car in the entire stock may be tested in any manner necessary to convince the buyer of its worth.

When quality and care has gone into the manufacture of an automobile, it is not unusual for them to give thousands and thousands of miles of service after thier original owners have parted with them. It is a fact beyond dispute that a good used car can be purchased more cheaply and will provide better service than a cheap new one. The quality of materials and workmanship is not limited in a used car by the price paid. But on the contrary, by the price it was made to sell for. Thus the final purchaser while getting the benefit of lasting quality intended for the original buyer —pays only the used car price.

The majority of all automobiles, today, are sold on terms. Fully coversant with the important part taken by the deferred payment plan in the sale of cars the company has made it a point to discard from this part of the transaction everything involving red tape and inconvenience to the customer. So well has the management succeeded in this respect that the car bought on terms is delivered to the purchaser in practically the same time as the one bought for cash.

It is safe to assert that no firm in the city enjoys a higher prestige in its field than the Dusebury Used Car Sales Co. Nor is there any firm more deserving of it.

The Man with Three Names

by Harold MacGrath

COPYRIGHT BY THE BELL SYNDICATE INC.

"The dark," said Nancy, "has no terrors for either of us. It all depends upon what you read."

"And what do you read?" asked Mansfield, who was really a fine scholar.

"Good books, books about human beings who are striving to better themselves. I like that 'Prosaic Lives.' The author wrote from his heart."

Mansfield picked up the book from the table. "A green young man. It is quite patent that he wrote from his heart, not from a brain that had gathered the facts first-hand and sifted false ideas from the true. A good book, a worth-while book, must be the result of a nicely balanced brain and heart. If you let the heart dictate, you generally invite trouble. It is as if a soldier were giving orders to his general. A well-written book, but green."

"But what an odd name to assume!" Betty balanced the book on her palm. "George Cottar; Kipling's Brush Boy. And there you are," declared her father. "A dreamer, not a doer; a dweller in a fairyland of his own making, observing life through roseate clouds"

"But what would we do in this world if there weren't any Brushwood Boys?" asked Nancy. "Don't we all make believe at one time or another? Do you mean to tell me that you've never built any dreams?

"Oh, when I was a youngster, probably—the kind of dreams you mean. I have my dreams all right; but they come to me in the form of blue-prints. And I have the advantage over your George Cottar, for my dreams come true."

"Didn't his?" said Betty softly.

"But that's a story only. It happened in a book" and Mansfield started for the hall.

People in Bannister, on the morrow, when they picked up the Bannister Herald off the front steps, sensed a shock, at once pleasurable and sorrowful. By noon the whole city was aware of the fact that Mansfield had been boldly and skillfully assailed in his castle-keep.

Between the counsel for the Mansfield interests in Bannister and Mansfield himself there were exchanged a series of brief telegrams. An excerpt of the story had been telegraphed to Washington.

From Washington: "Is it blackmail? Give the editor a scare."

From Bannister: "No blackmail. He won't scare. Have seen his proofs. We can't do anything through courts."

From Washington: "Buy the sheet."

From Bannister: "Editor says it is not for sale."

From Washington: "What is editor's name?"

When Mansfield received the answer to this query, he was in his study. Impatiently he ripped open the yellow envelope and drew out—Medusa's head! Anyhow he stared at the sheet, motionless and stonily; in a kind of a petrified astonishment. He had all but forgotten the name and the incident.

"Brandon Cathewe!"

CHAPTER III

Mansfield Plans Reprisal.

That fellow, that impertinent beggar Cathewe, had taken a joke in earnest! Gone to Bannister and bought a newspaper! But why was he turning his cannon upon him?

Dunleigh Mansfield wondered. If he wanted Betty, why attack the father in this manner? The infernal blackguard!

Of course he had purchased the invention outright, at an absurd figure. That was merely good business. A perfectly legal business deal; the moral side of it was negligible.

Spite, probably! Young Cathewe had suddenly realized that Betty was as far out of his reach as the stars, and had now embarked upon a campaign of spite.

The young anarchist must be suppressed before he made any headway. Mansfield must find out how long the fool had been in Bannister and what success he was making of the sheet. Actually gone to Bannister to become a "force!"

Betty, however, must know nothing; the scurrilous sheet must not fall into her hands! It was perfectly legitimate business; but the young woman had odd ideas in her head.

Soon she would be returning to Bannister. He did not want her to go back there at all, but there was apparently no visible method by which he could dissuade her.

ABOUT THE BIRDS

"Of course," Billie Brownie said, "I am not nearly so fond of a museum as I am of a zoo or menagerie where there are live animals.

"In a museum they have stuffed animals and old, old things. They have old, old rocks and stones and they have models of old stone villages—and such places."

"What are models?" asked one of the other Brownies.

"A model of an Indian village is a small imitation of a real one. There are toy villages made of cardboard. They could be called model villages for they are like the real ones.

"There Was the Rhinoceros Hornbill to See."

"Of course a museum teaches one a great deal and is very, very interesting, only I don't like museums as well as I do zoos.

"However they do help us to know of other places and creatures and I've found my trips to museums most interesting, indeed.

"I took another trip the other day, and there were some of the things I saw which I want to tell you about:

"There was a chimney swallow and its nest. The chimney swallow, you know, cannot perch so he clings. The nest is always built in hollow trees or on the sides of a chimney for this reason.

"He wears black feathers and they make their nest out of little sticks which are broken up into small pieces.

"Then I saw the weaver bird. There are many kinds of these birds in Africa. They like the hottest parts of that country, too. Also some are to be found in large flocks and the nests, which are of grass, are woven neatly and often take up a whole tree.

"This bird is black and something like a sparrow. He wears yellow feathers on his head.

"He likes to spread over a great deal of tree space just as some folks like to have more room than others.

"Ah, yes, there are many different things to be seen in a museum and I learn a lot every time I take a trip to one.

"There was the rhinoceros hornbill to see, from the Malay peninsula. He is black and yellow underneath. His beak is yellow, too.

"The horn is on top of his beak.

"These birds nest in hollow trees. While they are nesting, Mrs. Hornbill is kept inside by Mr. Hornbill. He seals up the entrance to the nest with mud and other soft substances.

"He leaves only a small opening, through which Mrs. Hornbill can put her beak, and he feeds her.

"He wants to make sure, and so does she, that the eggs will hatch out quite safely.

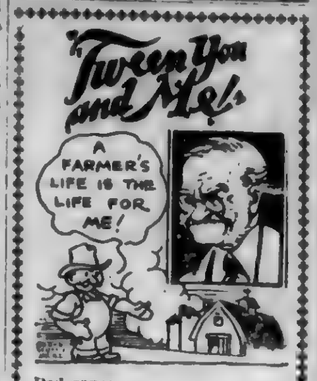
"On account of their weight they like to get on heavy branches and they're fond of fruit; oh, yes, they're very fond of fruit.

"So you see," Billie Brownie continued, "I saw different kinds of birds and learned what they did and of the kinds of nests they built and of some of their ways.

"And there were many children visiting the museum this time too. They did not see me, of course, because I wore my invisible brown suit, but I enjoyed seeing them.

"One part of the museum, or, rather, one of the buildings, was entirely for children and everything was arranged so that one didn't have to be so very tall to see perfectly.

"In fact it was better, much better, not to be too tall.



"It's fun to travel," said Billie Brownie, after he had paused for a moment and looked about him, "but it's nice to stay at home, too.

"In fact I haven't made up my mind whether it was more fun to see new sights or the old familiar loved ones.

"And I'm not sure," he went on, "whether I will ever make up my mind about this question!

"I don't believe I ever will," he smiled laughingly.

LEAGUERS AT WEEK-END CAMP

Glenwood Epworth League Members Enjoy Three-Day Outing.

Glenwood young people spent the week-end at Camp Henderson, a fresh-air camp of the Columbus District Epworth Leagues. This occasion proved to be one of the outstanding events of its kind in many years.

The camp, which was under the direction of Joe Wyman, opened officially on Saturday evening with a campfire service. Pep songs, led by Miss Cora Chase, introduced the program. "Follow the Gleam" was the general theme. The fourfold life was discussed in a beautiful and effective way by members of the group. This discussion, which challenged those present to the highest ideals of a Christian youth, closed with that story from the days of knighthood, "The Search for the Grail." A candle light service followed, while "Follow the Gleam" was sung. This service closed with a definite camp-prayer in which all felt the nearness of God.

A general outline of the three-day event was announced. Ernest Martindale, editor of the camp paper, announced the staff and urged immediate work.

Trades His Smiles

Bruce R. Scott, shoe dealer and repairman with store space in the Ritz Theatre building, has just finished remodeling his store and shop, bringing it to the point where many said it was impossible to do so when he began business there several months ago. Scott has total floor space of 13 feet square which houses his electric repair machines and his retail shoe store. Every inch of space is taken care of but yet working conditions are suitable.

Mr. Scott has as his motto "Trade Your Smiles." He has used it since he began business and says he can think of no better method to hold the favor of the people than to trade your smiles. His father, the late Charles E. Scott, and a prominent dentist, Dr. Pierce, both of Detroit used the motto before him and he is now endeavoring to carry on their cheerfulness in business methods by trading smiles.

Mr. and Mrs. Waldo B. Cherry of Sharon, Pa., have returned home after a week's visit with Mr. Cherry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cherry, 228 S. Terrace St.

SEWERS IN BAD ORDER

Committee's Report Shows Hilltop Sewers Sadly in Need of Attention.

Resolving to get as much light as possible on the Hilltop sewer situation in order to reach a just decision for further guidance in any action that may be taken in the future and if possible find what is wrong with the Hilltop sewer system, causing flooded basements in many parts of this section of the city, after a hard rain, the executive committee of the Hilltop Permanent Sewer Relief Committee, along with other parties as witnesses made personal inspection of a number of sewers in this section during the past month.

In some cases, according to the committee's report the sewers are filled with debris to the extent that it requires at times from 3 to 5 hours for the storm water to get out of the sewer drop. At another place it was found the sewer was half full of sewerage and the same not moving. In other instances it was found that the catchbasin was in the bottom of the sewer. In another instance it was found that sewerage conditions were worse in sewers where no downspouts were drained into them than in the sewers where downspouts were connected.

The full report of the committee follows.

Aug. 16th, 1927.

Storm sewer at corner of Violet and Wheatland, filled up between sewer drop-manhole, takes storm water 3 to 5 hours to go out of sewer drop. Witness Mr. Barnhart.

Corner of Fremont and alley between Burgess and Richardson, sewers one-half full of sewerage not moving.

Rear of 335 Burgess, sewer almost stopped.

Alley north of Sullivant and alley between Burgess and Rich, 9½ inches of sewerage in bottom of manhole catchbasin pan in bottom. Witnesses, Walter L. Bugh, Ray Elsig and Mr. Beezold.

Several manholes could not be opened.

Alley between Highland and Wheatland, corner of Palmetto, one-half full, moving slowly. Rest of manholes were more or less clogged.

Wheatland storm sewer, 4-foot sewer has less than 28 inches of clearance and 300 or 400 feet from mouth has two 2-foot sewer pipes leading to open ditches allowing dirt to wash in.

Aug. 23d, 1927.

Drop at 309 Columbian Ave., found sanitary sewer in bad condition, about 6 inches of sewerage, practically no water moving.

281 Columbian Ave., in practically the same condition as above.

221 Columbian Ave., in much worse condition.

Storm sewer at 129 Lechner Ave., 18 inches in drain, one-third full of dirt. Witnesses, George M. Harper and Edward Reese.

Sanitary sewer at 30 Whitethorne, one-half choked with sewerage.

Sanitary sewer at rear of Highland Avenue school, very dirty.

Sanitary sewer at rear of 28 Wheatland, very bad.

Sanitary sewer at rear of 82 Wheatland, very bad.

Witnesses to 28 and 82 S. Wheatland are S. A. Bush and Mr. Watners.

Storm sewer at Wheatland and Violet, 10-inch lead between catchbasin and manhole completely filled with trash and dirt. Witness Mr. Barnhart.

Sanitary sewer corner Grace and alley west of Wheatland, 8 inches of sewerage in manhole, not moving. Witness W. E. Mansburger.

Sanitary sewer rear of 90 N. Park, manhole and sewer very bad.

Sanitary sewer corner Violet, west of Oakley, very bad, 8 inches of sewerage, top of manhole 10 inches below alley level.

Sanitary sewer manhole west of Eldon near Voss Bros. shop, 7 inches below level of alley, surface water runs in from three ways.

Sanitary sewer manhole in alley at side of 2589 Fremont Ave., 6 or 8 inches of sewerage not moving, condition very bad, top raised, new lid, pan from old lid in bottom of manhole.

Same sewer at junction of sewer in alley north of Sullivant avenue, 9½ inches of sewerage and pan from old top in bottom of manhole.

Since our first inspection two weeks prior to this one the top of manholes have been raised to level of alley but no attention was paid to the condition of the sewer.

August 24th, 1927.

Broadview and Westgate addition, no down spouts in sanitary sewer. One manhole on Roys avenue bottom clogged, very little water moving, in worse condition than where water is coming in.

The leaguers were then divided into two groups and given 30 minutes to select a leader, a name, song and yell, and put on a short stunt. During this time the chaperons, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Garrison and the cook, W. W. Weatherman, who were selected as judges, prepared the score cards for the three-day events.

At the appointed time the two groups returned to the campfire, one bearing the name "Bear Cats," with Paul Walton as leader, and the other as "Many-Ha-Has," with Hollis Barber as leader.

At 10 a. m. Sunday all members of the camp were transported by auto to the Worthington M. E. church for worship.

Dinner followed the return to camp and then followed two hours of busy, instructive work.

At 4 o'clock the group gathered for a delightful hour of story telling. Epworth League services were held about the campfire at 8:30, the young people of the Worthington Epworth League joined with the Glenwood Leaguers in a most impressive campfire service. "Vacationing with Christ" was the topic for discussion. Music for the service was furnished by a male quartet and a young women's quartet from the group.

The big stunts followed. "Many-Ha-Has" brought out a vivid message based on the text, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." The "Bear Cats" followed with a delightfully peppy stunt on "Good Sportsmanship." The reading of the camp paper followed, which brought many a hearty laugh. This was followed by a marshmallow toast and campfire chat. As a fitting climax to the day the campers gathered in a circle about the fire and sang "Good Night Campers." Then all hands were joined in a prayer circle in which all thanked the great creator for the privilege of enjoying a happy day in His great out-of-doors.

Monday brought the heart and arrow hunt in which the "Many-Ha-Has" showed their cleverness. The day also brought the pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Barber, as special guests.

At 4 p. m. the Bear Cats and Many-Ha-Has and visitors assembled for their last pow-pow, when the "Many-Ha-Has" were announced as winners and awarded the prize.

Campers then awarded Dr. Barber a gift with the following instruction: "Take it to conference, you may need it." The pastor found buried deep in a huge box, a small jar of prunes, and responded graciously to the gift.

"A woman and a melon," remarked Mr. Blotto, "shouldn't be too fresh."

"Yeeh," replied the Little Woman, "and if they're too ripe who wants 'em?"

KEEPING STEP WITH PROGRESS

By Giving the Public a Most Comprehensive Funeral Directing and Embalming Service, Glenn L. Myers Has Gained a Prominent Place in This Profession and Built Up a Large Clientele.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In all the professions there are men who stand pre-eminently at the front, due to their inherent ability, thorough knowledge of the business in which they are engaged, and their natural aptitude to study each individual attainment and give it a touch that is not "just ordinary." By possessing this unusual combination to a marked degree, Glenn L. Myers has become a recognized leader in the undertaking and embalming profession. Nor is this reputation confined to his home city, as he conducts funerals throughout central Ohio, and is well and favorably known in undertaking circles all over the state. He is secretary and treasurer of the State Board of Embalming Examiners of Ohio, this being his second appointment.

During the time he has been identified with this profession he has always kept in close touch with everything new and progressive in the way of embalming and equipment, so it is needless to say that he is prepared from every standpoint to carry out all the work which is ever associated with this calling, or that he is well versed in its every feature. It is not too much to assert that this business is one of the best conducted and most substantial professional enterprises in the city.

Myers' Funeral Home is generally conceded to be one of the finest in the United States. Its appointments represent the very latest ideas of the profession and its facilities are unusual when its comes to rendering a service that is complete in every essential. It is, indeed, a real convenience to its patrons, and reflects the admirable manner in which it is conducted. Entering this home one is impressed with the atmosphere of intimate privacy and home-like comfort, and at the same time, is filled with a feeling of confidence in the newly made friends who are to guide your action during your visit, or to take care of the little details so distressing in the hour of grief and tribulation.

The chapel, like the home itself, needs second to none, and provides a beautiful setting for the last rites. It has a seating capacity of 225 and the family room which adjoins it, 75. It is equipped with a pipe organ which is an exact replica of the one in Napoleon's tomb. A most interesting feature of this organ is its cathedral chimes and gong. The quiet elegance of the chapel is still further accentuated by its mellow lights and beautiful furnishings.

Through professional work of the highest order Mr. Myers has merited the success he has achieved, for it is generally known, he has conducted some of the largest funerals ever held in this part of the state, and in a most commendable manner. In fact, courtesy and accommodation have been the by-words of his profession. A policy which has won the confidence and heartfelt commendation of many clients, who have found great satisfaction in being relieved of the many troublesome and vexatious details in time of sorrow by reason of his comprehensive and diplomatic service.

In addition to the funeral home at 23 West Second avenue, Mr. Myers maintains for the convenience of his Hilltop patrons, a branch at 2433 Sullivant Avenue.

It goes without saying that Mr. Myers deserves the prestige he holds—the good-will he enjoys.

Fine Leather Coats Add Color to the Autumn Picture

Fortunate is she whose privilege it is to go a late vacationing, not only from the pleasure standpoint, but from the clothes phase as well. Choosing an autumn vacation wardrobe is quite inspirational, considering that everybody is in the nest of things new, with fall style exhibits vying with each other as to which can display the most beautiful apparel. One has the satisfaction, too, of knowing that clothes bought now will be timely even after return from the vacation jaunt.

Of course no up-to-date woman is going to be contented to start on a coloring trip without providing herself with one of the new autumn leather coats which are so enticing to the autumn landscape. They're thrilling when it comes to "looks" and as to service, well, every one with a far-seeing eye to practicality should own a leather coat.

The imported models are very alluring. They have that indefinable something in niceties of detail and coloring which proclaim their foreign origin, and the higher-grade shops all carry them. The original of the one in the picture is a marvel of fine coloring, being of violet leather trimmed with snakeskin. It is topped with a hat of leather in the same tone.

However, blacks, browns, wine shades and greens prevail both in foreign and domestic models. These coats are in the main confined to regulation straight smart lines with patch pockets, belts and with wool lining in sports effects. Copies of imported models are very attractively priced.

So much for the motor-travel coat. As to the biker, the skater and every outdoor enthusiast who must have freedom of limbs, the short leather types are of greater appeal. Lining in these are sometimes wool and sometimes sateen, according to their price.

Now that the football season is nigh leather coats are taking on an irresistible lure for college girl and debutante, and you may be sure that they will make their appearance most colorfully in great numbers.

Leather lumber jackets with knitted bands are popular with the younger set, also for juniors and children.

SUPREMACY IN THE REALM OF GIFTS AND JEWELRY IN COLUMBUS

Budd and Company Has Won This Enviable Position In Its Line By Making the Best Interests of Its Customers Its First Consideration.

Down through the ages has come the universal custom of gift giving. Ancient people showed their reverence and respect for kings and queens by bringing gifts to lay at their feet. It is much the same today excepting that this custom is not confined to royalty and the rich. Now in all walks of life gifts are regarded as a happy medium of showing appreciation, affection and respect for one's friends, family and fellowmen. In expressing this sentiment jewelry has remained the favorite token throughout the centuries. And few jewelers in Columbus, if any, meet the requirements of the gift buyer better than Budd and Company at 23 N. High St. It has attained a reputation in this respect that brings it business from all over Central Ohio.

No matter whether you want a little remembrance for an infant celebrating its first birthday or an elegant gift for an old couple celebrating their golden anniversary, you will find the stocks here complete, and not only offer a wide variety from which to choose, but always reflect the correct mode of the period.

However, the services of this store does not stop with simply selling you a chest of silver, watch or diamond. It goes further. If the patron is undecided or in doubt as to the appropriate thing to give, the personnel of the firm is able to offer helpful suggestions. Not only are they thoroughly conversant with this particular phase of the business, but close students of social etiquette as well. The public has come to know this, and perhaps this will explain why those with gift problems to solve so often turn to this store for the solution of their difficulties. They know that any selection made here will not only be in good taste, but will please the recipient and at the same time will retain its beauty and usefulness for years.

Unlike the average jeweler who oftentimes cheapens the most beautiful things by submerging them in inferior surroundings, Budd and Company makes every effort to enhance them. As a result of this policy, its store is one of the most beautifully appointed retail establishments in the city. Its equipment and furnishings are of the most modern type, and its stock is arranged in such a manner as to give its patrons every opportunity to "just look around" if they wish, or compare before buying. In fact, the neat and orderly arrangement of the interior reminds one of that old saying, "a place for everything and everything in its place."

In handling the affairs of the company, Mr. E. F. Krause, its head, adheres to a set of standards, which, when they come to be analyzed, are so closely akin to the Golden Rule that it would be simply a waste of time to seek a more accurate designation for them. And he, like other progressive business men, has found it pays richly in more ways than one.

While this firm's reputation in the jewelry line is an outstanding one, it is not resting on its oars, so to speak. On the contrary, it is still looking forward, still planning for the future and still striving to give this community not only merchandise of the highest artistic merit and intrinsic worth, but a quality of service that will intercept the needs and meet the requirements of the day in the fullest possible manner. So in view of this policy is it any wonder that Budd and Company is growing and ever widening its circle of friends and patrons?

Indian Peace Sign

When used to mean "friend," the Indian sign of the pipe or of smoking is made as follows: (1) Tips of the two first fingers of the right hand placed against or at right angles to the mouth; (2) suddenly elevated upward and outward to imitate smoke expelled. A ceremonial sign for peace or friendship is the extended fingers, separated, interlocked in front of the breast, hands horizontal, backs outward. When the idea conveyed is peace or friendship with the whites, the handshaking of the latter is adopted.

The Man with Three Names
by Harold MacGrath

COPYRIGHT BY THE BELL SYNDICATE INC.

Why didn't he want her to go back? That puzzled him. Of what was he afraid? That in returning to Bannister she might eventually learn that her father was not quite the demigod she pictured him?

Well, he would have Cathewe out of the way before she did return. His only concern was that she might stumble upon something in type.

Very few in Bannister would dare whisper even that Dudleigh Mansfield was not always scrupulous.

There existed, though, a human being who could embark upon such an enterprise as that he had named as a condition to wooing Betty, who could accept conditions which would have wrinkled the brow of the young Hercules.

Mansfield recalled what he could of that remarkable interview. Why, the fellow had caught the spirit of the jest, but had pinned the jester down to a gentleman's agreement.

Gone to Bannister, bought that semi-Socialist sheet, all with the idea of winning Betty! The fellow ought to be looked over by the commission in lunacy.

In one manner or another he must be driven out of Bannister, where he did not belong.

Mansfield's prerogatives had been encroached upon, and the encroacher must be punished, as an example and a warning to other editors that one man ruled the destines of Bannister.

Suddenly he had it; and the illumination chilled him slightly. Reprisal! The whole affair on shipboard a blind, Betty a pretense.

The son of some man he had broken via Wall Street method. The affair now had sense and significance. Reprisal!

Very good. What he had meted out to the father he would mete out to the son!

I wish I had some new words to describe Nancy and Betty or that I could twist the old ones about in such a fashion as to make them look new! To have described these two young women a thousand years ago, when the language blocks were freshly painted!

Both of them had beauty. The beauty of one was claudlike; a summer cloud, brilliantly white against the blue, changing subtly and continuously, mirrored on the stream—a serene beauty. Her lovely white arms were spread out on each side of her. Her skin, reflecting the firelight, was like a goldbeater's leaf, and there were magic threads of gold in the blue iris of her eye. Her hair was a ruddy brown, like the leaf of the copper-beech in October.

The other girl was resting her elbows on her knees, her chin in the cup of her palms. She was as pretty as a hollyhock; homesy, frank, and friendly. Good folks—a summer cloud and a hollyhock!

There was no continuity to Nancy Maddox's thoughts. They were like butterflies, wheeling and turning in a most wonderful garden.

These amazing two weeks in Washington! It seemed to her that she wasn't real, that in some mysterious fashion she had been incorporated between the covers of an English society novel. Ambassadors and diplomats, officers from all parts of the world, heroes and politicians! Men with brains to sell. And they danced with Nancy Maddox because she was Betty Mansfield's friend.

FOOTWEAR LEADERSHIP AND STILL GROWING

Quality at the Right Price Is the Policy Which Has Brought Holbrook's Bootery Supremacy in the Shoe Line and a Following Which Is Ever Increasing.

In every line of business in every city there are always to be found a few firms which because of fair dealing, progressive ideas, good merchandise and superior service—lead in their particular line, and a noteworthy illustration of this observation is to be found in the success of Holbrook's Bootery at 67 S. High St.

As is well known this store is the home of the famous Stetson shoes, which for over 42 years have represented the advances of the shoe-makers' art. Patterned by foremost footwear designers, built of the finest materials obtainable and produced by craftsmen of superior skill, "Stetson's" have won a prestige in their field enjoyed by no other shoe, and are just as popular in towns and cities throughout the country as they are in Columbus.

The stock carried by Holbrook's Bootery is in keeping with the reputation of its merchandise. Here are to be found shoes adapted, literally, to every walk of life. They embrace all styles, qualities and descriptions from the daintiest ladies' dancing pumps to the strong, durable sport shoe or riding boot. In fact, it is safe to assert that there is no more complete assortment of footwear in the city. Nor is there one where quality is more in evidence. No matter what shoe a patron may select it is certain to carry the name of a nationally-known manufacturer.

But success in the shoe business does not simply rest in furnishing real quality. A good shoe merchant must know how to fit shoes, and it is this feature of the store's service that has made Holbrook's Bootery so popular with all classes. The clerks here are more than shoe salesmen: they are shoe experts who understand the construction of the foot and the principles of scientific fitting, and thus they are able in the great majority of cases to correct foot ills by proper shoe fitting. To say that this store is the headquarters for all those who know that correctly fitted shoes are essential to efficiency and physical fitness is merely to state the obvious.

Another thing that has done much to maintain this firm's position of leadership in the shoe line is the fact that it is always the first to introduce the new footwear fashions to Columbus. Just a little in advance of the rest, it displays each season the styles and leathers that are to be worn. As a result, smart dressers have come to look to it to learn "what's what" in correct shoes for any occasion.

If there has been a secret in this firm's continuous growth and success, it is that its head, Mr. Dick Mahanna has made friends of his patrons through the medium of responsible service and quality merchandise sold at moderate prices, and that careful, personal supervision of the business which has won the confidence of the public.

Behind Holbrook's Bootery is a record of 27 years in the shoe business. It is one of accomplishment. And taken, by and large, it is worthy of emulation from any standpoint.

Veteran Pavements are Brick Pavements
NO state should appreciate better than Ohio the solid investment value in vitrified brick pavements.
Bucyrus, Canton, Cleveland, Lancaster and Steubenville are some of the Ohio cities which are driving on brick pavements more than 30 years old. A score more of Ohio communities are profiting by brick pavements which have already delivered more than a quarter-century of service with a minimum of dollars spent for upkeep and repairs. Vitrified brick pavements being properly laid today will be in service in 1950.

CAPTAIN KIDD

Whether it is through a grown-up who attends a masque as Captain Kidd, a small boy exhibiting his prowess with a toy sword and calling himself "Captain Kidd" or one of those periodic revivals of the legend of Captain Kidd's buried treasure, we are never without some reminder of this character who has come down to us not only in legend and tradition and fiction, but in history.

For Captain Kidd, though a highly colored and romantic figure, is no fictitious character out of a fable or old play, as many people who are unfamiliar with his origin may imagine. The authentic ancestor of the modern masquerading Captain Kidd was William Kidd, a British navigator who lived from 1650 to 1701. He was a well-known trader out of the colony of New York and during the war between England and France became famous for his bravery and his skill as a seaman.

In 1695 Captain Kidd received commissions from the king to capture pirates, and when, after sailing forth in his famous galley, the Adventure, he did not return with ships, it was rumored that he himself had turned pirate and was roving the seas with his stolen treasure. Learning of this, he sailed boldly into Boston harbor and delivered to be governor a great hoard of treasure which he had captured. Nevertheless he was arrested, and history tells us, unjustly tried and hanged in London on May 23, 1701.

After Captain Kidd's death it was rumored about that he and his crew had buried immense treasure along the coast of the United States. A part of the booty of the ship Quedah was actually found secreted off Gardiner's Island, off Montauk Point, Long Island

The "luck" that I believe in
Is that which comes with work,
And no one ever finds it
Who's content to wish and shirk
The man the world calls "lucky"
Will tell you every one
That success comes not by wishing,
But by hard work, bravely done.

HIGHLAND GETS FLYING START

Plans Already Under Way for the Many Activities of the School for the Coming Year.

Highland Avenue school got off to a flying start Monday. In the words of the "Aero" world it was a perfect "take off." Registration period was held from 8:15 to 9:00 at which time Mr. Keighley addressed the new 7B boys and girls in the Glenwood church auditorium. By the 3rd period the school was organized for the semester and classes were on their regular schedule.

Due to the growth in interest in the manual arts at Highland it was necessary to increase the teaching personnel of the department. Mr. Newman, a graduate of Miami university, is the new instructor.

Mr. Birmingham, who spent the summer teaching and studying art and music in New York City, has returned to Highland with many new and interesting ideas to make his courses even more interesting. He is especially delighted with the aptitude and talent exhibited by the new pupils from West Broad and other schools which seem to promise a very successful year.

The orchestra under his direction is being whipped into shape and in a very short time he promises to have it break into harmonious and tuneful sounds.

Mr. Layman, who has charge of Highland athletic activities announces that plans have been completed for the construction of a tennis court. An opportunity will be given to all boys and girls to learn the game under competent instruction. Friday a meeting will be held at which schedules for speed ball and intramural activities will be arranged.

Miss Trump is now holding tryouts for the Girls' Glee club and expects to have her first rehearsal next week. A great many girls are interested and a large well-balanced club is anticipated.

Mr. Cheadle, who comes to Highland as a new teacher this year, will have charge of the Boys' Glee club. The first rehearsal will be held Friday and from the interest all ready shown Mr. Cheadle looks forward to a very successful year.

REGISTRATION BIG AT W. BROAD

Six Classes on Part Time Schedule—Portables to Relieve Congestion—Registration 1058.

Last Monday, Sept. 19, was the sixteenth anniversary of the opening of West Broad Street school. At the first opening but 252 pupils were registered and six teachers comprised the teaching force. Miss Harriet Judd opened the school as principal and has been in continuous charge.

Since its first opening sixteen years ago the school has been relieved three times, and at the opening this year was again crowded to the extent that some of the pupils can be accommodated only on half time schedule. However, it is hoped that this feature will only be temporary, as the board of education plan to erect portables to eliminate the congestion.

On Tuesday, the second day school was in session, the registration total was 1058, leading all elementary schools of the city.

The following teachers have been assigned:

Catherine Hutt, 6A; Charlotte Walton, 6A-B; Olive Hicks, 6B; Nesley Hershner, 6B; Isabelle Mangan, 5A; Fern Ryerson, 5A; Merle Rader, 5B; Florence Hartman, 5B; Roma Waymer, 4A; Ludlie Schweizer, 4A-B; Louise Barry, 4B; Rose Finkelstein, 1B; Mary Barrett, 3A; Ethel McClish, 3B; Frances Forbes, 3B; Cora Nuetzel, 3B; MabelMcKellar, 2A; Mabel Graw, 2B; Florence Thompson, 2B; Katherine Johnson, 2B; Mary Birch, 1A; Bess Sperry, 1B; Catherine Sperry, 1B; Christena Leist, 1B; Olga Christensen and Genevieve Hall, kindergarten, and Emma Clime, individual school.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen of Millersport, Ohio, Mrs. George Miller of Thornville, Ohio, and Mrs. C. T. Peters and son Owen, were guests of Mrs. P. W. Drumm and Mrs. C. W. Speckman, last week.

NEW ORDER OF SERVICES

Sunday Morning Preaching Service at Hillcrest Baptist Church at 9:30.

A new departure in the order of services has been inaugurated at the Hillcrest Baptist church and will be in effect at the next Sunday morning service.

Instead of following the custom which has been established for years, the morning preaching service will be held at 9:30 o'clock, instead of 10:45 This will be a unified service, including both the Sunday school scholars and those who worship at the morning service.

Following the preaching service those who wish to remain for the Sunday school will retire to the respective classes for a few moments of study, after which they will be dismissed.

Besides shortening the service somewhat, one of the outstanding features of the service will be the arranging of the service to suit both young and old people to a point where it can be enjoyed by all.

WESLEYAN OWNS FAMOUS BIBLE

University Has Unrevised Copy of King James Scripture Printed in 1611.

One of the most valued treasures in Ohio Wesleyan's rare book collection is the "She Bible," a copy of the first edition of the King James of 1611 unrevised.

The few copies extant gained the strange name because of the way noteworthy discrepancies compared with the true text. In Ruth 3:15 the appearance of the word "she" instead of "he" in the early edition sets the Wesleyan copy off as a rarity. The verse is in part, "and when she held it he measured five measures of barley, and laid it on her; and she went into the citie." According to scholars, the word "she" is erroneous and should have been "he."

A notable misprint in the "She Bible" is found in Matthew 26:36, "Then cometh Judas;" should read "Then cometh Jesus."

The volume was presented to the university by the late David S. Gray, a trustee and benefactor of the school. He received the book as a gift from an English clergyman.

You'll do better at Seiller's after all.

In November, 1921, a great ice storm wrecked more than one hundred thousand trees in New England. It is said that a century from now the effects of this storm upon the woodlands of New England will be plainly seen by an observer of tree habits.

LEADERSHIP---AND STILL GROWING

As Columbus has grown so has The Ohio-Curtis Company, Inc., extended its service, enlarged its facilities and widened its scope of activities.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In every line of business in every city there are always a few firms which, because of fair dealing, progressive ideas, modern equipment and superior service—lead in their particular line, and among such concerns in this city The Ohio-Curtis Company is a notable example.

This well-known company is one of the best equipped industries in the city, and the general excellence of its work has won for it an immense following. Equipped with machinery representing the very latest ideas in the business and employing only expert help has enabled the firm to render a service that, apart from being distinctly satisfactory to its patrons, has caused its name to become a synonym for quality cleaning and dyeing throughout this entire city.

Whether it be a mere cleansing or a complete change of color that is desired—this concern can handle the work, and in a most efficient manner. New shades are super-imposed over old ones in a way that makes the cloth appear fresh from the factory. Their process of cleaning not only removes the spots and stains from the fabrics, but gives new life to them as well. The delicate sheen of the most costly materials is preserved and intensified by their scientific methods. Aside from the careful handling of the goods every effort is made by the company to protect them in every way—not the least of which being that they are insured against all hazards from the time they leave patron until they are returned. This feature of its service has done much to place the firm high in the public's confidence.

Regular patrons find their current household bills materially reduced by the constant use of this firm's facilities. Apparel in a state that might well doom it to the discard is reclaimed for months more of usefulness. In fact, in the majority of cases, it is rendered just as serviceable and beautiful as the new garment that would be purchased to replace it, if the owner did not know about the many-sided cleaning and dyeing service of this progressive concern.

Added to these attributes is another characteristic of the firm, punctuality, and still another, courtesy. Both are unfailing. Goods are called for and delivered in exact compliance with promises made, and employees are taught and encouraged to win and hold the regard of patrons. This aim to render a courteous and efficient service is not confined by this concern to just cleaning and dyeing. A small pressing job receives the same careful attention, and this fact has become so well known to the public that it draws The Ohio-Curtis Company an ever-increasing number of friends and patrons.

The management of the company is in the hands of Messrs. F. A. Barney and J. A. Rorer and Mrs. N. L. Curtis. All have a wide and varied experience in the business in which they are engaged and are generally to be found on the right side of all progressive propositions.

The company's main office and plant is located at 1182-84-86 Bonham Avenue. As a matter of additional service, four fully equipped stores are maintained. They are located at 9 E. Fifth avenue, 1062 E. Livingston avenue, 853 N. High street and 1810 N. Fourth street.

To say that The Ohio-Curtis Company has built for itself a following and prestige creditable to its enterprise and progressiveness is merely to state the obvious.

WHEN THE COAL ARRIVED

When a ship arrived at Point Barrow, Alaska, the most northern of all Presbyterian mission stations, it brought eighty-five tons of coal besides the freight it carried. Men, women, and children all hurried to the hospital on this gala occasion, and at noon they sat down together in the long hall and had a dinner of reindeer stew, pilot bread, and coffee. They were indeed a happy company.

The coal was carried up the beach far enough to prevent risk of losing any on account of the tide. Many of the sacks were rotten and it was necessary to sew them up, to rescue the coal, or to pick up what was spilled on the sand.

Two women carried ten-gallon boxes of kerosene all the morning, and throughout the afternoon they sacked coal, tied up bags, or picked up loose coal. One of the women had a baby on her back. The missionary was amused to see how she kept it quiet even as she worked. With one hand she patted that little hump on her back at the same time that she continued to do her work. All the while she sang in a low voice. The other woman carried a long black stocking into which she dropped loose coal. When it was full she transferred the contents to a large gunny sack so that the coal could be carried more easily.

When the coal task was finished in the early evening, the two women remained behind to sift the sand for pieces of coal which might have been dropped. For coal is precious in Alaska.

Handsome Fox Fur Neckpiece Enriches the Autumn Ensemble

Bravo for the girl who has remained constant to her fur neckpiece throughout torrid summer days. Now is the time of her reward, for autumn breezes do begin to blow, and what so "comfy" as well as satisfying to her vanity on a fickle fall day, as a good-looking fur about shoulder and throat.

To say that these fashionable neckpieces are "foxy" describes them in more ways than one. From the mediaeval standpoint they are all of that. When it comes to the fur itself every branch of the fox family tree is represented in autumn's style parade. There is pointed fox in all its glory, blue fox, red, platinum and beige. As to white fox it holds its own triumphantly, regardless of the fact that it has been doing strenuous duty the whole summer through.

Imagination cannot picture anything more "swanky" in the way of a fall costume or suit enhanced with a flattering fox scarf. The autumn land cape will be crowded with just such.

A fox neckpiece never fails to enrich the dressy three-piece ensemble as this picture so charmingly proves.

With the smart tweed suit of autumn vogue, there is nothing so swagger as a handsome fox fur piece, preferably in beige or in platinum.

Perhaps the newest in fox fur pieces are the double or twin animal types. These two-in-one models are necessarily luxuriously long, joining as they do two furs at the back of the neck, which is in keeping with the trend toward heavily furred effects for fall and winter.

In neckpieces there is also a marked tendency to wear sable. This fur, by the way, is receiving marked attention in the styling of garments of distinction.

Flat-fur coats richly collared and cuffed with fox are conspicuous, present in advance style showings.

Weary, discouraged and sick?
I'll tell you the loveliest game in the world—
Do something for somebody quick.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

Peas are one of our valuable protein foods and when served will take the place of meat.

Green Pea Soup.

Rub a can of green peas through a sieve; a pint will be sufficient for an ordinary family. Season to taste with salt and pepper and add a tablespoonful of scraped onion, or cook a small onion minced in a little fat; add to this one tablespoonful of flour and a pint of stock or water; use the stock on the peas with water. Cook five minutes, add the puree of peas, heat all together and serve with croutons or fingers of toasted bread.

Sour Cream Slaw

Shred cabbage very fine, plunge into cold water until crisp, drain and cover with a cupful of thick sour cream heated and added to two well-beaten eggs. Add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of cayenne. Cover the drained cabbage with the hot sauce and serve.

Cabbage Salad.

Shred very fine one small firm head of cabbage, add one-half cupful of chopped almonds which have been blanched and four or five ripe bananas finely cut; mix with one cupful of sour cream; if cream is not very sour add a dash of vinegar. Serve with crackers and cheese.

Different Dried Beef.

Take dried beef, cut into strips with scissors and fry in a tablespoonful of butter. Place on a hot platter and surround with halved and quartered bananas also fried, long enough to become thoroughly hot.

Unusual Dessert

Take a pint can of condensed milk and put into a deep dish, cover with boiling water and keep boiling for two and one-half hours. Remove, cool and slip out the contents by cutting the can carefully. Slice and serve well chilled with a cherry on top. Several cans may be cooked at once and opened when needed. This will serve four to six persons and has a flavor much like maple.

Sour Cream Icing

Take two-thirds of a cupful of sour cream, add two cupfuls of granulated sugar, and boil gently until it threads. Cool until tepid, add a teaspoonful of orange extract and beat until creamy. Spread on the cake, or use as filling.

PERSONALITY COMBINED WITH HOME COOKING

The Wide Popularity Enjoyed by the Gray Moon Tea Room Proves This a Good Policy.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

Columbus is distinctly a well-fed city. It is blessed with a large number of excellent restaurants, from the most elaborate to the one-arm variety. One can easily find a place to suit any taste. Included in this array are some that have a charm all their own. They can best be described as being distinctive and individual. This reputation for being "just a little different" comes from the fact that they are operated along entirely different lines from those of the average eating place. Illustrating this class it would be hard to find a better example than the Gray Moon Tea Room at 1483 East Long Street.

Two things, perhaps, more than anything else have brought about its success and wide popularity. One is that is conducted upon the idea that people tire less quickly of home-cooking than any other kind. The other, that there is still room for personality and individual service in business. Both of these beliefs are interwoven in every detail of the enterprise. Here the patron is served much in the same manner as an honored guest would be served in one's own home. Just as the preparation of every meal is of importance, so is its serving. And as you look at the tasteful surroundings, the inviting tables, the exquisite cleanliness, all radiating hospitality and cheer, it seems the most natural thing in the world that the food here should be wholesome and delicious, and somehow different from any other—and so it is, because it is really home-cooking.

There is an air of charm, cheerfulness and self respect about the Gray Moon Tea Room that gives it the atmosphere of a home. The whole place breathes personality and intimacy. A little touch here to take away the monotony, a slight variation there to make it more attractive, and a little change here to lessen "the same old-thing impression," all goes to show that the effort to please its patrons is unceasing. It probably explains, too, why people so often comment upon its individuality, and say the place helps them forget the helter and skelter of a busy world. Without question there are many who dine here for this very reason. When it comes to bridge parties, there is no place that enjoys a wider vogue.

In this day of chain stores, standardized products and ready-made service one finds a lunch, afternoon tea or dinner here very refreshing to say the least. One cannot help but enjoy the entire lack of commercial spirit. And the total absence of big business methods and formulas only serves to emphasize that the place is different beyond a doubt.

Strong characters bring their own environment up to their own ideas, and so Mrs. Alto Sniff and Miss Josephine Grove, the owners, accustomed to refinement have made the Gray Moon Tea Room a truly delightful place in which to dine. And by so doing, have not only achieved success for themselves, but won for this establishment a leading position among this city's most distinctive dining places.

Betty! How they flocked about her, these men! She was like a whirlpool, drawing every one toward her, and quite as unconscious of her power as any real whirlpool. Nancy had learned a stupendous fact, that the great in soul are always simple and genuine. And this lovely girl at her side was totally free of artifice.

"Betty, you baffle me," Nancy said one night. "Sometimes I think I know you; then I'm sure I don't."

"How—why?"

"You are so beautiful that I find myself watching you constantly. And I can't get away from the idea that you are watching or waiting for something or someone. The eager way in which you greet new men! I thought at first it was one of those little tricks women use to trap men's interest. But not you. I have noticed that after you've talked a little while with a new man you leave him utterly bewildered by your sudden lack of interest."

"And so you have noticed! I wonder if others have? Nancy, have you ever been in love?"—rather intensely.

"I don't know, Betty. There is a young man in Bannister I'm very fond of. I'm afraid I am fonder than it is wise to be, since no act or word of of his has ever carried him over the boundary line of friendship. He's the queerest boy! Merry and whimsical and shrewd; but sometimes I sense precipices in his soul, depths that I cannot see into. Father says he is the finest young man he ever met. But there! I'm not in love that I know of. It may happen, but I'm not going to let go until he gives me the right to."

Betty stood up. She swept a hand across her eyes. "Oh, I must tell someone, or go mad! I dare not tell daddy. Besides, he would not understand. He doesn't believe in 'Brushwood Boys.'" Betty suddenly dropped to her knees and seized the bewildered Nancy's hands. "Romance! Nancy, do I look like the kind—am I the kind—for any man to play with? I mean, is it right that any man should hurt and mock me when I have wittingly harmed no one? It isn't fair, it isn't fair! Love! As if one could say howdy-do to it and then good-bye!"

"Betty, whatever has happened? I just knew that something was wrong, but there must be some mistake. No man would hurt and mock you intentionally."

Betty turned and sat on her heels, staring into the crumbling embers. She drew one of Nancy's hands down across her shoulders and held it tightly.

"Letters!—from the sky, the clouds, the stars, burning with fire. Oh, he must have loved me! He couldn't have written like that else. The first was beautifully written, full of poetry and music . . . and love. I read it and threw it into the empty grate. But I went back and recovered it. There was a phrase that kept singing through my head, and I wanted to see if I had interpreted it correctly. Well, I put the letter away."

Nancy laid her free hand on the beautiful hair and stroked it.

"Of course I wondered who and what he was. I had nearly forgotten the letter—a month later—when the second one came, quite as wonderful as the first, which I resurrected for comparison. They were absolutely unlike except in theme. That was love. No answer was expected, for here was neither name nor address. A month later the third letter came. And then I began to wait for them, eager and thrilled. For nearly three years they came, Paris, London, Cairo, Brest, there was never any forwarding marks upon the envelopes. Some one who knew where I was, where I was going. That alone fascinated me!"

"From where were they mailed?"

"Always from New York. I carried an autograph album about and lots of young men have written their names in this album. But I never found the one handwriting I was in search of."

"But it would be easy to disguise that!"

"I made them write a paragraph with three or four sentances—quotations. It wasn't the writing! It was the style of punctuation by which they ended a sentance."

"I don't understand."

"I was hunting for a curious period —a little x instead of dot, such as you and I make. A man might change the style of his stroke, but habit would lure him into making that odd little period, so I believed."

"And you never found it?"

"No. There was always a postscript to these letters. 'Some day I shall come to you.' Five month ago the letters ceased to come. What has happened? Is he dead? If alive, why doesn't he come to me? Nancy, I'm much afraid."

"Of what?"

"That he has created in my heart something that will always be there."

"Love," whispered Nancy.

"I don't know what it is, but it is beginning to hurt dreadfully. At first, when I got a letter, it made me curiously happy. I'd sit down at the piano and sing happy songs. Now I can't play anything but sad ones. What is happening to me? Whatever can it mean? I'm afraid."

"He may be ill."

"He would have found some way of notifying me."

"He might be too old and afraid to come."

"Oh, Nancy, he is young—like I am! I know it. But if I could only stamp out the thought of him, free myself. I am watching and waiting and searching. I am always straining my ears for some sign. He doesn't come. And now he writes no more. Where and under what circumstances did he first see me? Have I really met him? Do I know him? What impelled him to write like that to me? No man would make sport of me. My brain is in a turmoil. I would have disobeyed father and remained in France but for the hope that if I came home I might meet this strange and unusual man. Nancy, I am hurt."

"Burn the letters," said Nancy, indignantly. "It is going back to them that holds you. Burn them. Cut the Gordian knot."

"I've tried . . . and I can't!"

CHAPTER IV

An Encounter.

On the sunny side of a huge boulder, on the top of a rusty green hill, sat a man with a small book on his knees. He wore a gray flannel shirt, tieless; a pair of brown corduroy trousers, much the worse for wear; and a pair of ugly russet walking boots.

Eastward, several church spires were visible in the late September haze. There lay the city of Bannister. Nature, hating the ugly, hid it as well as she could. Farther east, a drab smudge, which seemed to shut off the world beyond.

Whenever the man's gaze went back to his book, his expression was one of contentment. Whenever this gaze shifted toward the spires, an ironical smile twisted up the corners of his lips. He frowned, for they were after him down there. Nearly all the local advertising had fallen away, the stockholders were exhibiting signs of restiveness; and that signified that Mansfield or his agents had approached them.

The Sandman Story
By Martha Martin

AT THE MUSEUM

"One story has reminded me of an other," commenced the Sandman "The other day in a big museum where all sorts of old and quaint things are to be seen, there was a special exhibition of dolls and toys.

"An exhibition, as you know, is something put on view for us to see An exhibition of pigs at a county fair means that there are pigs being exhibited or being shown.

"Or there may be an exhibition of drawings from the drawing class in school.

"But this exhibition was of old, old toys and dolls.

"About 4,000 years ago there lived an important and noble gentleman who thought it would be interesting to have everything he owned copied into a toy.

"So the boat that he went forth a-sailing in was copied. The animals he owned were all copied into little toys, too; so were his children and all the things that were a part of his life, too.

"Every day he would watch his cattle go by and he had a toy made showing himself sitting and gazing upon the cattle as they went by—just such a toy as you will see today of a whole circus, only more interesting.

"And these toys seemed more amazing and were so beautifully made.

"When I say that he had his children copied into toys I mean that instead of having their pictures taken as people would do these days he had little toys made which looked just like his children.

"Just as though I had some toy maker come and make a little figure to look exactly like Nick or exactly like Nancy—and yet it would be a toy doll!

"And then he had a toy copy made of the kitchen boat that used to go alongside the boat he was in and at mealtime it would come up closer and the kitchen workers would pass over the meals. All of this was copied in toys.

"There were toy copies made of both boats, you see, when close together and of the figures in the boats.

Wonderful Toys, These Were, of Many, Many Years Ago.

"Oh, wonderful toys these were of so many, many, many years ago, and for a great, great many years these treasures were hidden in the ground.

"When I saw these toys I thought at once of taking you both to see them soon, and we'll go, just as soon as ever we can."

Both the children were delighted for they wanted to see just how these old, old toys were made.

"And as I said," the Sandman continued, "the story I had to tell you of the dolls and toys reminded me of the little girl who was sick.

"She had been sick for quite a long time. And her dolly felt so badly that she, too, had been sick. She had been in the bed with her dear little mother and she had been very quiet and very still as she did not want to disturb her mother.

"And then, of course, she did not feel well herself. Oh, no, she didn't feel well when her darling little mother wasn't well.

"But one day her mother began to feel much better and the doctor said: 'She is so much better she can sit out in the sun today.'

"So they took her out in the sunshine and she sat in a little chair, feeling quite weak, but oh, ever and ever so much better.

"And beside her sat her dolly, enjoying the sunshine, too. For just as soon as her mother had felt better she had felt suddenly so much better, too.

"So together they had been sick and together they got well, and Mr. Sun did his work, never fear, both for the little girl and for her beloved dolly.

"And he smiled more brightly each day then ever as he saw the strength come back to his nice little friend whom he had missed sadly when she had been ill.

"For she had always been very fond of Mr. Sun, and he knew it, too!"

A HOME-MADE HAIR DRYER

Here is one of the quickest and at the same time the most beneficial ways of drying the hair at home.

With a 75 or 100-watt nitrogen lamp tied or held to the handle of a clean, shiny dipper for a reflector, enough heat is concentrated to quickly dry the heavy or light head of hair.

There is much more benefit from the heat of a lamp to the head than the heat of a radiator or air dryer. The prominent hospitals of the country apply 1,000-watt lamps to operation incisions to promote a quicker replenishment of red-and-white cells of the blood for the purpose of healing. The expensive sanitarium applies these light rays to its rheumatic patients with marked success. It is not the heat alone which cures, but the powerful force of the light rays themselves which have a deep penetration.

Light rays have been found to have a marked stimulating effect on the scalp, lessening dandruff and toning up the roots of the hair to prevent further falling.

Very gentle massage given to the scalp at the point where the rays are being applied is a great aid to the tonic effect.

HILL CREST BAPTIST CHURCH

(BROAD STREET AND ELDON AVENUE)

ANNOUNCES ITS NEW PROGRAM

9:30 A. M. Morning Worship and Bible School Combined 9:30 A. M.

For years thousands of people have longed for something that was more convenient. They have wanted a church program where the entire family came together for divine worship: heard the preaching of God's Word; and then retired quietly for a few minutes of intensive study of the same. The Hill Crest Baptist Church is happy to announce that it has this program you have been wishing for! Next Sunday morning at 9:30 the entire Bible School and Morning Worship Congregation will assemble for one Big Service together. The program will be so arranged as to suit both young and old. There will be no preaching at 10:45 as has been the custom, but the Morning Sermon will be delivered at 9:30. Parents are urged to bring the entire family for this BIG UNIFIED Service. Don't worry about the little folk getting "fretty." The Pastor of this church has the unusual ability of preaching to children in such a way that they like it. Remember one BIG CONSOLIDATED SERVICE at 9:30.,

PASTOR J. H. HUGHES WILL PREACH ON:

"ALMIGHTY GOD, AND YOUR BOYS, AND MY GIRLS"

Mr. W. E. Knox and his great choir will furnish special music. This choir is recognized as one of the best in this section of Ohio. Hear them sing: your life will be enriched and your soul uplifted.

6:30 P. M. JUNIOR, INTERMEDIATE & SENIOR UNIONS MEET FOR STUDY 6:30 P. M.

All young people of these various ages not affiliated with other Christian organzations are cordially invited. You will experience fine fellowship and a splendid hour of Bible study and Christian training.

AT SEVEN-THIRTY P. M.

Our great evening service will open at seven-thirty o'clock with a Big Sing led by Mr. W. E. Knox. In addition to the regular choir our Men's Chorus of fifty voices will be on the platform and will have a leading part in the service. There is no music better than the singing of a large number of men. The organization comes from our Men's Bible Class and will please you greatly Sunday evening. The pastor will preach on:

"THE MAN, THE WOMAN, AND THE WEDDING RING"

JUST THE SERMON YOU HAVE BEEN WANTING TO HEAR. DON'T MISS IT. WORTH MUCH TO YOU.

The "event" of 50 targets was shot by 20 shooters. A smoked ham and 8 bags of sugar were distributed for the several high scores of this event. NEW SERVICES BIG SUCCESS

Plan Inaugurated by Rev. Hughes Draws Big Attendance at Hillcrest.

Last Sunday Rev. J. H. Hughes inaugurated a new policy at the Hillcrest Baptist church, which may be tried in the future by other churches and revolutionize church and Sunday school attendance.

Instead of having the Sunday school services at the former hour and the church services following the order was reversed, and church services began at 9:30 and Sunday school at 10:30, and all were dismissed at 11:30.

Rev. Hughes states that the church auditorium was packed early last Sunday for the regular morning worship and the same good attendance was present for the Sunday school. He believes all were well satisfied with the results of the first meeting and the new plan is of great benefit to the church. The same plan will be followed from now on, as long as the system is proving so satisfactory.

Next Sunday is Rally Day at Hillcrest church. Special services and special programs have been planned. Teachers and members of the classes are expecting a very large attendance. The preaching services will begin at 9:30 and they will have Sunday school following these services.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

BABY'S FIST

If a baby generally keeps its hands open it is a sign that it will grow up to be a generous man; but if it has a habit of closing its fist it is a sign that it will grow up to be avaricious and a money-getter. This is a common superstition all over the country. It arises, of course, from a natural association of ideas. We open our hand to give money but we close our fist to grasp and retain. Our expressions of "open-handedness" and "close-fistedness" are examples of how natural is the association in the mind between these manual gestures and the mental characteristics with which we connect them. The association, being natural, is also primitive in conception, and while we only use the expressions of open-handedness and close-fistedness in a metaphorical way, to the ancients they were more than a metaphor. For with them what was associated in thought was associated in reality. We say in a vague way that, "In the child is the future man," but to the ancients in the child was the future man in a very literal sense, and, applying their doctrine of cause and effect, their idea that what was associated in thought was connected in reality, when the baby doubled up his little fist because of the pains of wind colic they saw a prognostic of his future—he would be an avaricious man. And that is what many thousands of people of otherwise ordinary intelligence see today in the same gesture.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

MOTHER AND BABIES

In the great war this country lost 34,625 killed in action, 215,489 wounded, and 13,005 who died of wounds. That was a record for 19 months of warfare.

In the same time the record shows that more mothers died from childbirth than there were fighting men killed, and many more babies died than there were soldiers and sailors wounded.

During the war the infantile birth rate went down in the country and the child death rate went up.

During the years that Belgium was being war-wrecked and torn to pieces the birth rate went up and the infant death rate decreased.

The reason for this difference is that this country gave no special attention to the care of infant life, while Belgium established 700 maternity centers where mothers and their little babies are assured the kind of care and attention that give them the highest possible chance in the fight for health and life.

The United States is perhaps of all the world the most intense in its study of ways and means for the saving of minutes and dollars. Every year millions of dollars' worth of equipment is junked because some genius has found a better or cheaper way of doing the job.

Yet we placidly continue to throw away approximately 300,000 lives a year because nobody seems to be enough interested in the conservation of mothers and their offsprings to better our horrible record of suffering and death.

Every baby is a potential man or woman. Under proper conditions he would grow up to be worth in actual dollars to the community and his family from $20,000 upward.

Is it good sense, or good economy even, to let that baby die just from lack of care?

Would not a dollar invested in his rearing, in making a strong, healthy man of him insure pretty good returns?

Isn't it foolish to let him die by the thousand when he could just as well be saved?

And as for the mothers, if this country owes anything to anybody it owes to the mothers.

Every suffering mother is a disgrace.

Every mother that needlessly dies in giving birth to a new citizen is a reflection on the charity, decency and citizenship of every other dweller in this country.

Our sense of what is respectable should lead us to provide for the mothers.

Our judgment as to what is profitable, if no better emotion urges us, should lead us to make life and saith more certain for the children.

ONLY CUSTOM MADE "CLOTHES MAKE THE MAN"

Schaefer and Son, Well-Known Tailors, Have Done Much to Advance the Standards of Fine Tailoring in Columbus, and at the Same Time Have Won a Position of Leadership in the Business.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

The old saying that "Clothes Make the Man," is truer today than ever before. The world nowadays seldom looks up a man, it simply looks him over and forms its judgment on what it sees. Appearance is not all, of course. Many men look like a million dollars who are not worth ten cents. Even so, there is no denying that the well-dressed man has a long running start over the man who gives little or no heed to his personal appearance. Neither is there any denying that this is the day of custom tailoring. No man can truly expect to give the impression of prosperity dressed in ready-to-wear clothes, which are turned out in thousand lots and duplicated on every street corner. Only custom built clothes invests a man with that air of distinction and individuality, and gives him the feeling that he is ready for any opportunity.

And when it comes to making clothes that not only look better, but wear better, there is no firm in Columbus which takes higher rank than Schaefer and Son, at 188 S. High St. Their reputation in the tailoring line has become so well known to the public that it draws them business from every part of the city. Keeping fully in touch with the progress and trend of the times, and earnestly striving to see that each and every customer is treated fairly and squarely, they have not only won a large following, but the confidence and loyalty of that following. Many of their first customers are still their regular patrons. And hardly a week passes that does not bring to their door some patron who has been sent by an old customer.

Individuality and excellence are the elements that have made the name of "Schaefer" outstanding in the realm of custom tailoring. Individuality of a kind that makes the fit, the style, the workmanship of a suit or overcoat noticeable wherever it happens to be. And excellence of a kind that puts in them masterful needlecraft and lasting quality. And as a result, no garment tailored in this establishment ever loses its shape. On the contrary, it has a staying power for shape endurance. The coat collar on a new suit lies snug, and it stays that way throughout the life-time of the garment, for the reason that it is hand manipulated by experts, who know how to put exactitude and staying power wherever they are essential to service and satisfaction. Just as much pains are taken with the shoulders, the pockets, the hang of the trousers. Thus there are no wrinkles in the back, no bulge in the pockets or bag in the trousers. And the same fine workmanship that goes into the suit, goes into the overcoat or any other garment tailored here.

Schaefer and Son's establishment is modern in every respect, and well adapted to the needs of the tailoring business. A comprehensive line of woolens from the best foreign looms is always on display here. And while there are variations in quality, this is one place where there is never any variation from it. In the selection of the fabrics Schaefer and Son have shown again that they are master tailors in fact as well as in name. Rich in texture and exclusive in both design and color, they prove that careful buying—not the tape measure—is really the first step taken here in tailoring a suit or overcoat.

Schaefer and Son was established over 37 years ago, and have been located at their present address for the past 33 years—a record enjoyed by few Columbus concerns, and one which proves in no uncertain way what quality merchandise and fair prices will accomplish in building up and popularizing a business.

Dr. Stuart J. The ultra-violet rays either from "sunlight" lamps or in sunlight itself, are used to cure children of rickets. Also certain foods including milk, which have been exposed to ultra-violet rays, are used to bring about cures in cases of rickets. Dr. Cowell suggests that "during the darker season cows whose milk is to be used for the food of sickly children should be exposed regularly to some form of ultra-violet light.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"TO SMELL A RAT"

This admittedly inelegant phrase, which is frequently heard nevertheless, in everyday speech, had its origin in a circumstance which, fortunately, is very rare in this day of enlightenment and official regulation of sanitation and home-building.

The expression is a product of older times, when the dog known as a rat ter was an adjunct of almost every household, so infested were contemporary homes with rats. And to "smell a rat" was by no means the unusual and horrifying experience that it would be today.

It is easily comprehensible, then, that the phrase should have come into use in the figurative significance of sensing something wrong or having one's suspicions aroused. An early use of the words in this sense is found in Samuel Butler's "Hudibras," published first in 1663.

Evidence of a Healthy Community Spirit

Rarest of all human qualities, the capacity for friendship, mutual respect and cordial understanding, is the standard by which a neighborhood is judged.

Hilltop people have exhibited a community spirit which has made of West Columbus a thriving, attractive home district.

It is this spirit, even more than the physical advantages of Broadview, its attractive streets, beautiful homes, schools and churches and shops, which makes this residence district one of the finest in Columbus.

BROADVIEW

EVERY CITY CONVENIENCE

CITIZENS BANK BUILDING

GAY WAISTCOATS ENLIVFN SUITS OF STURDY TWEED

Seeking enlightenment as to fall suit trends? Well, here is a "last word" model which speaks for itself in its mannish tweed fabric, its short skirt with its adroit plaits at one side and its swagger-cut coat. It is Marion Nixon, she who holds forth in movieloom to the delight of vast audiences, who has stepped into the autumn picture clad as you see.

With this eminently correct and "easy-to-look-at" suit, Miss Nixon wears a ravishing red suede vest. It ones the whole outfit. A bit of the red suede escapes from the vest to do duty as a boutonniere and on the pocket and collar as a "note of color." A sports felt hat of tan, with matching shoes and bag give a perfect finesse to this ensemble.

The sturdy rough tweed suits now so fashionable are directly in contrast to the elaboration movement of woman's costume which marks this season. For that reason they achieve a more than usual distinctiveness. As to length of skirts, this depends whether one is considering the subject from the American or Paris standpoint. French couturiers are inclined to somewhat longer lengths, but women here, especially the flapper age, are proving quite defiant, many of them insisting on continuing a display of knees. Of course Paris usually wins in the finals, but just now brevity is the rule, especially for the youthful style enthusiasts in America.

Another item of interest—the smartest suits have not an inch of fur in sight as actual trimming, this because of the vogue for the separate fur piece. Every one who can afford it is going to own a beige or platinum fox fur scarf this fall.

Seems as if browns are to have their inning this season, lovely chestnut shades, cocoa, deep leaf tones and the like, which of course establishes the color trend for novelty cloth suits.

More formal type suits appear in black and also in leafy-colored broadcloths, but it is the sports suit which is the "nifty" thing for general wear.

KEEPING STEP WITH THE TIMES

As the Community's Plumbing and Heating Needs Has Grown So Have Donley Bros. Broadened Their Services, Enlarged Their Facilities and Widened Their Scope of Activities.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In all lines of trade pursuits may be found those who attain to positions of pre-eminence and leadership by sheer force of merit, ability, and enterprising qualities, and a noteworthy illustration of this observation is to be found in the success of Donley Bros., well-known plumbing and heating engineers at 2066 Sullivant Ave.

In the pioneer days of the country people paid little attention to sanitation, but as the population increased and civilization advanced the sanitary engineer became more and more a factor in the advancement of health conditions and comforts of society. Today his work is recognized as one of the strongest links in the chain of progression. No craftsman is more important than he who puts into a building its plumbing and heating equipment which, more than anything else, safeguards comfort and health. No craftsman has greater play for intelligence and technical knowledge; no other has better opportunity to serve the public. Not only have Donley Bros. taken advantage of the opportunity, but made every effort to live up to their business obligations to the public. And that they have succeeded there can be no question. The rapid growth of their business and the position of trust and reliability that they hold in the community are evidences of this. Further evidence is to be found in their ability to hold their customers.

From the smallest repair job in the home to the planning and installation of complete plumbing and heating system in big buildings, Donley Bros. have won the confidence and good will of their patrons. No matter what kind of job it may be the same high standard of workmanship which they have set for their business is the unvarying rule. A policy which has resulted in securing for them the contracts on many of this community's finest buildings.

In all their work they consider the needs of their patrons, and apply the highest technical knowledge and experience. Thus from the home owner to the big contractor they are sure to design a system right in line with the requirements. And all their work is based on the laws of sanitation, that have had such a great influence in lengthening the average life.

In the store they carry a most complete stock—all items of the plumbing and heating line at a wide range of prices. Each article is a standardized brand, and is sold with not only their guarantee back of it, but the manufacturer's as well. Their experience in buying and their knowledge of market conditions enables them to merchandise their stock at the lowest price level, thus increasing their service to the public.

Among the people of this section Donley Bros. have won a reputation for fine workmanship, whether the job is a simple repair of a single pipe or the most intricate working out of the engineer's plans and specifications. Their record has kept pace with the rapid progress made in the plumbing and heating industry. From a small beginning their business has grown to a point where mention of a big building job is almost sure to include mention of their name. Yet they have not neglected the smaller jobs, the service to private homes. In fact, the repair department is a leading feature of their business and ranks with the best in the city. The workmen are highly skilled, and render a service both prompt and efficient.

It is merely giving credit where credit is due to say that Donley Bros. have met with success by honestly deserving it.

Radio will probably be used to determine whether the continents of the earth are constantly drifting. Dr. Alfred Wegener, of Austria, thinks that this theory may be the explanation of the fact that members of the same species of modern animals and prehistoric fossils are found in such widely separated areas of the earth. Observations are being made at seventy longitudinal stations, and within five or ten years "a drift more than a small fraction of a foot per year" would be detected if there were any.

RAISING AN OLD ART TO A NEW STANDARD OF PERFECTION

By Developing Its Baking to a New High Level Clark's Bakery Has Won a Position of Undisputed Leadership in Its Line and a Wide Popularity for Its Products.

(C) By JACK PHILLIPS

In every line of business in every city there are always to be found firms which, because of fair dealing, progressive ideas, modern equipment and superior service lead in their particular line, and among such concerns in Columbus Clark's Bakery at 1550 N. High St., is a notable example. Not only has this company won for itself a position of undisputed pre-eminence in its line, but has raised one of the oldest arts to an almost unprecedented high level in the baking business; and by so doing, has made its name a mark of sterling in the territory in which its products are sold.

As is well-known, this concern is the home of Clark's Bread. Its flavor, purity and wholesomeness has not alone made it one of the largest selling loaves in this county, but the standard of comparison wherever it is used. Although tests show that this bread is more nutritious than meat, yet it costs less than one-third as much. It is safe to assert that it equals in taste and body building qualities "the bread that mother used to make."

The plant of Clark's Bakery is a model of efficiency and up-to-date methods. It is equipped with the very latest and improved machinery, and its many windows fill the place with fresh air and sunlight. In fact a trip through the plant is both interesting and instructive. To the housewife, especially, it immediately brings the realization that home baking is simply a waste of time, money and energy. Everything in the place is scrupulously clean. No device which would improve its products is lacking. And every sanitary regulation which makes for purity is rigidly enforced. Few baking products, if any, are manufactured more carefully and scientifically than those of Clark's Bakery.

Only the best obtainable materials and most wholesome ingredients are used by this concern. A policy which has been followed from the beginning, and one that has helped in a big way to make the name of Clark's Bread a household by-word in so many homes in this community. Another thing that gives this bread a flavor, texture and food value that is unequaled is the fact that only expert bakers prepare and mix the different ingredients, and that it is done under the most sanitary conditions possible. As an additional safeguard to guarantee the public that it will get the finest bread that can be baked, every loaf is examined and tested in every way by a master baker before it leaves the plant.

Messrs. John S. and Thos. W. Clark, heads of the firm, have always been allied with all those propositions which promise to advance the quality and elevate the standards of baking, and are often found taking an active part in efforts to bring about this end.

In recent years the baking industry has made rapid strides in methods, in products and in service. It is to Clark's Bakery, and other firms of like character, that much credit is due for the progress that has been made

The Man with Three Names

by Harold MacGrath

COPYRIGHT BY THE BELL SYNDICATE INC.

His thought went to his mother. What a thoroughbred she was, to stick to him on this crazy adventure, to follow his fortunes, when she might have remained in the peace and seclusion of the villa up Fiesole way, with that riot of roses in the springtime and the sun on the red roofs of Florence! Cathewe, her maiden name; and to be forced to prefix it with Mrs. in order to share his fortunes!

There came an interruption—the whine of an automobile. A plague of them; a man had to climb the Matterhorn these days to find solitude.

"Sandy!" cried a woman's voice from the far side of the boulder. "Sandy, come here! . . . Sandy!"

The automobile whizzed by. Cathewe recovered his book and stood up resentfully. But this resentment died swiftly.

On the slope just beyond the ditch, where he had been flung, lay an Airedale, motionless. Kneeling beside him was Betty Mansfield, her hands clenched against her bosom, her eyes

"My dog! My friend and comrade!"

Cathewe dropped his book, ran across, looked at the dog for a moment or two, then picked him up tenderly and carried him back to the sunny side of the boulder, where there was a patch of warm clover. The girl followed, dumbly. Not a word was spoken until Cathewe put his hand over the dog's heart.

"Is—is he dead?" she whispered.

"No." His hands roved hither and yon over the dog's body. "We'll wait a minute. I can't find any breaks. Probably stunned."

"My poor Sandy!"

A moment later Cathewe received a slight but pleasurable shock. He had reached for the dog's nose the same instant as she, and their hands touched. A great bitterness swept over him, for the aftermath of that pleasurable shock was the knowledge that he still cared.

A shudder ran over the Airedale; and presently the stump of his tail began to beat the turf, feebly.

"Sandy?"—joyously.

"He's all right," said Cathewe confidently. "Simply knocked out. He's in luck. It's mighty hard to keep a dog these days; and yet I can't honestly blame the motorists. The animals will run at the cars. This is a particularly fine breed. Never saw anything like him around these parts. Big and strong enough to tackle bear." He began to pat the broad head. And the wag of the tail became more energetic.

The girl on her part began to observe. First, the hand, which was lean and brown and well kept. The sleeve of the shirt, however was frayed at the cuff. The shirt also lacked the top button, and there was a sunburned patch at the base of the throat. Brown corduroys, such as Italian roadmenders wore; and the hems were tucked into dusty russet half-boots. (As a matter of fact, Cathewe kept these togs in the office, where he could don them whenever the lure of the highway called, which was every day when the weather was good.) The sight of his face, however, had the effect of a blow. Where had she seen this handsome, vigorous face before? Somewhere; she was positive of that. Fine, sensitive gray eyes and a mouth which would have been called beautiful in a woman. And above this mouth she saw the replica of her father's nose. Then, from the corner of her eye, she saw the book. Jean Fabre, in the original! The face and hands of an artist, the clothes of a day-laborer, and a volume of Fabre on insects! She almost forgot the dog.

"Sandy is all right. Eh, old top?" Cathewe held out his hand.

The dog eyed the hand, quizzically, and approached. He permitted the strange hand to stroke his head, and his tail wagged a little.

"Well!" said Betty, getting up. "Sandy never permits strangers to touch him."

"But all dogs know me," said Cathewe, picking up his book. "Fine comrades, aren't they? I had a little dog a while gone. He was just plain dog. But that didn't matter. We understood each other at once."

Of all the unusual men! was her thought. What a beautiful head! Certainly she had seen it before. But where? She must find out who he was. No man so old as this one could wander about Baedeker without being known.

"Pardon, but have I ever met you before?" she asked suddenly.

The Sandman Story

by Martha Martin

SNAKES GO TO SLEEP

"The keeper says we're very quick," said Bobby Blacksnake.

"The keeper says we're very quick, too," says Roland Rattlesnake.

"The keeper says that all snakes are quick," said Clement Copperhead. "He says that, hiss, hiss, he says that."

"Well, if we are free and not in the zoo, I suppose we would be thinking about going to sleep soon," said Bobby.

"Yes," said Roland, "I've heard the visitors here at the zoo telling of the sharp cold weather that is coming on apace."

"What do you mean when you say that the sharp, cold weather is coming on apace?" asked Bobby.

"You know what sharp, cold weather is, don't you?" asked Roland.

"Yes, hiss, hiss," said Bobby, "of course I know what it is."

"Then it is the word apace that bothers you, is it?" asked Roland.

"That is the bothersome word," said Bobby.

"When I said that the sharp, cold weather was coming on apace, or rather, when I said that the people who have been coming to the zoo lately, have said so, I meant and they meant or they meant and I meant whichever way you want to put it!) that it was coming on quickly.

"When the sharp, cold weather comes on apace it comes on with a gaudy rush and big cold strides and enormous cold steps."

"Ah, I see, hiss, hiss," said Bobby.

"They never find snakes wandering away from their dens when it is autumn time. When the spring has come and we're just awakening, we're thinking about leaving—but we're still about the dens," said Roland.

"True, true," said Clement, "every word you hiss is quite, quite true."

"I am as quick as a snake could be," said Roland.

"Well, not quite as quick as a snake could be," said Bobby, "for, after all,

"We Don't Sing and We Don't Dance," Said Roland.

you were caught and brought to the zoo."

"So were you," said Roland.

"So were all of us, for that matter," said Clement.

"It is really funny, it is really a joke, hiss, hiss," laughed Roland as he squirmed about, "how we have all talked about our quickness."

"Why?" asked Bobby.

"Well, it is quite true that none of us were so quick that we weren't caught and brought here to the zoo," Roland hissed, and wrigged with amusement.

"Of course," said Bobby, "that is true, but then we are naturally very quick, only the keeper and his friends who caught us for the zoo were even quicker. We led them a good song and dance, though."

"We don't sing and we don't dance," said Roland.

"But we hiss and we wriggle, and it's about the same," said Bobby.

"Yes, we're quick but the keeper of this zoo was quicker than any of us," Bobby laughed. "Some of our relatives were not caught.

"They went wandering off in the parts where they did not think they would see many people. They're none too fond of people."

"People are none too fond of them," said Clement. "I've heard our keeper say that he has gone and taken all the snakes away from a certain den in the neighborhood because the people have written frightened letters to him.

"People are none too fond of any of us. But every spring the keepers of the zoo come for members of our family.

"Yes, and I'm glad we're here; we've been very happy here. If we had been free we might have been killed. The keepers catch us and keep us with care and kindness and feed us well and give us warmth.

"Oh, snakes are not very popular. It is nice to be in a zoo where the keepers think you're nice."

"And," said Roland, "it is wonderful to hear the beauty of the Rattlers praised by our special owner and keeper. Ah, there is a man who appreciates Rattlesnake beauty and the gorgeous colors we wear."

THE MAN WITH THREE NAMES

"I dare say you have seen me from your car."

"Probably that is it. Fabre. You are reading him in the original?"

"Good mental exercise."

"I suppose the ant's life must be very interesting to you."

"Indeed, all life is interesting. Come along. I will show you an ant city, a Canton of the insect world."

Presently the philosopher came to a broad, flat stone. Very carefully he put his fingers under the edge and with a quick heave sent the stone over. The cavity was aswarm with ants. Battalions and regiments scurried about.

She gazed fascinated at the black atoms. They were taking hold of the eggs and drawing them rapidly into innumerable subways.

Ostensibly Betty was interested in the new ant city, but her eyes did not convey any memorable impressions to her brain; that was busy with conjecture. A gentleman of her own sort, because he was courteous and unembarrassed. Apparently he knew that she was Dunleigh Mansfield's daughter, and was not in the least awed by the fact. That rather pleased her.

He did not introduce himself, which was another good sign. It left her free to recognize him the next time they met or pass him by. She was quite confident that he was not a native of Bannister. An out-of-doors man and a scholar; the shabby clothes now fitted into the scheme of things. Men did not pursue their studies in natural history, dressed as for a tea party. Who and what was he?

Nancy Maddox would know, for Nancy knew everybody in Bannister. He would be very easy to describe. Doubtless she would be meeting him during the winter. She still retained the vague impression, however, that she had seen him before, and not in Bannister.

"Thank you," he heard Betty say. "It has been very interesting. I have read Maeterlinck on the bee, but Fabre is an undiscovered country. Come, Sandy; we must be going."

There was an impulse to offer her hand to this unusual young man, but she smothered it. She turned back toward the highway, the dog leaping and barking joyously.

"A lucky dog," said Cathewe smiling. "He has defied the law of irresistable force and lives to tell of it. Good afternoon."

He crossed over to his boulder and once more reclined against the sun-warmed granite surface. He waited for a little time, then peered around. Her hat was just vanishing down the drop of the hill. He opened his book—upside down.

"The postern gate!" he murmured.

At half after five Nancy was agreeably surprised by the advent of Betty.

"Nancy, I've had the queerest adventure," began—Betty at once, and rather breathlessly, "No; I don't want any tea. I came for some information. It was so droll and unusual."

And lightly with those Gallic gestures which came so naturally, she re-

"It Has Been Very Interesting."

counted what had taken place on the top of the hill.

"Dressed like a tramp and reads Fabre in the original," mused Nancy. She was about to hazard a guess when the telephone in her father's office rang. "Just a moment, Betty. Telephone. It may be some patient of father's." Once at the instrument she recognized Cathewe's voice.

"Nancy, I've had rather an odd experience; and I'm going to depend upon you to help me out. I've met Mansfield's daughter. Please do not disclose my identity. You understand? I want to avoid her."

"Do you want me to lie, Brand?" Nancy answered.

"Lie? Lord, no! Only, I don't want her to know who I am. I'm sorry. Don't lie on my account. Tell her if you must. Good-by."

Slowly Nancy set the receiver on the hook. She did not hasten back to her guest. Why was her heart heavy with foreboding? At last she returned to the living room.

"Dressed like a tramp," she repeated, "and reads Fabre in the original. It might be one of your father's chemists, Betty."

Nancy hated lies, and she hated herself for telling this one when it was not obligatory in the least. She was a little afraid.

* * * * * * * *

After his interview with Nancy Cathewe went in to his mother.

"Play something before the moon comes in to light up."

"What do you want me to play, sonny?" in a soft, Southern drawl.

"Rachmaninoff's Prelude."

"Then things aren't well with you?" How easy it had become to read the boy's mood by the kind of music he wanted!

She sat on the bench, but she did not begin the Prelude. Instead, she struck the opening bars of Farwell's Norwegian Song, plaintive rather than melancholy. She could dimly see him, his chin in his palm, staring at a pattern in the Chinese rug.

"Better?" she asked softly.

"I am always better when I am with you, mother. Life is an astonishing mess, isn't it? For the innocent as well as for the guilty. I, who have never wittingly harmed anyone or done a mean thing, I must always carry with me the sense of being hunted, the fear of being found out. And I have dragged you into it."

Hobo Convention

Glenwood Epworth Leagues will hold a Hobo Convention at the church Friday evening, beginning at 8 o'clock. All members are requested to attend the convention in full hobo regalia. At this time the queen of the tramps will be elected and the diamond ring presented.

An organ program by Miss Margaret Andrix preceded the wedding ceremony of Miss Helen Donahue to Mr. Theodore J. Tedrick, Wednesday, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Hoge Memorial Presbyterian church, Rev. H. C. Hutchinson officiating. Mrs. George Roberts sang "I Love You" and "At Dawning." "I Love You Truly" was played during the ceremony. The altar of the church was banked with palms, ferns and baskets of pink gladioli. Miss Donahue wore a gown of white satin fashioned with tight bodice. Seed pearls outlined the scalloped, rosepoint lace yoke. A large tulle bow, the center of orange blossoms, at the left of the waist and fell to the bottom of the scalloped bouffant skirt. A wreath of orange blossoms adorned the head and a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley was carried by Miss Donahue. Mrs. Fred W. Clark, matron of honor, was gowned in an orchid georgette dress with a yoke of gold lace with a tulle bow to match on the left shoulder. Her arm bouquet was of yellow roses. Miss Margaret Donahue, as bridesmaid, was attired in green georgette, having a silver lace yoke and tulle bow to match, and her arm bouquet was of pink roses. Both attendants were sisters of the bride. Mr. Tedrick was attended by his brother, Mr. Damon S. Tedrick, of Dayton, Ohio. Guests were ushered by Mr. Fred W. Clark and Mr. Henry C. Whipple. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Donahue, 2849 Sullivant Ave., for relatives and friends, after the ceremony.

ILLEGAL TAX IS CHARGED

Insight into Tax Situation Given at Sewer Relief Meeting.

Bond issues, taxes and sewer relief were attacked in one of the driest meetings yet held by the Hilltop Association for Permanent Sewer Relief, last Friday night at the K. of P. hall, on Burgess avenue.

"Can you borrow yourself out of debt?" asked A. D. Davis, local attorney and ex-probate judge. This is Mr. Davis' summary in answer to the question "Why are bond issues necessary." He states that in issuing bonds the people are not paying their debt as they go but are borrowing as they go and accumulating a greater indebtedness from year to year with no prospects of paying it off. He points out the fact that in 1910 the bonded indebtedness of the state of Ohio was 187 million dollars and today it is one billion dollars. This is an increase of 813 million in a period of 17 years or 4½ times greater than it was in all the 115 years previous.

Who pays for the bonds? Mr. Davis answeres this by showing where the fellow on the tax duplicate pays off the bonds and the bond holder has the advantage of depositing his bonds in a safety deposit vault and escaping the tax ticket.

"Not a penny of the taxes paid into the treasury of Ohio each year is legal or constitutional," says Mr. Davis. "There is an excess of 10 billion dollars worth of taxable property in this state that is not listed on the tax duplicate. Our grand tax duplicate is now about 13 billion and 2 per cent of this amount is adequate to take care of the budgets. This big figure would make the taxes of each person just half of the present figure if all the taxes were collected."
